HOPKINS PLACES P W A AND RELIEF BILL TWO BILLION ABOVE ESTIMATE

Acting Budget Director Bell Tells House Sub-Committee Deficit for Year Starting July 1 May Be $3,722,000,000.

EMERGENCY OUTLAY WILL DO IT, HE SAYS

W P A Head Seeks Funds for Roll of 3,100,000 Next Winter — Allocation to States on Population Basis Considered.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—W P A rolls may reach a new high mark next winter and the Government's public works and relief programs cost two billion dollars more than the Budget Bureau estimated last January, Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins predicted in testimony, made public today, before a House Appropriations Sub-Committee during hearings on President Roosevelt's big lending-spending program. House debate on the heart of that program is scheduled to begin Tuesday.

Hopkins proposed that funds be provided for W P A employment of as many as 3,100,000 persons next winter. That would be more than W P A had on its rolls at its previous peak—3,035,852 on Feb. 29, 1936—and would compare with a low mark of 1,450,000 persons last Oct. 1.

Even if business comes out of its present slump shortly, Hopkins said, families thrown out of work before the upturn would reach the end of their own resources and increase the relief load.

Senators Consider Earmarking.

Chairman Byrnes (Dem.), South Carolina, of the Senate Unemployment Committee indicated to reporters that an effort might be made to allocate future relief funds to the states on a basis of population.

Senator Byrd (Dem.), Virginia, disclosed this proposal was being considered by those interested in earmarking, or specifying uses of the huge fund.

Although Hopkins did not discuss this proposal, he told the House subcommittee the relief problem could be handled most efficiently by Federal administration of the funds.

"I think," he said, "that from a financial and from an administrative standpoint, the program can be administered far better by the Federal Government than by 3100 counties."

Contrast in Figures.

In contrast to the Budget Bureau's original estimate of one billion dollars for relief in the fiscal year starting July 1, the President has asked for appropriations totaling $2,062,000.000 for relief and public works. Of this, W P A would get only $1,250,000,000, however — enough to finance it until Feb. 1, 1939.

Hopkins told the subcommittee an additional one billion dollars would be required to carry W P A through the remaining five months of the next fiscal year if the load were projected on the same basis as for the first seven months.

From Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell the subcommittee learned that the additional appropriations might cause a Federal deficit of $3,722,000,000 for the fiscal year starting July 1. In other words, they might make Federal outlays for the year exceed Federal income by that amount.

Although Bell said it might be possible to effect a substantial reduction in that projected deficit if the Public Works Administration did not use all of its proposed one billion dollars loan and grant fund in the year, he reminded the subcommittee that the effect of the pending tax revision bill on revenues had not yet been determined.

Hopkins disclosed that the number of families in the United States getting relief benefits of some kind was over 6,000,000, including about 20,000,000 persons. At one time, he said, there were 27,000,00 persons getting aid.

Ickes Discusses Projects.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes told the sub-committee the Public Works Administration's phase of the President's program would permit between 4000 and 4500 non-Federal projects, provided the one billion fund were disbursed on the

HITLER PUBLICLY PROMISES TO RESPECT ITALY'S ALPINE FRONTIER 'FOR ALL TIME'

Fuehrer and Mussolini Pledge Fidelity to Rome-Berlin Axis at Banquet—Air Show Postponed.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 7.—Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler exchanged toasts of fidelity at a formal state dinner in Palazzo Venezia tonight, in which the German Reichsfuehrer guaranteed "for all time" the Alpine border between Germany and Italy and the Italian Premier declared, "your visit to Rome completes and seals the understanding between our two countries."

"It is my unshakeable will and also my political testament to the German people," Hitler said, "to consider inviolable for all time the frontiers of the Alps erected between us by nature.

"Profiting by 2000 years of history, we recognize a clear separation of our respective spheres of life. Our frontier shall not only be a line of demarkation, but also a bridge from nation to nation."

"I am certain that for Rome as well as Germany," he added, "there will result a future that will be glorious as well as prosperous."

(When Hitler annexed Austria, March 13, he assured Mussolini that German expansion would stop at the Brenner Pass, Italy's northern frontier. On March 16, Mussolini told a crowded Chamber of Deputies assemblage: "Our frontiers are sacred! We will not discuss them! We will defend them!"

One Dictator to Another.

Mussolini, raising his glass to Hitler, promised fidelity to the Rome-Berlin axis (the working agreement between the two dictators). "Fascist Italy knows but one ethical law of friendship: that which I related before the German people on May Field (last October)," Mussolini said. "This law of collaboration between Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy, Italy has obeyed, is obeying, and will obey."

Hitler, who spoke faster than is his custom, responded to Mussolini's declaration on the ethical principle of friendship, to march with a friend to the finish, by saying, "I associate myself with this principle.

"Duce," he declared to Mussolini, "just as you and your people have remained true to your friendship for Germany in the decisive days, so I, too, and my people are ready to manifest the same friendship to Italy."

The premises and object of this collaboration, Mussolini said, have been "consecrated in the Rome-Berlin axis" and constantly and openly affirmed. "Germany and Italy have left behind them the Utopias to which Europe blindly entrusted her destiny and to seek between them and with others a regime of international relations which might restore with equity for all a more effective guarantee of justice, security and peace."

Red Roses on the Tables.

Hitler spoke in German and Mussolini in Italian. Their toasts to "unchangeable friendship" obviously had been worked over carefully in advance, since Mussolini, who spoke first, appeared to know what Hitler was going to say. Mussolini talked for six minutes, Hitler for five.

The large banquet hall had four tables, decorated with one of Mussolini's favorite flowers, red roses. Frau Joachim von Ribbenthrop, wife of the German Foreign Minister, sat next to Mussolini and Princess Mafalda of Hesse, daughter of King Vittorio Emanuele, sat next to Hitler.

Following the banquet, crowds in the Piazzo Venezia called for the two dictators to appear on Mussolini's famous balcony. Mussolini and Hitler stepped out several times to salute the throngs below but did not speak.

Hitler appeared in his customary brown uniform, decorated with an Iron Cross. Mussolini wore the garb of a commander of Fascist militia and the decoration of the Order of the German Eagle, which Hitler conferred upon him last October.

More Palace History.

The place chosen for the banquet—historic Palazzo Venezia, where Mussolini has his offices — well may have caused Hitler to reflect on the ironies of history. An Austrian by birth, he probably recalled that Palazzo Venezia at one time was owned by Austria and was used as the embassy for envoys to the Holy See, with which Nazi relations now are strained. This magnificent palace would be German property if Italy had not confiscated it in 1916 in reprisal for Austria's bombardment of Venice.

The dinner brought to a climax a week's visit filled with military demonstrations, pageantry, and political discussions whose import the world probably will not know until time discloses them.

The short speeches by the dictators lacked concrete details of what they intended to do about Czechoslovakia, where a Nazi Ger-

RICHARD WHITNEY GETS JOB AS INSTRUCTOR IN PRISON

Convicted New York Broker Will Direct Visual Education at Sing Sing.

By the Associated Press.

OSSINING, N. Y., May 7.—Richard Whitney, convicted ex-president of the New York Stock Exchange, took his place on the Sing Sing prison faculty today as an instructor in visual education.

The 49-year-old former broker, head of the bankrupt Wall Street firm of Richard Whitney & Co., will lecture on three subjects, history, geography and technical topics. He will use moving pictures, stereoptican slides and still pictures for purposes of illustration.

He is serving a term for grand larceny growing out of the failure of his firm.

Chicago Child, Removal of Whose Eyes Some Doctors Advised, to Receive Treatment.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 7.—X-rays will be tried in the treatment of five-week-old Helaine Colan, instead of the removal of her eyes, which some surgeons recommended as the only way to save her life. The baby is suffering from glioma, a cancerous growth on the optic nerves.

Dr. Herbert E. Schmitz, head of the Mercy Hospital Institute for Radiation Therapy, said X-ray treatments would be started Monday at the direction of the baby's maternal grandfather, Dr. Morris Hershman.

Dr. Schmitz said two similar cases had been treated at the hospital within 18 months, but that the success of the method could not be determined for five years.

FIVE-INCH SNOW IN KANSAS

Fall at Goodland; Freezing Forecast for Western Part.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 7. — Goodland, in western Kansas, dug out of a five-inch blanket of May snow today and viewed a forecast of freezing weather over the entire western portion of the State for tonight, S. D. Flora, meteorologist, said today.

For the first time in several years, he said, Kansas has about all the moisture needed. Virtually all the State received additional precipitation during the last 24 hours, ranging from light showers up to nearly three inches. Western counties came in for "soakers."

REBELS TEAR GAP IN LINE DEFENDING ROAD TO MADRID

Gen. Garcia Valino's Troops Push 5 Miles Nearer Route Linking City to Valencia.

EAST COAST TOWN OF PORTELL SEIZED

Navarrese Report Destroying Loyalist Battalion and Cutting Through East-West Highway.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, France (at the Spanish Frontier), May 7.—Insurgents tore a gap through Government defenses in Eastern Spain today and advanced five miles nearer the vital highway link between Madrid and the Mediterranean ports of Castellon de la Plana and Valencia.

Insurgent commanders reported breaking the line 40 miles north and slightly to the west of Castellon, where they captured the town of Portell, deep in the pocket protecting the Government's central coast lines.

Official reports said the town was taken by troops of the insurgent general, Garcia Valino, who is pushing southwest from Cinctorres, a village they captured yesterday.

Co-ordinated with this movement was a drive directly south by insurgent coastal columns. Valencia and Castellon were the object of both operations.

The double thrust to broaden the insurgent foothold on the Eastern coast and close two gateways for supplies into the larger of the two segments of Government territory broke the curving front of the defenders from Teruel eastward to the sea.

Insurgent dispatches reported heavy Government losses as a coastal column driving south toward Castellon routed Gen. Jose Miaja's "Milicianos" from mountain positions at bayonet point.

The defenders tried to slip through the advancing insurgent line but machine-gunners drove them back into the shelter of olive groves on the terraced farms that formed the battleground.

A Government battalion was reported destroyed when Navarrese troops cut through the East-West coastal highway linking Alcala de Chivert and Cuevas de Rinroma, less than 30 miles north of Castellon.

FIGHT AT UNION CONVENTION; SEVERAL HURT, TWO ARRESTED

Police Break Up Melee at Opening Session of Pocketbook Workers in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 7.—The convention of the International Pocketbook Workers of America, an A. F. of L. affiliate, got off to a turbulent start today with a fight that resulted in dozens of minor injuries, sent one man to a hospital and caused the arrest of two for assault. Police and detectives broke up the melee.

One version of the fight was that New York delegates tried to prevent the Chicago, Midwest and Pacific Coast union leaders from entering their delegates. Another was that the Western men tried to "capture" the convention.

Morris Fuchs, 38 years old, of the Bronx, and Samuel Sedman, 28, of Chicago, were booked on charges of felonious assault. Samuel Drewnowitz, 40, the Bronx, was taken to a hospital. Four other men were treated by an ambulance surgeon and many had bloody noses, blackened eyes and bruised knuckles.

3041 ITALIAN CASUALTIES IN SPAIN LISTED IN ROME

Record of Killed, Wounded, Missing or Captured From March 9 to April 30.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 7.—A new casualty report on Italians fighting with insurgents in Spain listed 3041 as killed, wounded, missing or captured from March 9 to April 30.

Sixty-seven officers and 544 men were killed; 197 officers and 2219 men were wounded; 11 men were missing, and three were captured, the report said.

CONGRESSMEN GIVE UP PLAN TO DEFY HAGUE

Decision Follows Advice of Labor Group Against Speaking in Jersey City Without Permit.

FIST FIGHTING IN CROWDED SQUARE

Veterans Parade Through Mass Estimated at 65,000—"Lesson for Rest of Country"

By the Associated Press.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., May 7.—Vito Marcantonio, president of the International Labor Defense, announced Representatives Jerry J. O'Connell (Dem.), Montana, and John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, would not come to Journal Square tonight, where massed thousands gathered to witness their threat to defy a city ordinance prohibiting public speechmaking without a permit.

Marcantonio, a former Congressman, after conferring with the representatives in New York for several hours, said they insisted on speaking. But, as president of the International Labor Defense, he said, "I cannot permit innocent people to face certain bloodshed, violence and perhaps death at the hands of a mob incited to do violence by Mayor (Frank) Hague through his various henchmen."

"I have now advised and urged them not to attend that meeting, and I take full responsibility for so doing," said Marcantonio, who explained O'Connell and Bernard were "guests" of the Labor Defense to speak at the anti-Hague rally.

Journal Square Packed.

In packed Journal Square—the heart of the business center—thousands had waited quietly for arrival of the Congressmen to defy the city's eight-year-old law.

Representatives O'Connell and Bernard were scheduled to appear in the Square between 7 and 7:30 p. m. But more than an hour later they were reported still in New York City, where they had arrived by train from Washington.

Policemen and firemen roped off all entrances to the Square to bar the expected Congressmen from reaching the scene from where Norman Thomas, Socialist national leader, was escorted from the city last Saturday when he attempted to make a speech. Policemen at the Journal Square station of the Hudson and Manhattan tubes station closed off the stairs for a time. and persons leaving the trains were detoured to another exit.

While bands of veterans' organizations played martial airs and a parade snaked through the press of people carrying bobbing placards denouncing Communism and praising Mayor Hague, spectators stood by quietly. There were 300 policemen, 10 feet apart, with night sticks swinging idly or held under their arms.

Two Outsiders Roughed Up.

There were a few fist fights in the crowd, which Public Safety Director Daniel J. Casey said was "far more than 65,000." Two men were taken by a group of veterans to the tube trains and told to "go back to Union Square," traditional New York City outdoor forum. Friends of the two prevailed upon them to return to the street level, and one, who said he was Sam Schwartz, 32 years old, New York, was taken to Medical Center. He said he had been beaten in the crowd. His clothes were torn, as were those of his companion, who refused to give his name but who wore a button stating he was a member of the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, which is aiding the loyalist cause in Spain.

As disturbances occurred, motorcycle policemen raced back and forth across the Square to break up the crowd. Earlier in the day, a handbill distributor said he was hit in the face, and a photographer was attacked and his camera broken.

As the crowd thinned toward midnight, and the Legion band played the national anthem, Casey said he was "very pleased with the way things went off." He added: "I hope this will teach the rest of the country a lesson."

O'Connell and Bernard were accompanied to New York by their wives.

BUND LEADER AND COMPANION ARE MAULED AT TROY, N. Y.

Police Rescue Them After Blocking Meeting Because Permit Was Not Obtained.

By the Associated Press.

TROY, N. Y., May 7.—G. Wilhelm Kunze, national director of public relations for the German-American bund, and an unidentified companion were mauled tonight by a group of men after police blocked attempts of the bund to hold a meeting here.

Both were rescued by police and escorted safely from Troy. The beating occurred a block from Germania Hall, where the bund meeting was scheduled to take place.

Earlier Police Chief John B. Conroy refused to allow the meeting to go on, demanding a permit, which the bund leaders failed to obtain. He ordered policemen stationed at the hall to disperse a crowd, including 200 members of veterans' organizations.

Meanwhile, Willi Latteman, Schenectady County Bund leader, hunted for Mayor Frank J. Hogan to secure the permit.

Conroy said a permit was necessary because city firemen must be present to insure safety.

Members of eight veterans groups had assembled in Seminary Park, near the hall, to march on the meeting under a "mobilization" ordered by Benjamin Chuckrow, State commander of the Jewish War Veterans.

ROOSEVELT CRUISER SURGEON AIDS SAILOR ON STEAMER

Goes Over Side as President Watches to Attend Injured Man on Norwegian Craft.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 7.—The crusier Philadelphia, bearing President Roosevelt back here from a vacation, sent a surgeon over the side tonight on the President's order to respond to the SOS call, to attend an injured sailor aboard the Norwegian steamer Marathon.

A radio message to the Navy Yard from the Philadelphia said the Marathon, Montreal to New Orleans, sent out a call for help, the message being intercepted by the escort destroyer Fanning at 6:20 p. m. The ships changed course and at 8:15 p. m. the Marathon was sighted. Half an hour later the cruiser put over a whaleboat in a choppy sea with Commander Oscar Davis, the ship's surgeon.

The President and his party were attending the movies when the message reporting the injured seaman was received. They watched the whaleboat go to the Marathon. The doctor took a steel splinter from the injured seaman's eye and left medicine for him. It was not known whether the change in course would delay the arrival of the President here tomorrow evening around 5 p. m.

The President approached the end of a nine-day, 3000-mile round trip vacation voyage to the West Indies, satisfied the new cruiser Philadelphia had passed all tests and is a "happy ship."

He expects to be in Washington Monday morning for conference on the legislative situation.

M'MAHON FIRES FOUR MISSOURI LIQUOR AGENTS

Three Inspectors at Kansas City, Pendergast Aids, and One at St. Joseph Dropped.

Three Kansas City employes of the State Liquor Control Department, all adherents of the Pendergast machine, were removed from their positions yesterday by Col. E. J. McMahon of St. Louis, new State Supervisor of Liquor Control. The removals were taken as the latest development in Gov. Stark's war on Pendergast.

Those notified by McMahon of their dismissal were John B. Gulley, chief inspector, A. J. Marshall and William D. Sullivan, deputy inspectors.

Earlier in the day, it was announced that J. L. Bretz, inspector at St. Joseph, was removed. Col. McMahon, in commenting on this announcement, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that "a considerable number of changes" would be made in the department's personnel in the near future.

Col. McMahon could not be reached after the removal of the Kansas City employes was announced. McMahon, former Street Commissioner of St. Louis, appointed to the State position April 29 after the Governor removed Thomas F. Fitzgerald, Pendergast worker, said politics did not figure in the projected changes.

As to Bretz's dismissal, he said it was one of "six or seven" already determined upon, and that the decision to drop the inspectors was reached, he understood, on the basis of a questionnaire circulated among State employes, prior to McMahon's appointment, to determine their efficiency.

Bretz, who was appointed four years ago on the recommendation of Pendergast, said when informed of his dismissal: "It is a genuine pleasure to be relieved of any association with this administration."

McMahon pointed out that most of the employes in his department, appointed by Gov. Guy B. Park, had not been reappointed by Gov. Stark. He asserted that ratings of Fitzgerald, his predecessor, had been considered in deciding to drop certain members of the force.

CHINESE FIGHT WAY BACK INTO SOUTH HOPEH

They Report Advancing Into Province at Two Points After Breaking Through the Invaders' Lines North of Tsinan.

LOCAL GUERRILLAS AID IN ATTACKS

Garrison at Japanese Supply Base on Yangtze Holds Out—Deadlock in Battle on South Shantung Front.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, May 8 (Sunday)—Chinese reported today that units of the Sixty-eighth army had penetrated into Southeastern Hopeh Province after smashing Japanese lines north of Tsinan, the Japanese-held Shantung Province capital. The thrusts, they said, were made at Pingyuan and Yuheng, 52 and 32 miles, respectively, north of Tsinan, with the aid of local irregular forces.

Chinese sources asserted fully 13,000 irregulars were concentrated at Peiping, Japanese-held city in North Hopeh and had the moral support of the population.

Savage fighting continued within the walls of Nantungchow, on the north shore of the Yangtze River, 60 miles north of Shanghai, an important supply base for a Japanese army of 10,000 striking north through Kiangsu Province toward Haichow, seaport terminus of the Lunghai railway. A Japanese garrison there was said to face annihilation by 3000 Chinese guerrillas who attacked by surprise.

The guerrillas slipped into Nantungchow three days ago and attacked by surprise, inflicting many casualties on the Japanese garrison, which numbered only 300 men at the outset.

Deadlock on Main Front.

Fighting on the main front in Southern Shantung was again deadlocked.

Japanese said their planes bombed several Chinese troop trains in Southern Shantung Province, and Chinese heavy artillery emplacements were damaged south of Tanheng.

Heavy rains in Shantung and in other sectors have softened roads and flooded trenches, crippling the mechanized forces on which Japan's army relies. The real rainy season has not yet started and foreign military observers forecast increasing difficulty for the Japanese if roads become impassable.

Japanese armies on the central front have been stalled for almost four months despite heavy reinforcements. An army spokesman said yesterday the slow progress was due to China's advantages in numeral strength and its possession of strong, natural defense positions.

New Difficulty Over Customs.

Chinese customs employes, in protest against the announcement of the Japanese-sponsored Nanking government that it would take charge of customs, ceased clearing ships at Shanghai. A temporary paralysis of Shanghai's port traffic was relieved when Commissioner L. H. Lawford declared he was taking orders from the Inspectorate General, not from the new Nanking government. The staff, however, left the customs house after what was said to have been a vote to work on a "go-slow" basis pending word from the Central Chinese Government at Hankow.

The customs house remained under heavy guard. A Japanese Embassy spokesman, denying any knowledge of a strike, said any such steps would be dealt with "in the usual way." He did not explain what this meant.

Shinrokuro Hidaka, Japanese charge d'affaires in Shanghai, in a broadcast to Japan, reported definite progress toward rehabilitating Japanese industries in Shanghai. Hidaka said that Japanese exports to Shanghai had reached 40,000 tons a month, almost what they were before the outbreak of hostilities. Such exports now are entering Shanghai duty free.

Chinese Report Guerrillas Around Former Capital of Hopeh.

PEIPING, May 7. — Chinese sources said tonight that Chinese Guerrillas had surrounded Paotingfu, former Hopeh Province capital 90 miles southwest of here. Paotingfu was under Japanese martial law, and hundreds of Chinese were reported under arrest after an all-night battle Thursday night. The Japanese were said to have repulsed Chinese Guerrilla attacks.

Chrysler, Knudsen and Kettering Took Pay Cuts, but Goodrich Won Rise From Tire Company.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Several large corporations paid their officers more money in 1937 than in the year before, Securities and Exchange Commission reports showed today.

Exceptions included William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors Corporation, who received $307,200 in 1937, compared with $507,645 in 1936, and Charles S. Kettering, G. M. C. director of research, who received $212,794 in 1937 compared with $353,755 in 1936. These figures include salary, bonuses and dividends from stock.

Sonja Henie, skating star, was paid $210,729 in 1937 by Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation. Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of studio production, received $260,000 and Warner Baxter, actor, $225,961.

A. W. Robertson, chairman of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., received $169,227 compared with $108,588 in 1936; and F. A. Merrick, president, $126,950, compared with $84,485 in 1936.

David M. Goodrich, chairman of B. F. Goodrich Co., received $55,000 in 1937 compared with $32,901 in 1936.

Hugh S. Johnson, former N R A Administrator, received $40,000 from Radio Corporation of America in 1937 as "legal fees in regard to labor relations." David Sarnoff, president, received $84,153, compared with $75,920 in 1936.

Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, received $394,586 compared with $180,000 in 1936. Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board, received $180,000, the same as the year before.

Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the board of Chrysler Corporation, received $189,136 compared with $200,700 in 1936; K. T. Keller, president, received $94,718 compared with $100,500 in 1936.

James O. McKinsey, chairman of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, received $78,930 in 1937 compared with $65,000 in 1936 while Frederick D. Corley, president, received $75,000 compared with $60,000 the previous year.

Other aggregate remunerations for 1937 and 1936, respectively, include:

basis of $450,000,000 in grants and $550,000,000 in loans.

Ickes advocated, however, that the production of grants be increased to $750,000,000 and the loan fund pared to $250,000,000. He said he had talked over such a division with the President, who, he asserted, was "willing to agree to it."

The subcommittee subsequently recommended adoption of Ickes' suggestion, which he said was advisable because of the practice of many municipalities of marketing their own securities.

Ickes estimated about $540,000,000 of the total would be spent for material. Asserting P W A should not be required to use relief labor on its projects, he said:

"You can get better labor if you do not have to go to relief rolls for it," and declared the P W A program required much more skilled labor than W P A.

HITLER PROMISES TO RESPECT ITALY'S ALPINE FRONTIER

man minority is clamoring for autonomy, and other problems which are said to have been discussed.

The political phase of Hitler's Italian tour reached its close in a lengthy talk between him and Mussolini before they exchanged speeches on the state of Italian-German relations. The lavish state dinner was arranged as a background for the speeches.

Most Tranquil Day.

Tonight's activities came at the close of the most tranquil day Hitler has enjoyed since he arrived in Italy Tuesday night. After rain caused postponement of a scheduled air force and artillery demonstration, Hitler went on a sight-seeing trip. He had seen a goose-stepping sample of Mussolini's army, with an asserted strength of 9,000,000 men, and had watched Italy's powerful navy in action.

On today's trip he had a quick look at St. Peter's and Vatican City as his automobile sped through the new Avenue of Conciliation—named in commemoration of the settlement of differences between the church and Italy.

From his car he could see the windows of Pope Pius' private apartments, untenanted since the Pope departed for his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo three days before Hitler's arrival. The Vatican Museum was closed "until further orders" but museum officials said they did not know why.

On his tour through the countryside around Rome, Hitler saw many drenched cattle with sodden decorations on their horns, drawn up along the roads for his inspection.

Views Capitol Paintings.

When he returned to the city, he went back a second time to visit the Augustin Exposition depicting the glories of ancient imperial Rome. Then, under the guidance of Minister of Education Giuseppe Bottai, he went to Campidoglio, the capiitol, and spent some time viewing its paintings and sculptures.

He spent two hours in conversations with Italian leaders preparatory to tonight's speeches. After talking in private for an hour, Hitler and Mussolini called in their foreign ministers, and the conversations continued for another hour.

The chief topic was reported to have been a possible four-power pact involving France, Great Britain, Germany and Italy. German sources said Hitler indicated willingness to join such a pact but left no doubt that he considered it essential that Italian-French and German-British agreements precede a four-power pact.

German sources also said Mussolini had agreed to give Germany a free hand in Czechoslovakia, so far as Italy is concerned. Mussolini was reported to have expressed hope Germany would be able to iron out her differences with Czechoslovakia "on her own strength."

MOCK ATTACK ON NEW YORK BY AIR BOMBERS 'REPULSED'

Anti-Aircraft Cannon and Searchlights Defend City in Preliminary Army War Game.

NEW YORKX May 7.—A fleet of bombing planes was "repulsed" in a mock attack on New York City today when United States Army forces warmed up for their war games next week.

As the bombers started toward New York skyscrapers in a demonstration for reserve officers, a mass of the army's complex new $1,000,000 defense equipment was thrown into operation at Fort Totten on the city's outskirts.

Three-inch anti-aircraft cannon fired an imaginary salvo at the distant planes. Searchlights swept the air and huge horn-like devices detected the drone of the planes long before they came over the horizon. The imaginary gunfire was regulated by secret robot apparatus.

N L R B AGAIN SEEKS TO SET ASIDE ORDER TO REPUBLIC

Claims Right to Cancel Its Rulings After Steel Company Gets Injunction.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, May 7. — The National Labor Relations Board gave notice today it would appear in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals Monday to fight a restraining order that prevented it temporarily from reopening its case against the Republic Steel Corporation.

The board said it would ask the Court to withdraw the order, restraining it from proceeding against Republic until the Court rules next Friday whether the N L R B should bring to court the certified record of testimony concerning Republic Steel.

Republic argued that in the hearing in which the N L R B ordered it to reinstate 5000 employes dismissed during the "Little Steel" strike, the board did not conform to legal requirements.

Fahy said today he notified Republic attorneys Tuesday (the day the temporary injunction was granted) the board had "definitely decided to vacate its order" to Republic.

In a petition today Fahy asserted the national Labor Act gave the board the right to modify or set aside its orders. He said if the Circuit Court did not dismiss the restraining order, he would ask the United States Supreme Court to do so.

MAYOR LA GUARDIA SAYS AIR LINES MISLEAD PUBLIC

From New Angle Renews Fight Against Having New York Mail Terminal in Newark.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia demanded today that the Federal Department of Commerce investigate what he said was a practice by air transport lines of advertising service into New York and then landing their planes at Newark, N. J., airport, necessitating a 14-mile trip by bus into New York.

He sent letters to Secretary of Commerce Roper and the Federal Trade Commission charging six air-lines serving New York through Newark with "flagrant violations of fair trade practice, unfair competition, and with consistently misleading the public as to the nature of their service."

LaGuardia has attempted at various times since taking office to have Floyd Bennet Field, New York's No. 1 airport, designated as the air mail terminal for New York, in place of Newark. Airline companies have answered that the Post-office Department must make any such change.

TWO WOMEN LOSE LIVES IN PLANE IN SEATTLE, WASH.

Explorer Piloting Craft and Man Passenger Rescued by Passing Boat in Lake.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 7. — Two women were killed late today when a seaplane piloted by Bradford Washburn Jr., Harvard geographer and explorer, fell into Lake Union.

The victims were Mrs. Ome Daiber and Miss Dorothy Mathews of Seattle. Washburn and James Borrows, a passenger, escaped. The plane was attempting to alight on the lake.

The women's bodies were recovered from the submerged cabin of the plane.

Borrows and Washburn were picked up by a passing boat.

Washburn was visiting here on his way to Valdez, Alaska, where he planned to attempt to climb 13,250-foot Mount St. Agnes, under sponsorship of the National Geographic Society. Last summer he and Robert Bates, Philadelphia, were the first persons to scale 17,150-foot Mount Luciania.

CONGRESSMEN GIVE UP PLAN TO DEFY HAGUE

O'Connell, who decided along with Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, not to go to Jersey City to speak in defense of civil rights, as they had planned in the face of a bar by Hague, said he also would ask the Senate Civil Liberties Committee to investigate the "denial of civil rights in Jersey City."

They conferred here with Vito Marcantonio, president of the International Labor Defense, and New York City Councilman Michael J. Quill, who also was to have spoken.

Mrs. O'Connell, in tears after the decision, said: "Jerry is heart broken because he can't go. This is the first time I ever knew Jerry to back out of anything."

Bernard said: "We will never come again to make fools of ourselves. Two Congressmen can't do this alone. Down with Hague!" And he shook his fist.

Quill said: "We felt it sound leadership not to give Hague a fight when he needs it most."

JOBS MANUFACTURED FOR AUSTRIAN NAZIS

Joseph Buerckel Announces Policy in Dismissing Nine Judges.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, May 7.—Austrian Germans who imagined sweeping changes in their official and private lives were almost completed were told today that real Nazification was still to come.

Joseph Buerckel, Federal Commissioner for Union of Austria with Germany, announced that Austrian pioneer Nazis, especially those who were imprisoned or fled the country under the previous government now were privileged to hold the highest positions in the state and party.

Buerckel made the statement when he dismissed Felix Schubert, president of the Austrian Supreme Court, and eight other high Judges and replaced them with Nazis.

It was estimated at party headquarters here that about 80,000 Nazis were awaiting jobs. Many important posts were expected to be filled next week when Austrian Germany will be divided into seven party districts.

In addition to these positions "only for party members" thousands were expected to be opened to Austrian Germans who will replace Jews in business.

Latest Austrian labor statistics showed that unemployment had declined from 300,000 to 206,000 since March. (Germany annexed Austria March 13.)

Pensioning of elderly municipal and state officials was considered the easiest way to furnish posts for Nazi veterans.

Government officials said plans for mass emigration of Austrian Jews were almost completed. "One difficulty seems to be the financing of their transportation to the port of immigration," one official said. "However, that is a problem for the world's Jewry to worry about."

Frank Stertin, Austrian press chief of the Propaganda Ministry, said reports circulating in the foreign press that hundreds of Jews were committing suicide in Vienna every week are "gravely exaggerated."

"Only 360 Jews have attempted or committed suicide in the last two months," he said. "This bears no comparison with the many thousands of Aryan Austrians who by cruel Jewish methods were driven to desperation and death in recent years."

Declares No American War Materials Shipped to Reich or Italy Have Been Used in Spain.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 7. — Secretary of State Hull said today that exports of armaments from the United States to Germany had been "microscopic."

Previously, Hull had taken issue with a statement that the United States, by permitting arms sales to Germany, was violating its 1921 treaty of peace with that country.

The department had licensed only a minimum of war material exports to Germany, Hull said today, at a press conference, adding that through a system of checking it was assured that these materials had been used by Germany for commercial purposes. As for Spain, Hull said no arms shipped from the United States to Germany or Italy had been used in the Spanish war.

Cambodian King to Drop Half of His 200 Wives

With Only $275,000 Annual Allowance From France, Monarch Must Release Some Dancing Girls.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

PNOMPENH, Cambodia, French Indo-China, April. — King Sisowath Monivong, ruler of the ancient kingdom of Cambodia, who is reputed to have 200 dancing-girl wives, finds that even a golden-crowned potentate in these lean times cannot afford so many consorts, so His Majesty, who now is nearly 60, has decided to reduce the number by half.

Those cast off will continue their profession as exponents of Cambodia's classical dancing.

Apparently the King's decision to economize has the hearty approval of the French Government whose slender budget for Cambodia will not allow it to increase the King's present civil list and royal allowance, said to amount to 10,000,000 francs (about $275,000) a year. Cambodia is a protectorate of France and French Indo-China. Only one other sovereign in Indo-China receives such a sum for performing nominal duties. He is Emperor Bao Dai of Annam, and he has only one wife.

For centuries the dance has been a ritualistic practice in the Cambodian court. In numerous cases it has been the custom of the sovereigns to select their wives from among the dancing girls, who are distinguished not only for beauty and grace but for intelligence and high breeding. It is said that the present King's father had 800 dancing-girl wives.

So much is classical dancing a part of court life in Cambodia that whenever the King receives or bids farewell to a diplomat, foreign visitor or other distinguished person, or whenever an important native ceremony is observed, His Majesty orders his dancing-girl wives to perform. They are the official entertainers of the court.

The Cambodian dance differs completely from conventional dancing in that it consists largely of slow, rhythmical movements of the arms, head and hands, or of posturing with the feet. The costumes are elaborate and the dancers wear emeralds, rubies and sapphires in the many bracelets on their ankles and arms. So valuable are the costumes that when they are not in use they are kept in glass cases guarded by soldiers.

ALLIS-CHALMERS CO. ENDS DISPUTE WITH C I O UNION

"Victory of Common Sense," Not of Either Side, President of Company Says.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, May 7.—Max W. Babb, president of Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., in a statement tonight blamed "a common inability of accurate expression" for troubles between labor and management at the Milwaukee plant, ended earlier in the day when the United Automobile Workers' local, a C I O affiliate, accepted terms of a settlement.

Babb said "numerous unfortunate selections of words appearing in proposals and counter proposals" led to misunderstandings. The Wisconsin Labor Relations Board, he said, "resourcefully" suggested language expressing the real intentions of each.

As a result, Babb said, neither the union nor the company was forced to deviate or retreat, and neither could claim a victory. It was, he said, "a victory for all of us; a victory of common sense and intelligence over emotionalism."

The procedure, the company president concluded, was "a distinct contribution to the technique of intelligent and genuine collective bargaining."

GOGA, RECENTLY PREMIER OF RUMANIA IS DEAD

Promulgator of Anti-Jewish Decrees Succumbs in Bucharest to Heart Attack.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 7.—Octavian Goga, who headed a nationalist, anti-Jewish Rumanian Government for a few turbulent weeks early this year, died today. He was 57 years old.

Goga suffered a heart ailment after his resignation as Premier, Feb. 10.

King Carol commissioned Goga, thrice previously a Cabinet minister, to form a new government Dec. 28, 1937. In the six weeks that it lasted, his administration imposed drastic strictures on Jews and laid the basis for a broad Fascist and anti-Jewish program.

Goga's widow, a singer, was known as "the Nightingale of Transylvania." They had no children.

BORAH ASKS FOR FACTS IN PENNSYLVANIA RACE

Will Sponsor Inquiry Into G. O. P. Slush Fund Charges if Proof Is Offered.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho, made public today a telegram to Bertram G. Frazier, Philadelphia, offering to sponsor a senatorial investigation if Frazier could produce proof of his charges that a "slush fund" had been raised to support some candidates in the Pennsylvania Republican primary.

Frazier, former State Senator, had charged that Joseph Pew, oil company executive; former United States Senator Joseph R. Grundy and Moses Annenberg, owner of the Philadelphia Inquirer, "are pouring a huge slush fund into the Republican primary fight to put over their candidates for Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and United States Senate."

In reply, Borah wired:

"Before offering a resolution for investigation I would have to have same definite proof to justify the resolution. In all probability you are right, but I must have some positive facts. It is probably too late now to get an investigation before the primary, but if you will gather the evidence and get the facts in shape it might be just as well to make the investigation after the primary as before. Pew's idea of politics is dollars and cents and if you will furnish me the evidence I will do what I can to prevent wholesale corruption."

Whether the Senate would have authority to make an investigation of charges in connection with a primary race is a question Borah said never had been determined finally by the United States Supreme Court. He recalled that in a test case from Michigan involving that question the Supreme Court divided four to four, with the ninth Justice declining to rule.

TAX CONFEREES SIGN FINAL DRAFT OF BILL

Senate Expected to Get $5,330,000,000 Measure Tomorrow or Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—A conference committee cleared the way today for final congressional action on the $5,330,000,000 tax revision bill.

House and Senate members of the committee affixed their signatures to the final draft of a report containing the agreement which they negotiated last week.

Chairman Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, said he hoped to present the compromise for Senate approval on Monday or Tuesday. Chairman Doughton (Dem.), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee said he expected to bring up the measure in the House the day after the Senate acted.

The conferees made no changes in the terms of last week's compromise, merely placing a final approval on phraseology.

Because the bill would materially modify existing tax provisions which business men have criticised, committee members were hopeful it would encourage business and thaw out "frozen capital."

The measure would retain for two years the principle of the undistributed profits tax, to which business has objected, but the levy would be reduced drastically. Corporations earning more than $25,000 a year would pay a tax ranging from 16½ to 19 per cent, depending on the amount of income distributed to stockholders. Those earning less would be exempt from any undistributed profits levy.

The present graduated scale of capital gains taxes was abandoned in the bill in favor of a flat rate of 15 per cent for profits on assets held more than two years. Assets held less than 18 months would be treated as short-term gains and taxed as ordinary income. On assets held between 18 months and two years, the tax would be 20 per cent.

ORIENTAL RUGS
Old Masters in Wool

THERE ARE FEW THINGS that we have inherited from the ages which have withstood the years and continue to hold us spellbound as do the intricacies of rug weaving and the fascination of symbolism this art possesses.

Orientals are works of art which are testimonials to the virtue of patience, and each has a story of its own, portrayed in vistas of enchanting color. What do these symbols mean—what does red mean to the Mohammedan or blue to the Chinese? What are those identifying symbols that will tell you the rug is Persian, Turkoman or Chinese?

Orientals, even though they may lack maturity, are composed of symbols which have been adopted, intermingled and passed down, generation to generation, since the days of Abraham. They are symbols from a myriad of dialects, from a world which perpetuates its past, its soul, imagination and tradition in masterpieces designed in wool—just as the great masters of the renaissance perpetuated theirs on canvas.

He who appreciates the true charm and value of Orientals must know the background of these masterpieces and something of their characteristic symbols, colorings and patterns. For that reason, and because Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney has one of the most noted collections of Orientals in America today, a series of ads will appear which are designed to familiarize you with the characteristic symbols and general classifications of Oriental rugs, so that your understanding of them will be clear and your appreciation keener.

STRIKE RENEWAL IS AVERTED AT CITY SANITARIUM

Requirement Waived That Those Seeking Re-employment Must Be Separately Interviewed.

21 REINSTATED ON FIRST DAY

Men's Representative Complained Workers Were Forced "to Beg for Their Jobs."

Difficulties which threatened a reopening of the strike of City Sanitarium attendants were adjusted last evening, in a conference between representatives of the city and labor union officers. The sanitarium management waived the requirement, to which the recent strikers objected, that they should be interviewed individually by Dr. F. M. Grogan, superintendent, before being put back to work.

Dr. Grogan's rule was applied to the first six men who applied for reinstatement yesterday, following the settlement of the strike Friday evening. This caused delay, and nervousness on the part of others waiting to apply. Early in the afternoon, a large group of the recent strikers and their friends met near the sanitarium entrance in an Arsenal street tavern, which served as strike headquarters.

J. T. Latham, representing the Building Service Employes' Union, who called the strike Tuesday, complained to the superintendent, and to his superiors in the Department of Public Welfare, that the returning employes were being compelled to "beg for their jobs."

Difficulty Adjusted.

Joseph P. Clark, president of the Central Trades and Labor Union, and Timothy J. Dwyer, secretary of the Building Service Employes' Union, took part in the discussion, in which the city was represented by Dr. Edward C. O'Brien, Assistant Hospital Commissioner; Supt. Grogan and Lawrence L. Will, statistician of the Mayor's office.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Dr. O'Brien said the difficulty had been adjusted, and that 21 persons had reported for duty. "Beginning Monday morning," Dr. O'Brien said, "others will be placed rapidly."

He said that of the 21 re-employed yesterday, only the first six had been subjected to the rule of individual interviews, and that this rule would be waived in re-employing those to be taken back tomorrow. "Whether the superintendent will desire to interview them later, I do not know," he said.

Turnover Rapid.

The number of strikers out for the four-day period has been stated by Superintendent Grogan as 125, although the strikers' figure was larger. In their places, 113 persons were engaged, and Dr. Grogan said the new employes would remain, if they wished to stay and were found capable. As the turnover of Sanitarium employes is rapid, being 40 per cent annually, it will be possible to put a considerable number of the recent strikers back within a short time.

Director of Public Welfare Joseph M. Darst said last night that he thought the strike settlement would work out without further difficulty. He said he did not think the rule for individual hiring interviews a necessary one, in the case of experienced employes.

Terms of Agreement.

The agreement ending the strike, reached Friday evening, was negotiated by Director Darst and delegates of Miscellaneous Hospital Attendants and Employes' Union 50-D. It provided that the strikers should be returned to work as soon as vacancies are available, subject to the conceded right of superintendent Grogan to determine their fitness for jobs.

It provided also that the case of 13 employes, whose summary dismissal caused the strike, be submitted to three arbiters, to determine whether they were fired for union activity, as the strikers charged, or for inefficiency, as Darst contended.

Recognition of the union by Darst as a collective bargaining agency; settlement of future difficulties by arbitration, with no strike or lockout; recognition of the Superintendent's right to hire and fire, and an expression favoring an eventual readjustment of working hours, were also contained in the agreement. The employes now work a 12½-hour day shift and 11½ hours at night, with three half-hour meal periods. Straitened city finances have kept this arrangement in force, the city estimating that the eight-hour day at the Sanitarium and other institutions would cost an added $750,000 a year.

CLEVELAND GIVING OUT LAST OF RELIEF FUND

Crowds Demanding Food Quiet Down, but City Will Have None for Them Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, May 7.—Relief workers passed out week-end food orders from the dwindling remnants of the city's relief fund today and Mayor Harold H. Burton promised to offer definite proposals for alleviating the emergency Monday.

Relief offices were quiet as funds from a $50,000 stop-gap appropriation provided last week were distributed in the form of grocery orders to relief clients who had jammed the city's six relief stations shouting, "We want food."

Sit-down protests, which started at two relief offices two days ago, ended and only the usual small groups were present.

Members of the relief administration staff in this city where, Relief Commissioner Frank E. Bubna said, 87,000 persons are dependent on direct relief, said the tension noticeable yesterday had eased.

Relief Workers Go Unpaid.

Relief workers themselves have been on a "volunteer" basis since May 1, when the entire staff of 875 was dismissed because of the lack of funds, but urged to continue working on a volunteer basis.

Mayor Burton declined to say what proposals he would present to the City Council. Means of financing relief until June 1, when the State is expected to make funds available, are necessary. Burton said the $50,000 appropriation would be exhausted Monday.

At the relief stations, some clients said they had received four-day relief orders. One 76-year-old woman who said she hadn't had a satisfactory meal in six days appeared at a station at 5 a. m. and waited three hours for the doors to open. A 50-year-old woman with a palpitation of the heart, fainted at another station and was treated at a hospital.

In addition to the 87,000 persons on direct relief in the city, Bubna estimated that 189,000 were receiving aid from 63,000 W P A jobs in Greater Cleveland.

$17,000,000 Sought From State.

At Columbus, the State capital, attorneys drafted a supplementary $17,000,000 poor relief program today for submission to a special session of the Legislature May 16.

The bills incorporate tax plans agreed upon by Gov. Martin L. Davey and representatives of the State's large municipalities. Under the measures, communities would be authorized to levy special excise taxes, such as automobile licenses, gas taxes and utility levies for relief funds. The State would provide additional funds from anticipated revenues.

Cleveland officials hope to solve the emergency at this session of the Legislature.

Gov. Davey and Mayor Burton have exchanged sharp words over the Governor's charge that relief was administered extravagantly in Cleveland.

The State offices of the W P A announced today that approximately 233,560 persons in Ohio were employed on W P A projects this week, an increase of about 2928 over last week. The previous high in Ohio was 187,000 in March, 1936. In September, 1937, the figure was 81,000.

WORMS OF TWO KINDS CAUSE DAMAGE TO TREES IN CITY

Willow Beetle Also at Work; Arsenate of Lead Spray Recommended.

Many inquiries have been received at Shaw's Garden this spring about damage to elm trees, willows, lombardy poplars, some shrubs and other plants by leaf-chewing insects, George H. Pring, superintendent, said yesterday to a Post-Dispatch reporter.

The damage is caused by different types of worms, a green one with a black head that protects itself by wrapping a portion of the leaf about its webbed nest, and a dark brown worm about an inch long that particularly infests elm trees, and by the willow beetle.

A heavy spraying of arsenate of lead applied with one of the sticking powders or fluids that will keep the poison on the leaf, is the remedy for the three pests, Pring said.

The willow beetle is crimson in color, with black spots, and is larger than the lady-bug, which it resembles. It should not be confused with the lady-bug, which is beneficial to plants, as it feeds on sucking insects. The willow-beetle has infested particularly the willows and poplars.

DOCTOR, WIFE GET 3 YEARS ON NARCOTICS CHARGES

The Charles E. Learys of Woodlawn, Ill., Plead Guilty Before Judge Wham.

Dr. Charles E. Leary of Woodlawn, Ill., and his wife, Mrs. Mae Leary, a nurse, were sentenced to three-year terms in a Federal institution by United States District Judge Fred L. Wham in East St. Louis Friday when they pleaded guilty of violating the Harrison Anti-Narcotic Act.

Narcotic agents said Dr. Leary, 44 years old, and his wife, 40, were responsible for the issuance of 189 prescriptions for narcotics between April of 1937 and March, 1938. In many cases, the agents said, names of Woodlawn persons not acquainted with the physician were used on the prescriptions.

Mrs. Leary said in court that she became an addict after her marriage to Dr. Leary in 1935. In 1934 he was sentenced to eight months in the Cook County (Ill.) Sanitarium for illegal possession of narcotics. Agents said he moved to Woodlawn and early in April last year he promised to stop the issuance of narcotic prescriptions.

STRADIVARIUS TAKEN BACK FROM ST. LOUISAN TO BE SOLD

Family of L. E. Walker Jr. to Get Money Left After Firm That Held It Is Paid $6694.

Sale of a Stradivarius violin, purchased for L. Ernest Walker Jr., one-time child prodigy and now a member of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and reclaimed last December by the Chicago music house of Lyon & Healy because the Walker family could not keep up payments, has been set tentatively for June 10 in Chicago.

The sale will not be approved by United States District Court in Chicago unless the price is at least $13,000. Of the proceeds, under the court ruling, the music firm will receive $6694 and the Walker family, which had paid $14,000 on the purchase price of $18,000, will receive the rest after the payment of court costs. The $6694 represents the unpaid balance plus interest and cost of violin bows.

AMERICAN NEWSPAPER MAN KILLS SELF IN SHANGHAI

Leaps From Sixth Floor of Building Shortly After Death of His Fiancee.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, May 7.—Henry Hufner, city editor of the Shanghai Evening Post, leaped to his death early today from the sixth floor of the Navy Y. M. C. A., leaving a self-written obituary for his paper, the Evening Post.

Hufner ended his life less than 24 hours after his 23-year-old fiancee, Violet Ethel Thompson, died following a dental operation. In his "last scoop" for his paper, as he termed the obituary, he asked to be buried with her.

SIMON VAN RAALTE PAYS FINE OF $250 FOR H O L C FRAUD

Wealthy Realty Man Pleads No Contest—His Company and Former Associate Also Penalized.

A fraudulent real estate deal by which Simon Van Raalte, 36 Washington terrace, unloaded on the Home Owners' Loan Corporation a residence he had acquired by foreclosure of a mortgage, was settled yesterday in United States District Court.

Van Raalte, who is 83 years old and wealthy, paid a $250 fine and, thruogh his attorney, promised to reimburse the H O L C for its loss. Fines of $250 were paid also by Van Raalte's real estate concern, the Vancoh Realty Co., and his former business associate, Herman Mayer.

No contest pleas were entered before Judge George H. Moore to an indictment which charged Van Raalte, Mayer and the Vancoh firm, with conspiracy and defrauding the H O L C.

The deal, as outlined by Assistant United States District Attorney David Robinson for Judge Moore's information, began in 1932 when the Vancoh firm acquired, by foreclosure of a mortgage, a residence at 4044 Aldine avenue. Title was taken in the name of a stenographer for the Vancoh concern who subsequently transferred the title to the company.

The company held title when the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was formed in 1933 to assist property owners threatened with foreclosure of their homes, but as a corporation, it was ineligible to obtain a loan from the H O L C.

The warranty deed to the property was then altered to make it appear that the owner was Fletcher Bryant, $60-a-month Negro porter for the Vancoh concern. Bryant executed a deed of trust to make it appear the Vancoh firm held a mortgage on the property.

Bryant then obtained an H O L C loan, and the Vancoh concern, in exchange for its supposed mortgage, got $5451.64 in H O L C bonds and cash. Bryant made none of the monthly payments specified when he obtained the H O L C loan.

Van Raalte's attorney, William H. Woodward, chairman of the Election Board, told Judge Moore this was the only transaction of 60 or 70 which Van Raalte had with the H O L C concerning which there was cause for complaint. Mayer's attorney, former Circuit Judge John W. Calhoun, said he was "just an employe" of Van Raalte.

Judge Moore imposed the fines without comment.

The no contest pleas were to two counts in an eight-count indictment. The other six were dismissed by the Government. On the fraud count the maximum sentence is five years in prison and a fine of $10,000, and on the conspiracy count, two years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

MOTORMAN, OUT OF WORK THREE YEARS, ENDS LIFE

Widow, Who Found Body, Said He Had Been Unemployed Since Suffering Breakdown.

Herman Garrett, former St. Louis motorman, shot and killed himself yesterday at his home, 7019 Edison avenue, Wellston. The body, with a bullet wound in the heart and a revolver lying beside it, was found in bed by Garrett's wife when she returned home soon after noon.

She told police that Garrett had been unemployed since he suffered a nervous breakdown three years ago. He was 40 years old. Coroner John O'Connell said there would be no inquest.

RECESSION TAKES $800,000,000 OUT OF PUBLIC'S PURSE

Bills From $1 to $50 Decline in Circulation, but Coins Increase.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The recession has taken $800,000,000 in cash from the public in the last year.

Practically all of that amount came out of bank accounts but about $20,000,000 disappeared from pocket change.

Pocket change is the right phrase, too, because it was only the bills from $1 to $50 that declined in circulation, the bigger notes having increased.

For instance, $10 bills declined $32,000,000, while $1000 bills increased $25,000,000. The big notes, of course, circulate almost exclusively from one bank to another. The drop in $1 and $5 bills was only a few millions apiece, but $20 bills declined $39,000,000.

Coin circulation increased $10,000,000.

The bulk of the nation's cash—not counting money belonging to governments and banks—is in the form of bank deposits, which amount to about 36 billion dollars. Coin and currency in circulation total about $6,350,000,000.

UNION WAGES PROMISED AT JEFFERSON BARRACKS

Building Trades Council Secretary Gets Notice About Pay for Construction Work.

John J. Church, secretary of the Building Trades Council, was informed yesterday by Joseph A. McInerney, president of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor that union wages would be paid in future on the $600,000 building reconstruction program at Jefferson Barracks.

The Building Trades Council has threatened to stop public construction in this area, financed in part with Federal funds, in protest against the use of WPA labor at 88 cents an hour on the Barracks job. The work includes plumbing, plastering and electrical installation claimed by union men, whose wage scales range from $1.50 to $1.75 an hour.

McInerney, in a letter to Church, said he had been assured union wage scales would be paid. Replying to a complaint that inexperienced men were employed by the WPA for skilled work, McInerney said he was told that WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins was sending a representative to select qualified workers. Church expects to obtain some of the jobs for union members.

$40 HOLDUP ON TRUCK

Driver for Bread Company Says Two Men Took Money.

Alfred Cohen, a driver for the Cap-Sheaf Bread Co., 1112 North Kingshighway, was robbed of $40 at 5:30 p. m. yesterday by two Negroes, one of whom displayed a revolver. The robbers forced their way into the company truck at Garrison avenue and Atlantic street.

Cohen told police the robbers rode about a block with him south in Garrion avenue, then leaped from the truck. Cohen lives at 1903 North Thirty-ninth street, East St. Louis.

MRS. EVELYN BISSELL DIES AT 83 AT HOME

Funeral of Member of Old County Family to Be Held Tomorrow.

Mrs. Evelyn Richardson Bissell, member of an old St. Louis County family, died yesterday of infirmities of age at the old Bissell home on Bellefontaine road, north of Chambers road.

Mrs. Bissell, who was 83 years old, was the widow of Daniel R. Bissell, who died in May, 1934. Born in Franklin, La., she came to St. Louis with her parents when she was about 15 years old and was married to Mr. Bissell in 1875. She had resided in her husband's family home since then.

The Bissell home, long a landmark in St. Louis County, was built in 1812 by Mr. Bissell's grandfather, Gen. Daniel Bissell, who also constructed and at one time commanded Fort Bellefontaine. The Bissell estate originally included 4000 acres, but now comprises about 400 acres. Mr. Bissell spent all of his active years managing the estate.

Mrs. Bissell is survived by two sons, James R. Bissell and Daniel R. Bissell Jr., and a daughter, Mrs. H. P. Hilliard of Los Angeles, Cal. The funeral will be tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Bellefontaine Methodist Church, with burial in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

LEE MERIWETHER MADE KNIGHT BY KING OF ITALY

Defends Conquest of Ethiopia in Speech Accepting Decoration From Vice-Consul.

Lee Meriwether, St. Louis lawyer who served in wartime on special missions to Italy and France, was decorated last night by the Italian Vice-Consul with the insignia of Cavaliere Ufficiale, or Knight, conferred by the King of Italy. The presentation took place at a dinner dance at Hotel Jefferson, Vice-Consul Alessandro Savorgnan representing his Government.

Meriwether, in a speech accepting the decoration, defended Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, and said as to Italy's present form of government:

"Americans do not like one-man rule, but neither do they like government by mobs." Under the latter designation, he discussed sit-down strikes, and disorders in Seattle and at the St. Louis Ford plant, and added that "like causes produce like results. Mob rule led to one-man rule in Italy," he said, "if permitted to continue in America, it may have that result here. If, unhappily, our democracy breaks down; if law and order and respect for life and property can be secured only by centering the state's power in one man's hands, then may that man be a Mussolini rather than a Stalin."

CONVICT CONFESSES 10-YEAR-OLD MURDER

Washington Lifer, Accused by Mother, 'Willing to Admit the Whole Mess.'

By the Associated Press.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., May 7.—Climaxing three days of disclosures involving a 10-year-old mystery, State Prison Warden J. M. McCauley announced today that De Casto Earl Mayer, life-term habitual criminal, had confessed the murder of James Eugene Bassett.

The warden made public a statement assertedly signed by Mayer saying he had "decided to plead guilty."

Only three days previously Mayer's mother, Mrs. Mary Eleanor Smith, 72 years old, made numerous statements, McCauley said, naming her son as the murderer of Bassett and three other persons.

Mrs. Smith made her disclosures on the eve of her projected release from prison, where she served eight years for participating in the theft of Bassett's car.

The warden said Mayer was not questioned about the killing of a Montana man and woman and an Idaho man in 1921-23, which his mother's statements also attributed to him, but quoted Mayer as saying he was "willing to confess the whole mess."

Because authorities never found Bassett's body, Mayer and his mother were convicted only of automobile theft, but the son was confined for life as an habitual criminal.

Mayer's statement came after police and prosecutors had questioned the mother minutely about the crime and sought unsuccessfully to find the places where she said she and her son buried parts of Bassett's body.

Bassett, son of an Annapolis (Md.) family, vanished from Seattle in September, 1928, after trying to sell his automobile to Mayer and Mrs. Smith. Eight days later the mother and son were arrested in Oakland, Cal., with the car and other of Bassett's effects.

NLRB HEARING BARS PAMPHLET ASSAILING CIO

PURPOSE TO KEEP MEMBERS TOGETHER

Excluded Foremen From Workers' Organization on Advice of Attorney, He Testifies.

The Bussmann Employes' Association, which describes itself as an independent union at the two plants of the Bussmann Manufacturing Co., used a pamphlet which attacks the Committee for Industrial Organization in an effort to "keep all its members together," William Lyons, treasurer of the association, testified yesterday at the National Labor Relations Board hearing against the company.

The company, which manufactures electric fuses and other appliances, is charged with having set up the Employes' Association as a company union and with having discriminated against members of an American Federation of Labor machinists' union.

Lyons said he could not remember where he obtained the pamphlet, which is entitled "Leninism—Lewisism," but added that he and two other employes distributed copies to all of the 400 employes of the plants.

Attacks on C I O.

The frontispiece of the pamphlet has a picture of John L. Lewis, head of the C I O, alighting from an automobile with his wife. The following description is appended: "John L. Lewis, his wife, and son arrive in their chauffeured limousine at the Russian Embassy, Washington, in July, 1937. Lewis and Edwin Smith (National Labor Relations Board) it is said, also dined with the Soviet Ambassador in June." The pamphlet itself contains unsupported statements purporting to show that the C I O was born in Moscow.

"We thought the pamphlet would make it a whole lot easier for us," Lyons testified, "to keep all of our members together. That's why we sent it around. It sort of rips John Lewis up the back and we thought it would be a good thing for them to read."

When Bernard Bralove, N L R B attorney, sought to introduce the pamphlet in evidence, George B. Logan, attorney for the company, objected on the ground that it was not connected up with the company.

Bralove commented: "This book is just a further indication that the Employes' Association is not attempting to carry out the functions for which it purported to be organized. One of the vital elements in the examination of a company union is the actual way in which it does function: whether it participates in collective bargaining or what it does. This book is just a tract against the C I O and shows how to work to keep it out of a plant."

Pamphlet Excluded.

Logan insisted that the association was "only doing what other well-established unions do," and Trial Examiner Theo R. Bland excluded the pamphlet as an exhibit. Earlier in his testimony Lyons had said that the "general idea" for which the Employes' Association was formed was "to keep out outsiders and promote harmony at the plant."

Lyons testified that three months after his organization was formed he and the three other officers sent around word that all foremen and forewomen would have to get out of the association. He said they did this on advice of Isaac C. Orr, attorney who is representing the association at the hearing.

"Mr. Orr told us," Lyons continued, "that at other plants the foremen were in there and that they messed up the associations and it was better that we didn't have them in."

"Isn't it your organization," Bralove asked. "Why did you have to ask Orr?" "We wanted to keep our members in," the witness answered.

"Did the foremen and forewomen kick at being thrown out?" "Yes, they did."

"Why?" "They said they would help keep us together."

"What did they mean by that?" "So that we would have no labor trouble."

Under cross-examination by Orr, Lyons said that the Employes' Association was formed "because we didn't want any strikes." He said that Edwin Schainer, who later became vice-president of the association, took him down to Orr's office for the first visit at which it was arranged to incorporate the association. But Orr brought out that Schainer had to introduce himself first.

Lyons will return to the witness stand when the hearing is resumed tomorrow morning.

CONSUMERS' LEAGUE BEING FORMED TO FIGHT UTILITIES

Charles P. Johnson, Former Army Officer, to Sell Memberships at $1 a Year.

Organization of the Consumers' League of Missouri—"non-partisan, non-sectarian, non-profitable and operated for the general welfare of all consumers and taxpayers"—has been begun by Charles P. Johnson, former army officer, from an office in his flat at 5162A Page boulevard.

In the organization, Johnson told a Post-Dispatch reporter, yesterday, he envisions an agency which by publicity, education of taxpayers and legal action, can save the public in Missouri "several millions of dollars in public utility charges." Millions, he says, are being taken from consumers annually by unfair prices and rates by the utilities "with penalties and usurious rates of interest."

Johnson said he had not yet begun a membership campaign, but when it does begin, some time this month or next, it will involve selling of memberships at $1 annually, or 10 cents a month on installments. He proposes to pay the salesmen 50 per cent of what they collect. The balance, he said, is to be used in the activities of the organization. Among those projected he said, were the holding of public meetings, the maintenance of statistical bureaus throughout the State and, in some cases, the intervention of the association in legal actions affecting rates charged by public utilities.

Frank about finances, he said the organization had spent $300.58 so far on printing, postage and similar expenses. Most of this came out of his own pocket, he said, referring to his account book which showed total donations from friends of $53.50.

NEAR EAST MISSION CONCERT

Benefit at Bishop Tuttle Memorial Tuesday Night.

Those who will participate are Clara Schlief, soprano; Thelma Carroll, contralto; K. Wilbert Bagranoff, tenor; George Dove, baritone; Charlotte Stockton, violinist, and Grace Newman, accompanist.

COURT'S AID SOUGHT ON INSURANCE REFUND

Superintendent Robinson Files Petition at Columbia Asking for Guidance, Funds.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 7.—George A. S. Robertson, State Superintendent of Insurance sought court guidance today in his impending distribution of more than $1,651,000 impounded in the 16 2-3 per cent Missouri inrsurance rate controversy, a fund which was recently placed in his custody by the State Supreme Court in a decision taking the case out of the Cole County Circuit Court.

Robertson filed a petition in the Boone County Circuit Court today, naming five attorneys formerly connected with the insurance case and numerous policyholders as defendants, and asking that the court take jurisdiction over the case, enjoin policyholders from starting litigation elsewhere, adjudicate any conflicting claims to the fund and authorize him to use a portion of the fund for the expenses of distribution or provide some other means for financing that work which, it is estimated, may cost as much as $125,000.

The impounded fund is to be distributed among 800,000 policyholders.

Robertson is represented by the Columbia law firm of Clark, Boggs, Peterson & Becker; Charles L. Henson, counsel for the State Insurance Department; Howard B. Lang Jr. of Columbia and William G. Chorn of Jefferson City.

Attorneys formerly connected with the case who are named among the defendants include John T. Barker, Floyd E. Jacobs, Justin T. Bowersock, Glen C. Weatherby and Ira Lohman. Numerous individuals and corporations who will share in the distribution of the fund were named defendants as representatives of all of the 800,000 policyholders and all who might claim under them. In the list were several Columbia corporations, including Stephens College and the Columbia Hotel Co. and corporations and individuals from elsewhere in the state, including the B. Harris Wool Co. of St. Louis, R. C. Goshorn, Jefferson City publisher, and the Hannibal National Bank.

To Seek Temporary Order.

Boyle G. Clark, of counsel for Robertson, said he would appear before Judge W. M. Dinwiddie here Monday, seeking a temporary restraining order, and that he hoped for a hearing on the petition early in the June term of the Circuit Court. This might enable the Insurance Department to start distribution of the fund in July.

Robertson explained that the action placing the case before the Boone County Circuit Court was for the purpose of "expediting the return of the impounded funds to the policyholders and the prevention of protracted and widespread litigation over the many questions involved."

McKittrick Assails Suit by Insurance Superintendent.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 7.—Attorney-General Roy McKittrick called newspaper men to his office after he learned suit had been filed in Columbia by George A. S. Robertson, State Superintendent of Insurance, asking how the distribution of the impounded fire insurance rate case funds should be made.

"The Superintendent of Insurance, by instituting this suit, is attempting to take $125,000 from the fund that belongs to the policyholders to pay expenses of the lawyers who represent him, and $24,000 for stamps," McKittrick declared. "The Attorney-General was directed by the Governor to handle all litigation in the 16 2-3 per cent case more than a year ago. I have had no notice from the Governor of the withdrawing of that order.

"If the Superintendent of Insurance has authorized this suit without the consent of the Governor, in my opinion it is his duty to discharge him."

Dedication of Veterans' Buildings.

Two new buildings, adjuncts to Veterans' Hospital, will be dedicated at Jefferson Barracks next Sunday. Visitors will be conducted through the $180,000 recreation hall, completed last fall, and the new mess hall. United States District Attorney Harry Blanton will speak at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and a concert will be given by several bands.

ST. LOUIS JEWS TO ELECT 6 DELEGATES TO CONFERENCE

National Emergency Session to Organize in Defense of Fundamental Rights.

St. Louis Jews, in an election to be held next month, will select six delegates to a National Emergency Conference, scheduled for September at New York, as their part in a national effort by Jews to organize in defense of fundamental rights and to combat prejudice.

This is the second time in the history of Jews in America that elections were organized among all segments of the Jewish population, the original occasion being the formation of the American Jewish Congress in 1918.

The St. Louis Council of that organization, headed by William S. Cohen, is in charge of the local election among the memberships of religious, fraternal, cultural and philanthropic groups, each of which has been asked to send delegates to a nominating convention called for May 25 at a place to be designated. The basis of representation will be two for each 100 members or fraction.

Twenty-four nominees will be chosen by the convention, and the six delegates to the National Emergency Conference will be elected by ballot in a three-day election opening June 25. The Jewish population of the city and St. Louis County was estimated at between 50,000 and 60,000 by Harry I. Gale, general secretary of the St. Louis Council, and all above 18 years of age will be eligible to vote.

Mrs. P. A. Orton Gets Divorce.

CHICAGO, May 7.—Mrs. Marie M. Orton, 61 years old, was granted a divorce today from Philo A. Orton, 64, president of the Orton Crane and Shovel Co., on the ground of desertion. Circuit Judge Philip J. Finnegan ordered the decree drawn after Mrs. Orton testified that "Mr. X" and "Mr. Y" named in a countersuit by Orton, were merely "good family friends." Judge Finnegan set May 14 for a decision on alimony and counsel fees.

CLASSICS HELP COURT DISMISS DAMAGE SUIT

Judge Quotes 3 Poets in Denying Appeal of Woman Who Sat Where Chair Had Been.

A quotation from Shakespeare, one from Gray's country churchyard elegy and another from a poem by Eugene Field are contained in an opinion handed down yesterday by Presiding Judge Jefferson D. Hostetter of the St. Louis Court of Appeals affirming the action of Circuit Judge Charles B. Williams in a personal injury damage suit.

The opinion is in the suit of Miss Hazelle Pellett, 1219 Holly Hills avenue, who obtained a jury verdict for $4000 against Thomas W. Garland, Inc., 410 North Sixth street, on account of injuries suffered by her as a result of falling from a chair in the Garland store. Later the verdict was set aside by Judge Williams and she appealed.

The accident to Miss Pellett occurred in November, 1933, when she was a customer in the store. She charged that the chair was pushed from under her by a "tall blond woman," described by a witness as a "hit-and-run driver," who tripped against the chair. Miss Pellett said the chair was placed near where a large crowd had congregated, for which reason it was subject to being knocked by someone in the crowd. The store denied negligence on its part and asserted Miss Pellett fell because she sat in a tilting position.

Miss Pellett's description of the chair as "having tiny legs that kind of flared up" caused Judge Hostetter to comment that she "damned it with faint praise," as Shakespeare would put it, the Court added.

As to the charge of negligence with reference to the crowd of customers the decision sets forth that Miss Pellett was sophisticated, knowing the propensity of a crowd, and while "sages may exalt the allurement of solitude like Gray did when he wrote 'far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,' the vibrant normal human being will yield to natural predilections and joyfully mix with crowds."

Here the Court was reminded of the "joy of a country rustic who, standing in a surging crowd at a circus, and seeing for the first time a giraffe, exclaimed, 'thar ain't no sich animal.'"

Testimony by Miss Pellett that the chair was a "light weight" and not secure prompted the Court to observe it "successfully withstood the mule-like kick of the tall blond and emerged with all four of its tiny spindle legs intact." It was like the little toy dog in Field's poem, "but sturdy and staunch it stands," quoted the Court.

Associate Judges William Dee Becker and Edward J. McCullen concurred in the decision holding the store not liable.

DRIVER GETS 35-DAY TERM

Louis Chapman Indicates He Will Appeal Speeding Sentence.

Louis Chapman, contractor who has frequently signed bonds for defendants in criminal cases, was sentenced to 35 days in the Workhouse, fined $35 and had his driver's license suspended for 35 days by Police Judge James F. Nangle yesterday on a charge of speeding. He had been convicted of the same offense twice previously.

Chapman, indicating that he would appeal, denied he drove a truck 35 miles an hour in South Broadway April 26. He lives at 1455 Madison street.

HEAD OF INDEPENDENTS FIGHTING OLD UNIONS

F. S. Galloway Rates Roosevelt, Green, Lewis and N L R B as Enemies.

Frederick Striker Galloway, former national officer of an American Federation of Labor union, now fighting for "honorable peace in industry" as president of an organization of independent unions, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that by Labor day the independent union would emerge as a dominant factor in American labor.

Galloway's organization, the National Federated Independent Union, is openly a haven for independents characterized as "company unions" by the National Labor Relations Board.

"For that matter, N L R B officials, along with President Roosevelt, William Green and John L. Lewis, are responsible for today's 'stabilized poverty,' and are regarded as enemies by us," said Galloway.

Galloway said he was in St. Louis to confer with leaders of the Employes' Protective Association of Swift & Co., recently ordered disestablished by a trial examiner for the N L R B. He said he probably would discuss the question of affiliation with representatives of the Western Brotherhood of Shoe and Rubber Workers, now under fire in a Labor Board hearing against the International Shoe Co. at Hannibal.

Claims 450,000 Members.

"I would like to take those Hannibal shoe workers in front of the trial examiner and tell them what a rotten mess they are up against," Galloway asserted. He insisted, however, that the Hannibal independent would have to prove to the National Federated Independent Union it had received no financial or other support from the company before it would be eligible for a charter.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the independents are company fostered, according to the Labor Board," Galloway said, "and that just isn't reasonable. I have been accused of being a stooge for company unions, but I challenge the Labor Board to prove that my organization ever accepted a dime from the management of any concern."

The N F I U, with headquarters at Indianapolis, is organizing on an industrial basis and now has a membership of 450,000 in 25 states, Galloway said. The organization, he declared, opposed strikes except as a last resort, unalterably opposed sit-down strikes, believed that the "winner of a strike is the loser," favored high minimum wages and opposed all forms of labor racketeering. While its per capita tax is 10 cents a month for national expenses, local dues average only 50 cents a month. Its constitution forbids assessments for any purpose.

As to Green and Lewis.

Galloway, 46 years old, declared that his gray and thinning hair was one result of his fight with old line unionists, which began in 1922, when he charged fellow union officials with clumsy leadership in the railroad shopmen's strike. He asserted that his trip to St. Louis was one of the first journeys he had made in several years without a bodyguard.

"William Green, who has conducted some of the most vicious of strikes, now is showing his fitness as a labor leader by offering the olive branch to industry and agreeing to a 25-cent minimum wage," Galloway said. "Lewis, labor's new Moses, has created only a paper organization and is now demanding relief funds for the victims of his crusade. Roosevelt is interested only in votes and perpetuating the party. The Labor Board is the biggest farce in history and I am telling my followers to ignore it."

Galloway said he supported the President in his first campaign, but supported Landon in the last presidential election. As proof of his own interest in labor, he showed statistics compiled by the A. F. of L. in 1931 and 1932, when, as an Indiana State Representative, he voted favorably on 46 bills supported by labor.

The union president said he was not given the name until three months after his birth because his father, a leader in the United Mine Workers, was engaged in a violent Indiana strike. And that was why his middle name, "Striker," was chosen, he said.

Galloway said he would return to Indianapolis this week, but would be back in St. Louis May 18 to address a mass meeting. He declined to say where the meeting would be held or to name the sponsoring organizations.

COTTON BELT SALARY INCREASE

C. S. Hadley, Assistant Counsel to Trustee, to Get $8000.

An order increasing the salary of Carleton S. Hadley as assistant counsel to Trustee Berryman Henwood of the Cotton Belt Railroad from $6400 to $8000 a year, effective April 1, was entered yesterday by United States District Judge Charles B. Davis. The application had been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A. H. Kiskaddon, Henwood's chief counsel, said in the petition to the Court that Hadley's work had grown considerably in volume since the resignation of F. C. Nicodemus Jr. last Nov. 1 as general counsel for the railroad corporation.

Toledo City Manager to Speak.

City Manager John North Edy of Toledo, O., will speak at the seventieth anniversary dinner of the Engineers' Club of St. Louis at 7 o'clock Thursday evening at the Congress Hotel. Annual reports of officers will be presented and the club's new officers will be installed.

BEST DOG IN SHOW OF VILLA DUCHESNE

Doberman Pinscher, Winner in Another Exhibition, Gets First Honors.

A four-year-old Doberman Pinscher, judged the best dog in the recent Mississippi Valley Kennel Club show in St. Louis, won the same honors yesterday in the fifth annual Villa Duchesne Kennel Club dog show yesterday.

The sleek, dark-coated Troll von Englesburg also won first place in the class for working breeds. A German-bred dog, it was bought last November by Victor E. Bornstein, Peoria tractor company executive. Winner of many awards in European shows, Troll's photograph is the trademark of the German Doberman Pinscher Club.

The show, an outdoor event in its first annual showings, went under canvas as a result of a driving rain. A tent more than 300 feet long was erected on the grounds at the intersection of Spoede and Conway roads to house the entries and spectators. Mud caused many owners to carry their dogs into the tent. A few waded across a swollen stream holding entries in their arms.

Bang Bang Jack, a pointer, which placed first in the sporting breeds in the Mississippi Valley show, also repeated in yesterday's showing. The dog is owned by Lamargil Kennels in St. Louis County.

A dachshund, Otto von Achat, owned by Donald F. Cutler of Minneapolis, placed first in the hound breeds; a Sealyham, Hillsome Speedwings of Hollybourne, owned by Dr. and Mrs. Noel Young of Lake Forest, Ill., placed first in the terrier class. A pomeranian, Pine Perch Pepper-pot, owned by Mrs. John Bolz, 826 East Prairie avenue, placed first in toy breeds, and a bulldog, Roseville Bangup, owned by Mrs. R. T. Bankson, 414 North Twelfth street, was first in nonsporting breeds.

Dogs which won firsts in classes for their breeds were: Dachshund, Otto von Achat; Chihauhau, La Rey, owned by Nina A. Barber, 6128 Sherry avenue; Pekingese, Chang Wun Wey, owned by Mrs. Mickey Peters, 2908A North Newstead avenue; Pomeranian, Pine Perch Pepper-pot; Toy Manchester terrier, Hoover's Little Colonel, owned by Miss Lulu Hoover, 4809 Labadie avenue; Chow, Tang's Brilliantine Plus, owned by Mrs. W. F. Fienup, 9500 Natural Bridge road; Boston terrier, Iowana's Introduce Me Hagerty, owned by Mrs. David A. Dancer, Lamoni, Ia.; bulldog, Roseville Bangup; Golden retrievers, Rockhaven Whitebridge Nobby, owned by John K. Wallace, Clayton; Cocker spaniel, Velvet Shadow, owned by Dr. P. H. Gregory, 7624 Florissant road; pointer, Bang Bang Jack; English setter, My Flash, owned by F. L. Wolfenden, San Francisco; Irish setter, Ruxton's Mollie O'Day, owned by Jack A. Spear, Tipton, Ia., and English Springer spaniel, Blue Dawn of Flushmore, owned by Mrs. Warren D. Duffield, Omaha.

Technologists Elect St. Louisan.

BOONVILLE, Mo., May 7.—Mrs. Olive Wilson Stone of St. Vincent's Sanitarium, St. Louis, was elected president of the Missouri Society of Technologists at the annual convention here today. Other officers chosen were Sister M. Irmena, St. Mary's Hospital, Kansas City, vice-president; Sister Asteria, St. Mary's Hospital, Jefferson City, treasurer, and Miss Emma Mae Baldwin of Springfield, a member of the Executive Committee. The society will meet in Kansas City next year.

ALDERMAN PAHL TELLS OF VISITING COAL MEN

Denies Lobbyist Quinn Asked Him to Favor Repeal of Ordinance.

Alderman Arthur E. Pahl of the Twenty-fourth Ward, who with two other aldermen accompanied Clarence Vivian Quinn, city hall lobbyist, to a meeting of Illinois coal men at Belleville last June, told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that the purpose of the trip "was to listen to the rumored complaints of the people in that area in regards to the recently enacted St. Louis anti-smoke ordinance."

Illinois coal operators paid Quinn $1500 for his unsuccessful efforts to obtain repeal of the coal washing section of the ordinance to which they objected.

Pahl said he and Aldermen Allan E. Petersen of the Twenty-third Ward, and Charles E. Routledge, Second Ward, were preceded at the meeting by Quinn, who made introductions to several coal operators and business men.

"After hearing the various complaints relative to the hardships which would be placed upon the operators and business people by the ordinance," Pahl said, "I suggested that they circulate petitions to the injured operators and merchants, and forward them to Mayor Dickmann, saying that possibly he could give them some relief. The mine operators said they were promised a second hearing, which never took place, and that they felt they were dealt with unjustly."

There was no discussion with anyone present about the repeal of the coal-washing section of the ordinance, Pahl said, "nor was there a discussion of a fund to be raised to further repeal of that section. If such a discussion had taken place, I would have immediately left the gathering." Quinn never asked him to favor repeal of the ordinance, Pahl said, or told him of any fund being collected.

Petersen, who was accompanied by Quinn, asked him at the City Hall to go to the Belleville meeting with them, Pahl said, and they went in his automobile, first driving to Du Quoin to see coal-washing equipment at a mine.

The three aldermen last autumn organized the Superior Sales Co., announcing they sold anything from Christmas cards to real estate.

"Unusually perfect in material, workmanship and finish." That's the dictionary definition of "De Luxe"—that's why no other name than "DeLuxe" can properly describe this newest Hudson model.

De Luxe in the richness of its new, stylishly patterned and tailored upholstery; De Luxe in its natural wood-grain finish instrument panel with contrasting band of gleaming metal; in its added convenience and luxury touches.

Yet, while you ride as smoothly, comfortably and safely as any millionaire, you pay less per mile than in cars that appeal to you on low price alone.

This new Hudson 112 is not only a "lowest priced" car in first cost; it is setting new records for gas and oil mileage, and freedom from repair expense. Let your own tests prove this—come in and see all your money can buy.

DRIVER IN CRASH GETS 5 DAYS

Man Whose Auto Hit 3 Parked Cars Denies He Was Intoxicated.

Zeno Westrich, a W P A worker, 1724 Elliot avenue, was sentenced to five days in the Workhouse and fined $250 yesterday by Police Judge Edward M. Ruddy on charges of driving when intoxicated and careless driving. His driver's license was suspended for a year.

Westrich testified he had had one bottle of beer before his automobile struck three parked cars at Blair and Bremen avenues April 12. He will appeal.

CLARK COMPLAINS ABOUT MISSOURI'S CORN ALLOTMENTS

WALLACE PROMISES TO MAKE INQUIRY

Senate and House Delegations See Him— Agricultural Appropriations Increased in Committee.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 7. — Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, asserted today that he would seek repeal of the new crop control law unless the Department of Agriculture corrected certain administrative practices in Missouri.

Clark, Senator Truman (Dem.), Missouri, and the House delegation from Missouri conferred with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Department officials on corn allotments in the State.

Clark said they informed Wallace that a "peculiar hardship has been created in six of the Southeast Missouri counties by the application of three allotments at one time. The matter of general allotments for the State was discussed and criticism reviewed. The necessity was urged on the Department for immediate adjustment where corn planting is under way and imminent.

Investigation Promised.

"It was suggested by the Department officials that that part of the difficulties have been caused by lack of complete understanding of the regulations by State authorities, local committees and individual farmers, which would be corrected by a program of radio and newspaper instruction which the Department proposes to inaugurate.

"A complete investigation and review of the whole situation was promised by the Department."

The Missourians also conferred with P W A officials "in the interest of the necessary arrangements for the completion of certain buildings at the University of Missouri, Lincoln Institute and the normal schools of the State, construction of which was authorized by the last Legislature, and to urge the allocation of Public Works Administration funds for their completion."

Farm Appropriation Increased.

The Senate Appropriations Committee approved today the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill, providing for a total expenditure of $1,099,866,000 in the next fiscal year. This is $45,302,000 more than the sum previously approved by the House.

Senator George (Dem.), Georgia, disclosed that the Committee increased the amount to be made available for farm benefit payments from the $485,000,000 approved by the House to $500,000,000.

The committee also approved an amendment which would speed up the payment of $130,000,000 in subsidies on the 1937 cotton crop to farmers found to be complying with the 1938 cotton acreage program.

Senator Connally (Dem.), Texas, said these payments would be delayed until late this fall unless the amendment were adopted, because the Comptroller General had ruled that compliance with the 1938 program must be demonstrated by the acreage harvested.

The committee increased from $15,000,000 to $25,000,000 the funds which would be made available for loans to carry out the farm tenant purchase program outlined by the Department, George said.

MRS. ELIZABETH CROUCH FUNERAL AT 2 TOMORROW

Fatally Hurt in Iowa Auto Accident in Which Two Others Were Killed.

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth H. Crouch, who died Thursday night at Mount Pleasant, Ia., of injuries suffered Wednesday in an automobile collision near there in which two men were killed, will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the Albert H. Hoppe chapel, 4111 Lindell boulevard. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mrs. Crouch, 53 years old, was the widow of Lloyd F. Crouch, formerly a member of the firm of Maxwell & Crouch, horse and mule dealers, who died in 1933. She spent last year in California and on returning to St. Louis visited friends at the Yorkleigh Apartments, 4954 West Pine boulevard. Her brother, Thomas Hopson of Bonne Terre, Mo., survives.

Accompanied by Walter B. Enix, a horse and mule buyer formerly of East St. Louis, Mrs. Crouch was driving to Des Moines to inspect saddle horses when her machine collided with another automobile seven miles south of Mount Pleasant. Enix, who was 52 years old, and Frank Finch, a railroad engineer of Mason City, Ia., who was riding in the other automobile, were killed. Mrs. Finch and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Edward Shannon, were injured seriously. Enix lived in Albia, Ia.

"WE TOOK A PLEDGE TO SAVE LIVES!" Say DODGE ENGINEERS

BUILT LIKE A BATTLESHIP! A battleship is built to withstand far more punishment than it is ever expected to take. That's the way Dodge engineers designed the new Dodge —built extra safety into it—built it to take punishment you'll never give it! See, in the pictures below, how they have done it!

"THAT'S WHY WE BUILT THIS SAFER CAR!"

HERE'S the car that motor experts and safety officials everywhere are talking about! The car that gives such a wonderful new meaning to safety that a prominent New York traffic official says: "It's the achievement of the year...the car that sets the pace for the future."

WHAT IT IS

It's the big new "Safety-Built" Dodge—and it was designed from the beginning to help cut accidents 'way down. In at least 15 important ways, it gives motorists greater protection against today's driving hazards. It's a sensational story...we can't begin to tell it all here ...but we've put some of it in "words-and-pictures" for your convenience. Study these pictures! See for yourself why safety officials say, "This is the safety car America has looked for!"

No other car can give you all the great safety features that the 1938 Dodge offers. Imagine a frame so rugged it could stand the weight of a 3-ton elephant! Picture genuine hydraulic brakes that could control a big truck if they had to! Picture, too, genuine safety plate glass in every single window!...steel walls, steel floor and roof like a vault in the mint!...and the big Red Ram Floating Power Engine with its extra-fast getaway to whisk you out of the tight spots!

MONEY IN YOUR POCKET!

But safety isn't all! Dodge owners say they've never driven a car that's so easy to handle...so gloriously comfortable to ride in. And the famous Dodge economy means money in your pocket every day you own it! Owners report 18 to 24 miles* per gallon of gasoline—and up to 20% savings on oil!

And here's the best news of all! Dodge costs far less than many cars that do not give you as much...yet, remember this: it's priced so close to the small cars that you'll hardly notice the difference! See your Dodge dealer today! See and count all the great Dodge features which make up the 15 safety factors that are so vital to motoring safety today!

Tune in on the Major Bowes Original Amateur Hour, Columbia Network, every Thursday, 9 to 10 P. M., E. D. S. T.

SUPPORTS 6,000 LBS.! If necessary, this double-rigid Dodge frame could support the weight of a 3-ton elephant! That's what Dodge engineers mean by the extra safety factor built into every Dodge!

BRIMFUL OF YOUTH! Vibrant, alive...this new eyeful of streamlined beauty literally personifies youth! There's no engine back-talk here ...when you say "go" to this car—she's GONE!

NO "ROLLER COASTER" RIDE! Dodge airplane-type hydraulic shock absorbers give you added safety because they control both the up and down motion of both front and rear ends of car!

SAFER WHEELS AND SPRINGS! Every week thousands pay to see Jimmie Lynch, daredevil stunt driver, put cars through the most fiendish tests ever devised! Look at the beating those Dodge wheels and springs take as Jimmie comes roaring off a "ski jump"! "I'd be a sucker to use any other car but Dodge," says Jimmie. "It has saved my life literally hundreds of times!"

THE SECRET OF DODGE DEPENDABILITY

Have you ever wondered why Dodge cars have such a great reputation for dependability, ruggedness and long life? The answer lies in the fact that for years Dodge has deliberately engineered and built its cars not only for the first owner, but for the second, third and even fourth owners! Because of this extraordinary dependability, thousands and thousands of new car buyers have switched from other cars to Dodge in the past year. And that's also why those who really know used car values are saying the used Dodge cars offered by Dodge dealers are the finest buys on the market!

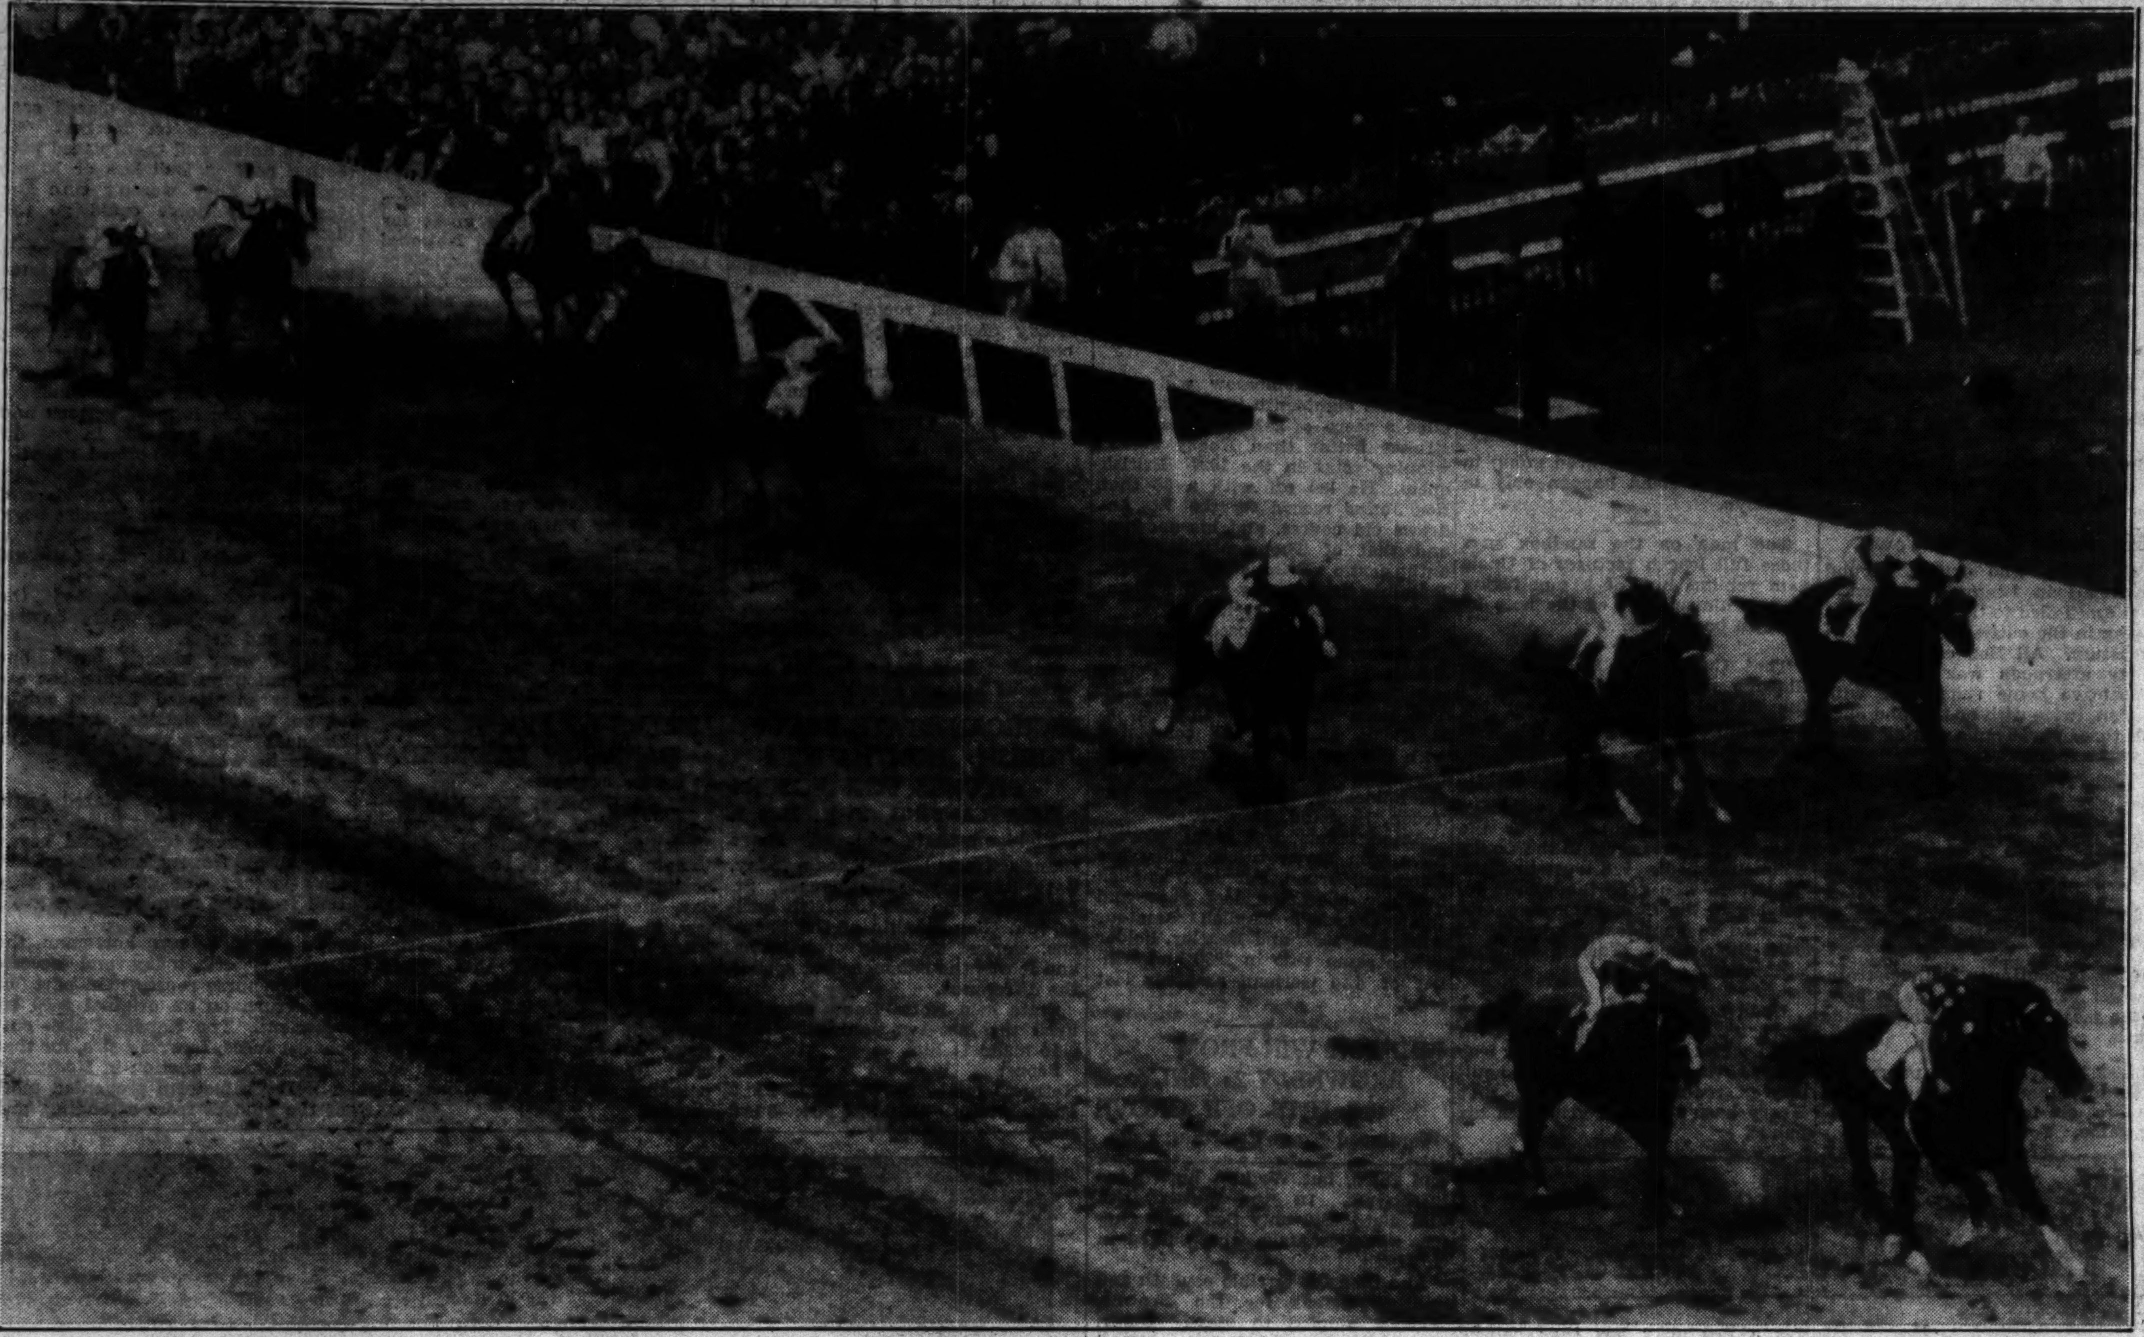
LAWRIN, MISSOURI OWNED, WINS THE KENTUCKY DERBY

Thrilling Finish of Racing's Blue Ribbon Event



—Associated Press Wirephoto.

RED SOX BEAT BROWNS, 7-2; ONLY 4 HITS OFF GROVE

By Herman Wecke.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

BOSTON, May 7.—Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove, who, while serving with Connie Mack's great clubs in the early 30's, was regarded as the greatest southpaw in the major leagues, is still a pretty country pitcher. The Browns found this out here this afternoon, when the 38-year-old left-hander let them down with four hits and handed them a 7-to-2 defeat, the fifth in succession for Gabby Street's club.

It was Grove's fourth consecutive triumph of the campaign, a pretty good record for a 38-year-old.

For 6 2-3 innings, Grove had a real argument with James Elton Walkup. Walkup was just as good as Lefty in that time.

But then with two men on the bases and the dangerous Roger Cramer coming to the plate, there was a meeting of the Browns' Board of Strategy. It was decided to purposely pass Cramer to fill the bases and take a chance on Leo Nonnenkamp, St. Louis boy playing right field for the Sox in place of the suspended Chapman.

Walkup's Undoing.

And that pass, like so many other bases on balls have done for St. Louis pitchers this spring, proved Walkup's undoing. He tried to get Nonnenkamp to hit at an inside ball, but Leo refused to hit at an inside pitch and finally walked. That forced in McNair with the tying run. Joe Vosmik then came through with a real single to left and Jimmy Fox blasted one over the 378-foot mark in left center for his fifth home run of the season and Walkup's 2-to-1 advantage had faded into a five-run deficit.

It was the third time in as many starts this season that Walkup has had one bad inning in a well-pitched contest. Against the White Sox in St. Louis, he faded in the ninth, when he had a three-run lead. Then in opposing the Yankees, he picked on the first to have his poor frame and then twirled fine ball.

Once in front, there was no stopping Grove. He set the Browns down in order in the eighth and ninth rounds.

During the nine innings, the Browns had only four hits, all singles, and after the first, when the Browns managed their only two runs, being aided in no small way by Pinky Higgins' two errors, the Browns had only six base runners and only two of this number got as far as second base, Clift on an infield hit and steal in the third and Heffner in the eighth, when, after he forced Sullivan, he was pushed along to the middle sack on Walkup's sacrifice.

Early Lead Wasted.

It looked like a prosperous afternoon for the Browns, their first since last Sunday in Chicago, in the opening round. With one out, in the first, Higgins missed Clift's grounder. Then Kress popped a single to right and Clift went to third. Mills hit to Higgins and when the third sacker hit Clift with the ball in trying to cut him off at the plate, the Brownie third sacker tallied. McQuinn then singled to score Kress. Bell then smashed the hardest ball of the inning, but it went straight to McNair, with a double play resulting. After that Grove was master of the situation.

The Sox scored in the first on Cramer's single, Nonnenkamp's infield out and Vosmik's single. They had chances in the second

WRAY'S COLUMN

The Match Race Next.

WITH the sixty-fourth Derby out of the way, the next turf excitement is set for May 30, when, at Belmont Park, War Admiral and Seabiscuit will meet in that winner-take-all match race at one and one-quarter miles. Even while the Churchill Downs mob of Saturday was debating Derby probabilites, the War Admiral-Seabiscuit discussion was not completely stifled.

This event is most interesting arranged in several years because of the prestige enjoyed by the rivals. At even weights, 126 pounds, despite the age advantage enjoyed by Seabiscuit, War Admiral has been made an early favorite with the Eastern turf layers. And there will be enough money wagered to hold him as public choice, unless developments reveal a lapse in condition.

On available figures it is not possible to concede War Admiral an advantage or even equality with the son of Hardtack. Seabiscuit has raced oftener, under higher weight and against better contention than War Admiral and his time in setting several records also makes him a standout over the son of Man o'War.

ON ALL THEIR RACES for 1937 and 1938, Seabiscuit's rating figure is 93.3 and War Admiral's 95.2, low figures being the best. On his finest race, the Widener Stakes, War Admiral had a top rating of 90, while Seabiscuit's best figure was 89, in the Bay Meadows Handicap.

In time and weight-carrying ability at any distance up to 1⅝ miles, Seabiscuit has shown better than War Admiral. And the only really worth-while doubt cast against this great runner is that four times in the 1938 and 1937 he has been nosed out at the finish.

There is also the matter of their respective races against Heelfly in which Seabiscuit ran a dead heat with his opponent while War Admiral beat Heelfly two lengths.

It will take the match race to prove the case for either side. But there is one sure thing—if the start is O K, Seabiscuit will be the pursuer for awhile as War Admiral, like his famous sire, will try as usual to make every post a winning one.

A New Track Record.

THE STAGE SEEMS all set for a record breaking performance. Not only is War Admiral a pace-making fool, but Belmont is just about the fastest race course in the country. At least it is rated in the No. 1 group.

But, unless a jury belatedly throws out the Belmont track record for one and one-quarter miles as now shown on the books, there will be no record-cracking in the match event.

That's because the record as it now stands shows that Whisk Broom II, with 138 pounds up, ran the distance on June 28, 1913, in 2:00! That's a performance which has never been equalled and one that very few horsemen really believe ever was made.

Garbled fractional time of this race contributed to this belief.

The record most horsemen really consider authentic is that mile and one-quarter made by the gelding Sarazen in 2:00 4-5.

However, if you are a believer in hunches, it may interest you to know that in the veins of Seabiscuit, runs the blood of the holder of that remarkable 2:00 record. On the dam side Seabiscuit is by Swing On, a daughter of Whisk Broom II.

Caveat Emptor.

WITH DIZZY DEAN on the shelf for a month and the Cubs' management intimating that the Great Diz was bought for $185,000 because he was such a splendid sportsman and baseball type, and not because he might gain 30 victories for them, fans are beginning to suspect that the old Dean soupbone ain't what she uster be.

The natural follow to this thought is that Mr. Rickey still retains his title as the master David Harum of the diamond world. There is an admiring suspicion prevailing that if he set his mind to it, Branch could trade

RUMANIA AND BRITAIN EVEN IN CUP MATCH

By the Associated Press.

HARROGATE, England, May 7.—Great Britain's young Davis Cup team got off to a faltering start in its opening series with Rumania today, splitting the first two singles matches. Cristea Caralulis defeated C. M. Jones, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, 8-6, but R. A. Shayes put the Britons back on even terms by routing O. Schmidt, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

Czechoslovakia Leads.

By the Associated Press.

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia, May 7.—Czechoslovakia gained a 2-to-1 lead in its Davis Cup tennis series with Yugoslavia today as Roderich Menzel and Cejnar defeated the Yugoslavian doubles team of Ferenc Puncec and Demeter Mitic, 11-9, 3-6, 9-7, 6-2. Yesterday's opening singles matches were split.

France and Holland Even.

By the Associated Press.

SCHEVENINGEN, Holland, May 7.—On the strength of an unexpected victory by H. Van Swol over Bernard Destremeau, the Netherlands today finished all-even at the end of the first day's play in her Davis Cup match with France. Van Swol defeated the Frenchman, 6-3, 6-0, 8-6, while lanky Yvon Petra made it one-all by turning back T. Hughan of the Netherlands, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

Ireland Eliminated.

DUBLIN, May 7.—Italy's Davis Cup team put Ireland out of the international tennis competition today as Giorgio de Stefani defeated H. J. Ryan, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, to give the Italians a 3-1 lead with one match to go. Ryan substituted for T. G. McVeagh.

Italy split the first two singles and won the doubles yesterday.

V. Canepele made the final count 4-1 by beating G. Lyttleton Rogers, 5—7, 6—3, 1—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Belgium Leads Greece.

ATHENS, Greece, May 7.—Belgium held a 2-0 lead over Greece today at the end of the first day's play in their Davis Cup tennis series.

Andre Lacroix defeated L. Stalios, 6-1, 6-2, 6-1, and Charles Naeyaert whipped J. Michailides, 6-1, 6-4, 9-7, in the opening singles tests.

Cardinals Release Henshaw And Bush; Warneke Due Today

By J. Roy Stockton.

Frank Francis Frisch shies at making predictions about pennant races, but he's not backward about predicting that the Cardinals will climb high above the lowly position in which they find themselves after the first 16 games of the National League pennant race.

After announcing that Lon Warneke would be the Redbird pitcher in the opening game of a series with Burleigh Grimes' Dodgers this afternoon, Frank was asked how he felt about the way the ball club was going.

"We're going to be all right," he replied. "No, I'm not pulling my hair out. We've played some loose baseball, sure, but there are some things to encourage us. Slaughter is coming along fine and our defense will be better and our pitching will improve. When things start clicking together we'll win our share of games and move upward.

"Take the 16 games we've played. With a little luck in some of them, we could be right up there with the Giants and Cubs. We lost three straight to the Pirates to start the season and we easily could have won those games. Time and again a couple of hits would have changed the ball game and we have the hitters. The team is working more smoothly now and I look for steady improvement."

Frisch said he planned to give Don Padgett a thorough trial in center field. In his late spring training plans Frank had Padgett tagged as a center fielder. Padgett had done most of his outfielding in right, but Slaughter had taken over that territory and the Cardinal manager wanted to utilize Padgett's batting power. Now that Johnny Leonard Martin has a charley horse, Padgett gets his chance. Last year the sorrel-topped fly-chaser showed that he could hit lefthanders as well as righthanders, so he'll stay in there regardless of the opposing pitcher.

The Cardinals' office announced last night that Southpaw Roy Henshaw has been released outright to the Redbirds' Rochester farm in the International League and that Guy Bush, right-hander, has been given his unconditional release.

Today's game with the Dodgers will introduce Leo Durocher in a Brooklyn uniform. Obtained from Cincinnati after the loss of Charley Gelbert's services, he helped the Cardinals to the 1934 pennant, and had his greatest years with the Gas House Gang. A group of friends have purchased him an automobile and it will be presented to Leo at home plate before today's game.

Fined and Suspended.

CHICAGO, May 7.—William Harridge, president of the American League announced tonight Ben Chapman, Boston Red Sox outfielder, and George Tebbetts, Detroit catcher, each had been fined $25 and suspended for three days for their fight at Boston Thursday.

Lawrin Was No. 1 At Post and Finish

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 7.

THE No. 1 horse finished the Kentucky Derby in the No. 1 position today for the second time, according to available records.

Lawrin repeated War Admiral's performance of last year by winning from the No. 1 post position. Records of 37 winners show that the No. 4 spot has started most Derby winners on their way to victory. Seven won from that position.

DAUBER 2ND, CAN'T WAIT THIRD BEFORE 65,000 CROWD

By Murray Tynan,
New York Herald Tribune Racing Authority.

Louisville, May 7.—Herbert M. Woolf's Lawrin, a big horse in the smallest field since 1922, came from behind to startle 65,000 wildly excited race goers here this afternoon to win the sixty-fourth Kentucky Derby. Fighting Fox, full brother to Gallant Fox and the colt which carried the hopes of a racing world touched with sentiment, was sixth and Bull Lea, the colt that nearly everyone thought that the Fox had to beat was eighth.

Woolf is a Kansas City (Mo.) merchant. The classic race that so many thought was a two-horse affair and which attracted everyone and his brother to the blue grass proved to be an upset that will provide food for thought and conversation for some time.

Perfectly ridden by Eddie Arcaro, a master hand at the business of bringing home winners, Lawrin broke from the No. 1 position in the stall gates, was then boxed in and going down the straightaway seemed to be in a bad spot. With many other boys up that might have been the case, but the crafty Arcaro, anxious to ride his first Derby winner, had a bag of tricks up his sleeve. Seeing that he was in trouble, he eased his mount around the clubhouse turn, doing the best he could, and then he let them have it all the way up the back stretch. Lawrin improved his position, but you still would not have given much for his chances. Then he proved his class.

Lawrin Shows Class.

The last turn, graveyard of so many racing hopes was the spot where Lawrin marched to fame and riches and where Fighting Fox, Hal Price Headley's Menow, early pacesetter, and others wilted before the storm of speed unloosed by the standard bearer of the red and white silks of the Kansas City sportsman. Picking up one horse after another, the courageous Lawrin, a son of Insco and winner last March of the Flamingo Stakes at Miami's Hialeah Park gradually battled his way to the lead and was in a commanding position when the field of 10 was straightened out for the run up the home stretch. That was the spot where class told, and Lawrin had everything that was needed. No wonder that Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, trainer of Fighting Fox, said a few weeks ago that Lawrin was a horse to watch.

The finish was Lawrin by a length, William du Pont Jr.'s Dauber second by four and Myron Selznick's Can't Wait third by a head. Menow, the colt that won the futurity last autumn in world's record time but which everyone said was strictly a sprinter, stuck it out to be fourth. No one after this Derby will ever dispute Menow's blinding speed, and they may yet see him win at one mile and a quarter, the distance of the Derby.

The Chief Fifth.

In fifth place, well beaten, was Maxwell Howard's The Chief, which was the hope of his barn after Stagehand became ill this week and had to be withdrawn. Next in line was Fighting Fox, which was a sharp disappointment, and in seventh place came Bert Friend's Co-

Mutuels: Lawrin $19.20, $8.80, $4.80; Dauber $12, $6; Can't Wait $8.20.

Lawrin, saving much ground and reserved off the pace, responded willingly when called upon; came through on the inside, easily wearing Menow down; was under pressure to open up a commanding advantage approaching the final eighth; bore out through the last sixteenth but held Dauber safe. Latter, badly outrun early and slow to respond, began to improve his position when racing wide in the stretch turn; continued near the middle of the track while closing with fine belated speed and determination and was getting to the winner. Can't Wait, close to the pace from the start and rated under steady reserve for about three-quarters, was under strong riding thereafter; dropped back as if through soon after entering the stretch, but came again mildly, outfinished Menow in the last stride. Latter made a good pace under steady rating; swerved out on the stretch turn and weakened under pressure thereafter. The Chief ran an even race. Fighting Fox followed the early pacemaker under a strong hold; was in close quarters for a brief time, leaving the backstretch, but did not respond when urged and gave way badly after a mile. Co-Sport was outrun. Bull Lea, away fast, could not hold a contending place and labored badly the final half-mile. Mountain Ridge had early speed and was inclined to swerve when tiring. Went to post at 4:32 p. m.; at post 4½ minutes. Ten starters. Time of winner, 2:04 4-5.

FIGHTING FOX, THE BETTING FAVORITE, FINISHES SIXTH

BULL LEA IS EIGHTH IN FIELD OF TEN HORSES

Sport, a rank outsider. Bull Lea was eighth and in ninth place was Elooto. They lifted many a toast in frosted glasses to the Bull last night and wagered many a dollar on him, but he simply wasn't there. Used up by the early pace like Menow and Fighting Fox was Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Mountain Ridge, last of a once formidable stable of youngsters that included the ill-fated Sky Larking and Tiger now in temporary retirement with lameness.

For Lawrin there was glory and acclaim as well as the winner's share of the purse, $47,050. For Dauber there was satisfaction, and for Can't Wait there was the consoling thought that he ran a good race. For the others there was only disappointment, and in some cases it was severe. The men and women who jammed this charming town last night and today would have laughed at you if you had told them or offered to bet them that the Fox and the Bull would be out of the money. They thought so much of the Fox that he was made favorite at odds approximately 6 to 5, a decidedly short price in even a short Derby field. Bull Lea was held at 3 to 1 in the closing line.

There was financial loss for the thousands of backers of the Fox, but there was also a loss that horse lovers all over the country and especially here in the blue grass might have felt more keenly than even the evaporation of their cash. The Fox had won the Wood Memorial like his more famous brother and in this race he was standing on the edge of the sands of time. He saw the foot steps in those sands and he might have walked in them.

Fox Looks to Preakness.

In this test he simply was not good enough. There will be others later, however, notably the Preakness next Saturday, and he may yet redeem himself. Just as there was grief for the delegation that could see nothing except the Fox and the Bull, there was elation in the smaller camp following of Lawrin. Many had seen him win the Flamingo and marked him as a good horse. While he was beaten in tests leading up to the Derby he nevertheless had given a good account of himself. Some deserted what they thought was his sinking ship, but those who stuck with loyalty were rewarded at the rate of $19.20 or a shade under 9 to 1. Dauber, which was the mudder of the smallest field since Exterminator won in 1918 but which was lightly regarded on the fast track today, paid $12 or 5 to 1 to place. Can't Wait, soundly trounced by Fighting Fox last week in the Wood, returned $8.20 to show, or a little better than 3 to 1.

Attendance Record Broken.

This was a fine Derby and a fast Derby, and, in the opinion of Matt Winn, the man who made the race what it is, it broke all attendance records. Be that as it may, with such a crowd jammed into the stands and thousands standing in the infield one man's guess is as good as another. The thousands who came for the colorful spectacle saw speed that was enough to make them dizzy. They had expected that especially from Menow and he gave it to them in full measure as long as he lasted.

Lawrin was something of a cut-up at the start and was the major cause of the delay of a few minutes in getting the field off, but the Fox and the Bull were model horses and Menow, away on the outside was just a little anxious. Menow was on his toes, which was what Sonny Workman, who rode him, wanted and Lawrin once or twice was nearly on his head, which was exactly what Arcaro did not want.

Finally the field was lined up and the word given to go.

Alert and just aching to run for Jimmy Stout, Fighting Fox was off on his toes, and so was Menow, on the outside of the gate in No. 10 position. All along the turf had thought that the great early speed would be supplied by Menow and Lawrin, but with the latter not quite ready at the start and pinched in on the run to the turn, it was up to Menow and the Fox, another colt with plenty of early speed. Down the straight away they came for five-sixteenths of a mile and as they approached the first turn it was Fighting Fox by a head, Menow next and Mountain Ridge third and running speedily. The others were strung out and the boys were placing their horses as best they could for the run around the turn.

Menow Shows Speed.

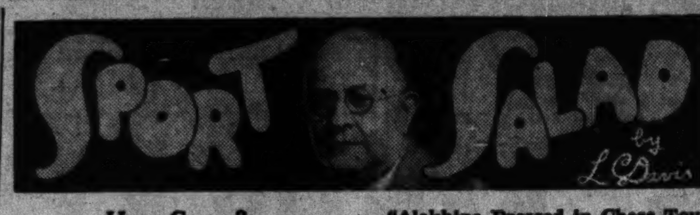
Going around the bend, Menow's great speed asserted itself and he quickly went to the front and opened a gap of two lengths on the Fox. That suited Stout perfectly, because the colt he was watching most closely was Bull Lea and the Bull was well behind him. In the run up the back stretch, Lester Balaski moved up with Can't Wait and Irving Anderson did his best to arouse the Bull with no avail. Arcaro found a willing response from Lawrin and when they hit the end of the back stretch he was in a position to strike.

Galloping around that turn it was Menow still in front with the Fox second and the others closing in. You realized then that a battle of speed was to come and as they made up ground on Menow and the Fox you began to suspect that they were through. A few more strides convinced you of that. The Fox, to the amazement of the gaping thousands, was the first to chuck it, and he was definitely out of the picture when they straightened out. Stout shook his whip at him.

Stout begged him to do his best and then struck the colt a few sharp blows. That may have brought disaster down on his head, because all along Jim Fitzsimmons has contended that the Fox is the type that resents the whip.

Lawrin now was going the fastest, and all Arcaro had to do was to keep him moving. He found no difficulty, and though Dauber was closing well on the outside and Can't Wait was coming strongly on the rail it was apparent that they could not catch up.

Lawrin's time was 2:04 4-5, three full seconds behind Twenty Grand's mark made in 1931. The time was not auspicious, but the fractional figures show that all hands slowed down in the last quarter after the burning pace of the early stages. Fighting for the lead, Menow and Fighting Fox went as follows :23 1-5, :47 4-5 and 1:12 2-5. They were cooked then, but Menow probably was still in front at the end of the mile, which was negotiated in 1:38 1-5. It was Lawrin's turn then, and he had enough left to gallop out the distance in the final figures of the race.



How Come?

IN many cases hoots and jeers
Are music to the players' ears;
So if the scoreboard flashes "boot"
Why should they care a tinker's hoot?

As a matter of fact, we doubt that ball players are as thin-skinned as some people make them out to be. Like murder, a "boot" will out, and they know it.

Of course, the average fan cannot see how the flashing of doubtful hits and errors on the scoreboard could possibly encourage the gay gambolier in plying his nefarious trade. But that is Prexy Harridge's story, and he's stuck with it.

See where there is a demand for a new theme song for baseball. Always somebody trying to take a kick at our established customs. Even "The Star-Spangled Banner" isn't safe.

ALTHOUGH Tom Winsett's futile swing
May twist him like a spiral spring,
Make no mistake about old "Win",

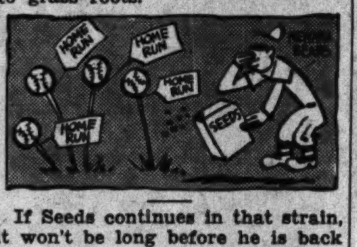
Mr. Seeds Goes to Town.

Bob Seeds, who drifted around the American League for several years and failed to take root, is now playing in the outfield for the Newark Bears. All Bob could do last Friday afternoon was make four consecutive home runs, once with none on, twice with one on and once with three on. That's getting down to grass roots.



If Seeds continues in that strain, it won't be long before he is back in the major league cutting a wide swath.

(Just before going to press, Mr. Seeds hit three more home runs in the first six innings of the following game. You keep score, Oscar.)

Oscar Vitt has protested the fine of $25 for his part in the recent Johnny Allen-Bill McGowan feud in St. Louis. Of course, the customers in the stands couldn't hear what was said, but a bird's-eye view of the situation seemed to bear out Oscar's contention that his only part in the affair was in the interest of peace, as he was continually stepping between the belligerents. But it is still a ball.

"We Were Lucky to Get Through," Jockey Arcaro Says

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 7.—It was a Kentucky boy they helped down from this Kentucky Derby winner, suh—a shyly grinning, happily dazed little fellow named Eddie Arcaro.

There was a wad of mud in the corner of his eye but nothing but praise on his lips—praise for the big bay horse that did everything Eddie asked him to.

"Lawrin," he said almost reverently after they had placed the traditional rose wreath about Herbert Woolf's Derby winner, "is a race horse that can really run a horse race."

As newsreel cameras hummed and newspaper photographers strained at the cordon of National Guardsmen surrounding Lawrin and company, the 22-year-old son of Pasquale and Josephine Arcaro of Newport, Ky., shook hands time and again with his two bosses, Owner Woolf and Trainer Ben Jones.

Praise for the Jockey.

Kentucky's Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler presented to Woolf the cup symbolic of turf's most prized victory, and then Eddie made his way—with the help of the Kentucky National Guard — back through the paddock and to the jockeys' room.

From all sides spectators fired felicitations: "Nice riding, Eddie." "That's doin' it, kid."

The other boys nearly pulled him apart in the jockeys' room. His wreath of roses became in short order just a clump of green stalks with a red ribbon at the bottom as fellow jockeys grabbed for souvenires.

To these boys Eddie told the story of his victory in jockey-room language:

"That Derby," he said, "was one hell of a horse race."

Did he get a thrill out of the race? An inevitable question and it brought the inevitable answer:

"Man, I guess I'm supposed to say it gave me the biggest bang I ever had. Well, I won't disappoint anybody, because it sure did.

"I've been riding eight years, and I've never felt this way. It was a thrill, all right, when I rode my first winner at Agua Caliente, but . . ." words failed the son of Pasquale and Josephine Arcaro.

One of the first jockeys to congratulate Eddie was Jackie Westrope, the boy Earl Sande sent out to ride The Chief.

"It was a clean race," Eddie said, "and how that Lawrin did run."

A Clean Race.

"We must have been seventh at the half.

"Then we were lucky enough—lucky's the word—to get through, and I don't believe it took more than a quarter of a mile to pass those other six horses.

"The nearest we came to having what you would call any trouble was when we were going into the turn. Everybody worked clean, but they were all heading for the rail, and for just a minute they had me scared of my position . . ." Eddie's parents, over at Newport, promised they'd listen to his race on the radio.

So did his wife, Ruth, in New York City.

"I sure wish she could have seen it," Eddie said, "but she couldn't get a plane reservation."

Eddie stuck a leg in his everyday pants then and said:

NEBRASKA CAPTURES TRIANGULAR MEET

LAWRENCE, Kan., May 7.—University of Nebraska won seven firsts in 15 events today but edged out Kansas State only 64¾ to 61½ in a Big Six triangular meet in which the University of Kansas finished a poor third with 35¾.

Kansas State won four firsts, Kansas three and the pole vault ended in a four-way tie with two Kansas State men sharing honors with one from each of the other schools. Not a record fell.

WALKER CUP POST BIRTHDAY GIFT FOR BRUEN

By the Associated Press.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 7.—Four veterans, including former British Amateur Champion Hector Thompson, and four newcomers, including 17-year-old Jim Bruen, today were named to the British Walker Cup team that meets the United States golfers here June 3-4.

Besides Thomson, the others with previous experience in the international links wars are Harry Bentley, Leonhard Crawley and Gordon Peters. The newcomers, in addition to Bruen, are A. T. Kyle, Frank Pennink and Charles Stowe.

Thomson, British champion in 1936, and Bruen were the stars of the two-day, 72-hole trials in which the selection committee tested 24 players. The slim Scot showed a return to the form which placed him on the 1936 team that lost at Pine Valley, N. J.

Bruen, who tomorrow will celebrate his eighteenth birthday, compiled a score of 282 that was three strokes better than Bobby Jones' winning total in the 1927 British open. He led off with a 68 that tied Jones' record for the St. Andrews old course, and his showing and that of Thomson's have led enthusiastic Britons to look for Britain's first victory in the bi-ennial international series.

Bruen, Irish closed amateur champion, is the only Irishman on the team. Thomson and Peters are Scots, the others Englishmen. The team will be captained by J. B. Beck, and will be completed with the naming of one more member after the British amateur championship, which starts at Troon, Scotland, May 23.

Among them, the eight players have won seven titles. They are Thomson, Bruen, Pennink, English amateur champion last year and this; Crawley, English amateur winner in 1931, and Bentley, holder of the same title in 1936 and winner of the German amateur last year.

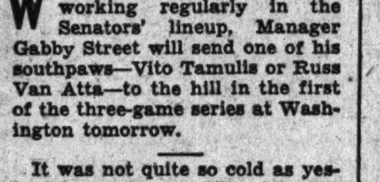
and third, but Walkup hurled too effectively. In the fourth, fifth and sixth, the only Sox base runner was Desautels, who walked in the fifth.

And then the terrible seventh and another defeat for the Browns. McNair singled to start. Doerr, after failing to sacrifice, popped to Kress. Desautels singled and Grove pushed the pair along with a sacrifice. Then came that intentional pass to Cramer to fill the corners. Nonnenkamp walked and McNair scored. Desautels and Cramer rode home on Vosmik's safety, while Foxx trotted around the sacks behind Nonnenkamp and Vosmik on his tremendous smash to left-center.

Walkup went back in the eighth. He retired three men in order, but the damage was done and the Browns had suffered their sixth reverse in seven road games.



BOSTON, May 7.

WITH six southpaw batters working regularly in the Senators' lineup, Manager Gabby Street will send one of his southpaws—Vito Tamulis or Russ Van Atta—to the hill in the first of the three-game series at Washington tomorrow.

It was not quite so cold as yesterday, but it was still a bit chilly, and a crowd estimated at 5000 turned out.

That famous No. 13 was missing from Gabby Street's uniform. "I ain't what you call superstitious or anything like that, but I changed it to No. 31, so that the boys won't have something to say," Street commented.

THOUGH HE MAY have bought slightly damaged goods, as long as business continues firm in the chicle world, Mr. Wrigley can afford to stretch a point and be bland about charging of that 185 grand. But it hasn't fooled Chicago fans much.

The vision of a pennant and a possible world title has been dimmed considerably by the announcement of Dean's temporary retirement from the pitching hill. Whether he will ever again be the Dean of old is still problematical.

His baseball record shows a steady decline in pitching efficiency since 1934.

Last year he had a sore arm.

Your guess as to his future is as good as anybody's, with these facts to help.

Cubs Not Licked.

BUT EVEN THOUGH Dean doesn't come up to expectations, probably he will be able to render some help. And without him the Cubs still are formidable. They figure to give the Giants and Pirates a good race, in any case.

In fact, both major leagues are working out more or less according to forecast, with a couple of teams lagging behind their normal positions. These two teams are the Tigers in the American League and the Cardinals in the National.

The Tigers are beginning to kick up a little dust and the Cards should be heard from a little later, if a shortstop and an ace pitcher can be found.

The Yanks are making their way to the front and by the time all the kinks have been ironed out of the New Yorkers they'll be right there fighting for their usual place in the sun. They'll overtake the Cleveland team, before long.

THE WAY THE GIANTS have set the pace seems to make for another New York National League victory, if no mishaps cramp Terrible Terry's style. That would bring on, perhaps, another one of those subway world series with two New York teams battling for a third successive year—while the remainder of the baseball world grumbled.

It's our idea that a great deal more good would be done to the fan interest in both circuits if Detroit or Cleveland won the American League pennant, while Chicago or Pittsburgh won for the National.

Another all New York year will see the baseball fans invoking the anti-monopoly act; or, worse still, launching a far-reaching sit-down strike. With the radio going at full blast, the strike situation would not be unendurable.

AMBERS TO FIGHT GARRISON WEDNESDAY

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 7. — Lou Ambers, world lightweight champion who handed Jimmy Vaughn a lacing in the Derby Eve boxing show at Louisville last Friday, meets his second overweight test in six days next Wednesday when he takes on Jimmy Garrison, hard-hitting Kansas City youngster, in a 10-round bout here.

Garrison, only 22, has participated in 40 bouts and lost only four. He has never been counted out. Recently he has been campaigning on the West Coast with success.

OWNER WOOLF PAID $500 FOR LAWRIN'S SIRE

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 7. — Partly through sentiment, partly because they thought the big horse really had a chance, Kansas City sportsmen today went hook, line and sinker for Lawrin in the Kentucky Derby, and tonight bookmakers went about with long faces.

"If you see anybody going down the street carrying chairs and tables," said one, "that's my place. They just moved me out."

Many of the bettors placed sentimental wagers on Herbert M. Woolf's horse, and then placed protecting bets on Bull Lea or Fighting Fox. They weren't sure the Kansas City horse could go the distance.

Many sizeable bets were placed, and those who got in on the winter book odds of 15 to 20 to 1 really were in clover.

As crowds swarmed to the bookmakers' quarters to catch the race, later to form in long, hilarious queues before the payoff windows, a smaller, much more serious and intense group gathered in the little office of the Woolford Farm.

The group was made up of Assistant Trainer Carl Arnold, and the stable hands, and exercise boys. They were gathered about a squawky radio, their faces drawn, nerves on edge.

The announcer described the trouble at the post, where Lawrin was a bad actor.

"He'll wear himself out," one said anxiously. And when the announcer mentioned Lawrin might be put on the outside, another exclaimed: "That's the place. That's where he wants to be."

Joy Unconfined.

When "they're off" blared forth, every man in the little group leaned forward tensely and began to snap his fingers, and when Lawrin's victory was announced, they tore from the room with one great whoop.

To Woolf, veteran horseman, the Derby victory today and accompanying purse represented part of the return on an original $500 investment. The Kansas Citian purchased Insco, Lawrin's sire, for that amount at an auction in Kentucky. A heavy rainstorm prevented most of the bidders from attending, and the price was a fraction of the horse's value.

Woolf first came into national prominence as an owner of running horses when he paid $25,000 for Lady Broadcast in 1930. The Lady won $98,875 in five years, most of it under Woolf's colors.

Prior to 1929 Woolf had concentrated on saddle horses for many years, and was recognized as one of the largest breeders of fine saddle horses in the country. One of his horses, Belle Delight, he sold for $27,500.

Developed Handicap Star.

His interest in flat racing dates back to 1929, when he attended the Kentucky Derby and decided to build a stable of running horses. He started by purchasing Dan Burnham, and gradually added to his string. He estimated his profits from the stable in 1931, two years after he entered the field, at $81,000. That was the year his Dark Sea rose from a plater to a handicap star and won the $5000 Steger Handicap at Lincoln Fields.

Woolf Scored Big "Killing"; Top Estimate $150,000

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 7.

HERBERT M. WOOLF, Kansas City (Mo.) merchant, was reliably reported to have scored one of the biggest personal "killings" in Kentucky Derby history as a result of the victory of his colt Lawrin in today's big race.

Woolf admitted only that he had wagered "substantially" in the winter books as well as in the mutuels at Churchill Downs but friends said he was the heaviest winner of any Derby owner since the days when Col. Edward Riley Bradley plunged on his horses, which won four Derbies.

Estimates of Woolf's winnings were put as high as $150,000. Lawrin, regarded lightly in most future books, was priced as high as 30 to 1 before the Kansas City man and his friends started betting. The payoff in the mutuels was on the basis of $8.60 to the dollar.

Bookies generally had no reason to complain about the Derby outcome. Stagehand, heaviest played in the winter books, didn't even start, and the next heaviest supported, Fighting Fox, and Bull Lea, failed to place.

SKETCHBOOK'S DRIVING FINISH WINS $7500 RACE AT PIMLICO

ANAFLAME THIRD AFTER LOSING IN MIX-UP AT TURN

Autumnquest Unable to Stand-Off Hirsch Entry Which Won Third Straight Race This Year.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, May 7. — Far back in the early running, a shifty bay filly named Sketchbook made her move at the right time today to come from behind in the stretch and win the $7500 Pimlico Oaks for three-year-old fillies by a length and a half.

Second choice in the betting, Sketchbook was eighth at the quarter, sixth at the half, third at the three-quarter and second entering the stretch in the mile and a sixteenth distance. Under Jockey Nick Wall's skillful riding, W. J. Hirsch's filly flashed ahead to win going away over Mrs. H. S. Horkheimer's Autumnquest, the favorite, with Anaflame, owned by Belair Stud, third, three lengths back of Autumnquest. Anaflame closed strongly after losing in the shuffle at the first turn.

Sketchbook paid $8.60 for $2. Her time in the roughly-ridden race was 1:45 1-5 as she took the winner's share of $8400 and boosted her year's earnings to $13,275.

It was her third straight victory and her sixth in 12 starts this year.

A thrilling duel in the secondary feature, the mile and a sixteenth $2500 Presgrave Handicap, brought the crowd of 20,000 roaring to its feet as Tempestuous and Mosawtre battled neck and neck for the entire distance. Tempestuous won by a nose in a photo finish that saw the track record of 1:44 equalled.

$8000 LOSS ON DERBY FOR CARROLL'S BOOK

Betting Commissioner James J. Carroll's future book took an $8103 trimming when Lawrin, Dauber and Can't Wait finished one-two-three in the Kentucky Derby yesterday.

The book's total take was $26,[illegible]00 and the payoff on the three money horses was $34,893, distributed as follows: Lawrin, $28,382; Dauber, $5105, and Can't Wait, $1406.

Charley Burke would not quote any figures but he said "we came out all right. We would have lost if Menow had won."

Joe St. John said that it made no difference to him which horse won because the winter book was prepared by means of a graphic chart and he could not have lost no matter which horse won. He said there was a 10 per cent commission on every wager, but declined to give the total handle.

"We did all right," St. John said.

SEEDS HITS 3 MORE HOMERS

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 7.—Bob Seeds, veteran Newark outfielder, who hit four consecutive home runs yesterday, today hit three more in the first six innings of a Newark-Buffalo International League game.

In the first inning Seeds hit a homer with two on. In the third he hit his second, but no one was on base. The next time up, in the fifth inning, he walked, and in the sixth he hit another homer with no one on.

Hal Schumacher Injured as Giants Defeat Pirates

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 7.—The New York Giants made it two straight over their favorite cousins, the Pirates, today with a 6 to 5 victory, but the triumph cost them the services of their ace righthander, Hal Schumacher.

A line smash off Gus Suhr's bat in the sixth inning struck Hal on the chest. He fielded the ball for the putout, but then collapsed on the field and had to be helped to the dressing room. Dr. J. Huber Wagner examined him and sent him to the hospital after diagnosing the injury as severe chest concussions and possible broken ribs.

ILLINOIS COLLEGE BEATS PRINCIPIA TRACK TEAM

The Illinois College track team defeated Principia College, 77½ to 53½, in a dual meet at Elsah, Ill., yesterday afternoon. The Jacksonville athletes proved superior in the field events to gain the victory.

George Cooper, Principia captain, won both the 880-yard and two-mile runs, after having driven all night from Beloit, Wis., where on Friday he finished second in the one-mile race at the Beloit relays.

The summary:

TWO-MILE RUN—Won by Cooper, Principia; McGee, Illinois, second; Moore, Illinois, third. Time—10m. 56.4s.

RAIN PREVENTS SCHOOL GAMES

McKinley's Goldbugs, deprived of a chance to gain their fourth consecutive City High School League baseball victory yesterday when rain washed out the scheduled tripleheader, will try again tomorrow afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium.

The leading Goldbugs have defeated Blewett, Beaumont and Soldan and tomorrow will oppose Cleveland, a team which could cause Coach Lou Maguolo's charges some trouble. Cleveland rests in second place with three victories and one defeat, so a decision tomorrow for Coach Bert Fenenga's nine would put it in the lead with only one game to go.

Tuesday, another postponed game will be played off between Soldan and Beaumont, while Wednesday, what was scheduled as the third part of the tripleheader, will take place between Blewett and Central.

WIDOW ACCUSED OF 11 POISONINGS AT LIEGE

Belgium to Put Woman on Trial Tuesday; 600 Witnesses Assembled.

By the Associated Press.

LIEGE, Belgium, May 7. — Maria Petitjean, 57 years old, known as the Widow Beckers, goes to trial before Liege Assizes Tuesday on charges of having murdered 11 persons by poison.

She is accused of trying to kill three others in the same manner and of falsifying a will.

Six hundred witnesses, gathered by investigators since the widow was arrested in October of 1936, have been subpenaed. The trial may last three weeks. The dossier of the case contains 1800 files.

The trial of mysterious death that runs through the accusations against the "Widow Beckers" began in 1932 when Charles Beckers, her husband, developed a fatal stomach ache.

Mme. Beckers, who married him in 1906, said he died of indigestion."

In March of 1933, the husband's tenant, Marie Doupagne, died. There was a perfunctory inquiry, but it was decided that Mme. Beckers was blameless.

Then followed:

No. 3—On Nov. 2, 1934, L. Beyer, to whom the widow had become betrothed, died of "indigestion."

No. 4—A Mlle. Bossy, died March 20, 1935, "from influenza," or so Mme. Beckers, her "friend," said.

With increasing frequency, then, came the deaths of seven women—most of them old and wealthy widows—whom the Widow Beckers had gathered into her entourage.

In one case, she said the victim was unable to "digest a fat pigeon." Another, she said, died "of a fit of jealousy."

The last deaths, in September and October of 1936, led to public denunciations. The widow, firmly denying all the charges, was arrested.

Her accusers said she appeared to profit by all the deaths, either through bequests or because the deceased had lent her money. Police said they found poison in her room, but she insisted she used it as medicine. First post-mortem examinations showed virtually all the dead were poisoned. But re-examination, made at the Widow Beckers' request, reversed the original findings and brought a negative result. At the trial 20 doctors and experts will testify.

U. S. Steel Spending $250,000,000 for Modernized Plants

"Big Steel" Preparing to Compete With "Little Steel" on Own Ground — Two Views as to Effect on Labor.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, May 7.

UNITED STATES STEEL, one of the world's largest corporations, is about to complete a process of modernization with new labor-saving plants and machinery costing about $250,000,000. This is what was back of the announcement by the company this week of the flotation of $100,000,000 in bonds.

Reports of this bond issue made it sound as if the money would go for plant expansion. Actually, half of it will go to pay back bank loans for money already spent on mechanization, and a part of the balance will go to complete the job of modernization.

In other words, by 1939 United States Steel will have had its face lifted. The old lady of modern industry will be prepared, presumably, to compete with smaller companies that 10 years ago began this business of streamlining production.

Officials of the company at the general offices on lower Broadway here talk about the program in terms of economy. That economy will be realized, obviously, through lowered labor costs, and this despite the fact that hours of work are shorter than at any other time in the steel industry.

What It Means to Workers.

What the program, when completed, will mean in terms of employment is a closely guarded secret. It has been estimated by trade union economists that 85 per cent of all workers in the branch of the steel industry most affected by the modernization program will be displaced. Perhaps the most striking fact that emerges is this:

When the program has been completed and the $250,000,000 spent, the production capacity of United States Steel will not have been substantially increased. Just about the same quantities of pig iron, ingots and finished steel products will be turned out.

Company officials take the line that little or no unemployment will be created by modernization. They concede that certain men will be displaced and that these men may suffer hardships, but they insist that other men will be given jobs created by demand for new uses of steel possible through technical improvements and refinements in production.

There were several reasons for the modernization program. First, "Big Steel" wanted to be in a position to compete in new fields that had been, in part at least, preempted by smaller companies; strip mill production of thin sheets for the manufacture of motor cars and iceboxes particularly. It is in this branch of the industry that mechanization has gone farthest.

Then there was the desire to concentrate production in certain areas. In the days of the elder J. P. Morgan and Elbert Gary the great corporation had been assembled from units scattered all over the United States, with a casual disregard for details fitting such masters of monopoly finance. After that it grew weed-like, sprawling over the country on such a vast scale that it was difficult or impossible to keep up with all its activities.

A third and compelling motive was the desire to compete on an even basis with small, comparatively aggressive producers, such as Ernest T. Weir's National Steel Corporation and the Republic Steel Corporation. "Little Steel" had got the edge on "Big Steel" by starting to mechanize in 1926, and by concentrating production in the new mechanical fields. It was absolutely imperative to catch up with this process if U. S. Steel was to continue to exist.

Started by Myron C. Taylor.

The streamlining process was initiated and largely carried out by Myron C. Taylor, who recently resigned as chairman of the board of directors to make way for a much younger man Edward R. Stettinius Jr., a former St. Louisan. It was the dynamic Taylor who also led "Big Steel" into collective bargaining with a C I O union.

"During our 10-year period," Taylor told his stockholders not long before his retirement, "the changes in the science of steelmaking came into our problem in a decisive way. The demand for open hearth steel made many plants obsolete that were built around the Bessemer process. That is one change.

"A second and greater change was the demand for a character of finished steel that could be made only in continuous mills with

Politics as Business Illustrated In Big Way by Pennsylvania Primary

The Managers Behind the Candidates

Whatever the Outcome on May 17, Practical Politicians and Their Backers Will Divide the Spoils—Men Behind the Candidates and What They Stand for.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, May 7.

PENNSYLVANIA, the politicians' paradise, again is staging a revealing primary battle royal, and whatever the outcome, one thing is certain—professional politicians and their backers will divide the spoils. This commonwealth of Quay, Penrose, Vare, Guffey and Lewis has no favors for amateurs. The plunder is rich and the high prizes are for keeps.

On May 17 the Democrats and Republicans will decide which set of bosses they respectively prefer. This day will see the preliminary yet vital contests for control of the second richest State in the Union and the 70-odd delegates to the 1940 national conventions. It will also determine whether the political power of John L. Lewis, whose shadow falls over all camps, is increasing or on the wane.

A tour of the State and talks with leaders in all groups has impressed the writer that each set of combatants wants to control the State for its particular economic group, whether it be Democratic or Republican, and that in November many political ties will be found less binding than economic and social loyalties.

Traditional Methods of Politics as Business.

The methods are the traditional methods of political organizations led by men for whom politics is a business and supplied with funds by the people who expect to be rewarded; for the rank and file are jobs, which, as "Boss" Tom Pendergast said in his frank interview in the Post-Dispatch last autumn, "are the life-blood of any political organization."

These Pennsylvania politicians and their backers are also following Pendergast's dictum that "organization is the key to political success."

The richness of the top stakes accounts for the ruthlessness of the present skirmishes. Battle royal is the most aptly descriptive word for the melee in which Democrats sock Democrats as well as Republicans, and Republicans follow the same tactics. Because of this warfare among past allies, the situation at first seems highly complicated and often confusing. The strategy becomes clearer when one looks behind the candidates to study the backers and their motives.

In one Democratic camp, Thomas Kennedy and S. Davis Wilson are the candidates of John L. Lewis and Senator Joseph F. Guffey, who have been the effective Democratic bosses of the commonwealth since President Roosevelt almost carried the State in 1932 with their help. Kennedy at present is the Lieutenant-Governor and secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of the World. Wilson is the Mayor of Philadelphia, elected in 1935 as a Republican.

In a second Democratic camp, George H. Earle, the present Governor, and Charles Alvin Jones, Pittsburgh lawyer, are the candidates of State Chairman David L. Lawrence, Philadelphia City Chairman John B. Kelly and Matthew H. McClosky, wealthy Philadelphia building contractor. Earle, Kelly and McClosky switched from Republicans to Democrats in 1932.

In a third Democratic camp is Charles J. Margiotti, who was ousted last week as Attorney-General by Gov. Earle after he had publicly announced a "scandal" involving the alleged purchase of legislation by Pennsylvania brewers for $20,000 and challenged the Governor to discose the details of a $30,000 loan to Earle by McClosky, who has enjoyed big building contracts from the Earle administration.

Former Guffey Ally Reported Backing Margiotti.

Margiotti is said to have the backing of M. L. Benedum, Pittsburgh oil operator, who lent the Democratic National Committee more than $100,000 in 1932, when such a sum really counted. Benedum broke with Guffey after the Roosevelt administration insisted on prosecuting a claim for several million dollars against him. Later he beat the claim in the courts. Margiotti styles himself the "middle of the road candidate" and hopes to add moderate support to his Italian following. To the great delight of the Republicans and the Guffey-Lewis leaders, he has been the most accurate mudslinger against Earle and the Lawrence, Kelly, McClosky crowd. A Harrisburg grand jury is now investigating to see if any of this mud will stick. There is no doubt that he has hurt Earle's chances of nomination. Margiotti ran for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 1934, and after his defeat switched to the Democrats. He was rewarded by appointment to the Attorney-Generalship.

Pinchot vs. James on Republican Side.

Running for the Republican nomination for Governor are former Gov. Gifford Pinchot, who has the backing of his political appointees and supporters during his two terms at Harrisburg, and Superior Court Judge Arthur H. James of Pittsburgh. James was belatedly put into the race by Moe Annenberg, operator of a highly lucrative race-track information service, who recently purchased the Philadelphia Inquirer, often called "the Bible of Pennsylvania Republicanism"; former Senator Joseph Grundy, notorious for his tariff lobbying during Republican administrations in Washington; E. T. Weir, Pittsburgh steel manufacturer, well known for his outspoken opposition to the New Deal; Jay Cooke, Republican, Philadelphia committee chairman, and Joseph N. Pew, multimillionaire oil operator in Philadelphia and an accessible Republican angel when campaign funds are needed.

James' backers have two objectives, and it is hard to see how they can lose both. They are: Control of the State Government and control of Pennsylvania's 75 delegates at the 1940 Republican national convention. James is rated as an excellent lawyer, but an ineffective speaker. The mouthpiece for this group is Annenberg's Inquirer, which the former Hearst circulation hustler in Chicago bought two years ago for $15,000,000.

Republicans Lead in Registration, Democrats in Votes

TOTAL registration in Pennsylvania today is 4,162,000, of which 1,981,000 are listed as Democrats and 2,181,000 as Republicans.

The slight majority of Republicans is not a true indication of the relative strength of the two parties, as was shown in the 1936 elections, when Roosevelt carried the State with 2,353,788 votes, against 1,690,300 votes for Landon. In that year also the Republicans had a substantial majority in registration.

Pennsylvanians explain that many workers, particularly in the public utility and other large industries against employer espionage, play safe by registering as Republicans for the primary, and then vote the Democratic ticket in the regular election.

In the coming primaries, all groups will be satisfied if 2,000,000 votes, or half the registration are cast. Observers say that usually 50 per cent of the registrants take the trouble to vote in the primaries. An unusual primary vote would be 60 per cent.

It is interesting to note that while Pennsylvania cast more than 9 per cent of the total national vote in 1936, when 45,226,455 persons went to the polls, its electoral vote of 36 was only a fraction over 6 per cent of the electoral college vote.

The Guffey-Lewis crowd lost no time in attacking Annenberg by digging up old allegations concerning the activities of him and his brother, Max, in the early days of gangs in Chicago when "heavies" were hired to "persuade" news dealers to step up the sales of the Hearst papers over those of the Tribune and the Daily News. Annenberg has gone a long way up from his Chicago days, and now lives on a Mitten County estate and confers with the Cookes and the Pews.

Candidates for Senate Also Looking Toward 1940.

Even if their candidate, James, is defeated by Pinchot in the primary, his backers can hardly lose. Pinchot is 72 years old and much of the fire of the political warhorse of 10 years ago is missing. He tells his audiences that he has only one ambition—to serve his State once more by cleaning up the mess made by the Democrats during the past four years. His two terms as Governor, he contends, makes him the experienced man for the job. But if he should win over James and James' moneyed backers, they would still have their organization in working order for the selection of delegates in 1940. Pinchot would still have to make an election race against Kennedy or Jones, and at best could control only a few of the delegates to the 1940 convention.

There are two Republican Senatorial candidates, James J. Davis, the incumbent, who was Secretary of Labor in the Cabinets of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, and G. Mason Owlett, State Senator and at present Republican national committeeman. Davis, who is director-general of the Loyal Order of Moose, has shown an uncanny ability to stay in public office. He delayed his announcement for re-election, and his hesitancy was interpreted as fear of the outcome. His chances have been bettered by the battles among the Democrats.

Owlett, as a State Senator, has been a consistent opponent of the Earle administration's "Little New Deal" at Harrisburg. He and Davis have refrained from attacking each other and have centered their fire on the State and national New Dealers. Neither has made a public choice between Pinchot and Judge James, explaining that they are friendly to both candidates for the governorship. Both men are "regular Republicans," and after the primary they are expected to be lined up with the Annenberg-Grundy-Weir-Pew bill payers, who are also looking to 1940.

So much for the principals in the battle. Let us now look at the underlying causes of the interesting squabble among the Democrats who would rule. Why are they knifing each other when practical politics demands that they sit down together and work out a united front?

Three reasons are given by informed Pennsylvania observers, and the principals themselves. They are as follows, but not in the order of their importance: (1) the personal political and economic ambitions of men who have reached an age where this primary may make or break their careers; (2) the rich spoils of office, and (3) the fear of John L. Lewis and his C I O.

Guffey, Earle, Lawrence and McClosky did try to work out a Democratic slate that would please themselves and be acceptable to the voters. There was accord that Earle should run for the Senate, but the insiders could not agree on a candidate for the governorship. Guffey, a lifelong Democrat, who had kept up a skeleton organization on the gleanings from the Republican administrations when it was almost inconceivable that rock-ribbed Pennsylvania would ever desert its traditional Republicanism, thought he should be permitted to name the candidate if he couldn't have the job for himself. His candidate was Kennedy, the ally of John L. Lewis, who had fought at his side in the almost won battle of 1932 and had won with him in 1934, when Guffey became Senator and Earle Governor.

"Political Ingratitude" Guffey's Idea of Cardinal Sin.

To Guffey, the recently anointed Democrats, Earle and McClosky, who had not seen the light until the Roosevelt candidacy in 1932, were guilty of the cardinal sin of "political ingratitude" when they refused to go along with the man who had made them.

Even a White House conference could not restore harmony. Guffey insisted that by all the rules of the game Kennedy should be promoted from Lieutenant-Governor to Governor. But Guffey, the dispenser of Federal patronage and titular boss of the State, could not carry his own State Committee, which turned thumbs down on Kennedy.

Back of Kennedy the State Committee, meaning Earle, Lawrence, McClosky and Kelly, saw the thick-set, dynamic figure of John L. Lewis. If Kennedy were nominated for the governorship and won the election, where would that leave the so-called Democratic leaders, including Guffey? They would be, they answered, mere subordinates of the head of the C I O, who would control the State through Kennedy. Guffey retorted that the Democratic organization could not win without labor support, and that labor could not win without Democratic support.

Feeling secure with 27,000 State jobholders at their back, the State Committee re-

County Gas Co. Rates Not Legally Fixed by State

Property Never Valued by Utilities Commission—Earned 6 Pct. on $8,524,500 in 1937—Assessed at Only $1,427,500.

By SAM J. SHELTON
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

INTERESTING sidelights on the workings of State regulation of utility corporations are found in the 1937 report of the St. Louis County Gas Co. to the Public Service Commission at Jefferson City, showing, among other things, that the company's profit of $511,470 was equivalent to a return of 6 per cent on $8,524,500, or 6.5 per cent on $7,868,700.

The State Commission has never fixed an official "fair value" of the company's property devoted to the public service on which, by law, it is entitled to earn a "reasonable return." In the absence of such appraisal the company is actually unregulated as to rates.

Valuation for the purpose of fixing rates usually is undertaken on formal complaint brought before the commission that existing rates are too high or that a proposed increase would be unreasonable. There have been no such complaints as to this company to bring the question formally before the commission since the commission was established in 1913. The prosecution of a rate complaint is a long and costly procedure, as the City of St. Louis has found in the cases it has conducted before the commission for many years.

Promise but No Performance.

A few years ago the commission announced that it would proceed as rapidly as possible to fix tentative rate base valuations for all utilities in the State, without waiting for complaints to be filed. Because of the mass of work and slow progress in cases based on complaints, not much was done in this respect. Under the uncertainties of politics there have been numerous changes in the personnel of the commission since then.

Incidentally, the rates of the St. Louis County Gas Co., which serves the cities and towns of St. Louis County, are substantially lower than those of the Laclede Gas Light Co., operating in the City of St. Louis, which is now resisting a 6 per cent rate reduction ordered by the commission and affirmed by the Missouri Supreme Court. For 2500 cubic feet used in one month a residence customer pays $3.34 in the city and $2.80 in the county. But that contrast is beside the point that the county rates are not legally fixed.

Comparisons, however, are not taken into consideration by the commission, since the theory of the law is that each utility is entitled to earn a fair return on the reasonable value of its property used and useful in the public service. The commission has sometimes allowed 7 per cent as a fair return and sometimes a lesser rate. In the Laclede Gas Light Co. case it allowed 6.5 per cent.

Since the commission has not made an appraisal of the county company's property, the only measure of its value for rate-making purposes is the amount at which it is stated in its own reports to the commission. At the end of 1937 the balance sheet as reported to the commission gave a total value of $8,836,104 for all assets. The fixed capital, which includes land, buildings, equipment, mains and the like, was listed at $8,086,864. The largest item was mains, listed at more than $2,500,000. "Services"—connections to customers' premises—were listed at nearly $1,500,000, and consumers' meters at about $700,000.

After paying all operating expenses and taxes and allowing for depreciation out of last year's operating revenue of $2,010,224, the company had left the sum of $511,470 applicable to corporate property for return.

This, as stated, provides a 6 per cent return on $8,524,500, which is more than the total fixed capital and just a little short of the entire book value of assets.

Book Value vs. True Value.

Rate base valuations made by the commission usually are substantially less than the book value of assets, one reason being that in balance sheets assets usually are carried at cost without reduction for depreciation. Balance sheets, also, almost invariably include assets which are not used and useful in the public service under commission findings.

One other measure of value of the company's property is available. This is its assessment for property taxes which, according to the general custom in the assessment of all property, is considerably less than actual

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Notes on Labor Board Publicity.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE local office of the National Labor Relations Board recently issued a piece of publicity regarding its activities, particularly with relation to the St. Louis area.

In this propaganda appears the following sentence, referring to employers: "Similarly, it is considered restraint or coercion if general remarks against unionism are made by representatives of management. . . ." Doesn't this sound a little like Russia? Have we got to the point in America that free speech is to be abridged by the N L R B director in St. Louis?

Again there appears this phrase: "Only those who have known hunger for themselves and their children, through unemployment, can realize the extent of intimidation that occurs over a simple statement that the factory will close." When one considers the thousands of people who were thrown out of their jobs in the past year because of the action of some labor leader, I think that the person issuing this statement had, as usual, only one viewpoint in mind; namely, to down the employer.

How about the labor group that has kept workers from earning because of a squabble at the St. Charles Bridge? What do the 3500 workers who were prevented by union leaders from working at Flint, Mich., recently until they paid their union dues, think of union coercion? How is this for intimidation?

PAYROLLS.

Free Flowers for Mother's Day.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

FOR several years, I have been thinking of the many unfortunate children who desire to observe Mother's day.

Why not have an area of park ground set aside for donations of iris and other flowers that will bloom for Mother's day? They could be distributed free of cost, making many children and mothers happy on this day. FLOWER LOVER.

Rivers and Railroads.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I SUGGEST that those who are enthusiastic about the new Alton lake procure a copy of "Inland Transportation," by Miller; then read carefully the editorial entitled, "The Railroad Crisis," in the Post-Dispatch of Feb. 20, then look up the figures of our Government debt and the interest due on it. After which, I wish that one of them would write an article that a dumb fellow like myself could understand, explaining why, when our life insurance is so largely invested in sinking railroads which the Government is continually being called upon to save, the same Government spends colossal sums on river projects.

This amounts to subsidizing boat transportation companies which cannot stand on their own feet, destroying thousands of acres of timber and farm land, while every ton hauled in boats will help to bankrupt the very railroads which the Government is helping.

FRANCIS LA FOREST.

Significant Parentheses.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

"DON'T think of people out of work as the unemployed (ill-clothed, ill-housed and hungry); think of them as a lost market" (from whom no employer's profits can be derived).—Henry Ford.

The words in parentheses are supplied to make the meaning complete.

EXASPERATED.

Western Hemisphere Internationalism.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WASHINGTON, Jefferson and Lincoln labored to save and perpetuate the Union. They preached the doctrine of keeping out of foreign entanglements. They knew that the Western Hemisphere was the promised land and could only remain so if we avoided meddling in European affairs.

Our debt-ridden nation is faltering now from the mistakes of the same citizens who got us into the last war.

If we must become internationalists, let's foster Pan-Americanism and confine ourselves to that. Let Europe fight its own rotten wars, while we build friendship and commerce with Latin America, first advocated by President James Monroe.

GEORGE BERCHEK.

Doing Their Stuff.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

"THE wreath-laying completed, Hitler and Mussolini faced the formation, which unsheathed their daggers and sang the legionnaires' battle hymn. They were loudly applauded."

Tie that one, Barnum.

COMMENDATORE.

In Praise of a Cartoon.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I WANT to tell you that the cartoon in the Post-Dispatch, "Heavy Traffic on the Appian Way," is a classic. I cut it out of the New York Herald Tribune a week ago last Sunday and every time I look at it, I roar with laughter. I have sent it about for others to enjoy. This moment I am mailing it to a son in California. When I look at Chamberlain sitting with his back to where he is going and see France thumbing a ride on Mussolini's chariot, it is just too good for words. FRANCES H. LEWIS.

NAZI POLICIES AND "MEIN KAMPF."

The public part of Hitler's visit to Mussolini has been a series of gaudy military spectacles; behind the scenes, the results have doubtless been to draw the two Fascist governments closer together. Such an understanding with Italy has long been one of the Nazi leader's fundamental aims. Long before he came to power, Hitler expressed admiration for Mussolini, "the great man south of the Alps," and urged a German alliance with Italy.

In this, as in most other features of his policy, Hitler follows closely the program he set forth early in his career. Some observers still speculate as to the Fuehrer's aims and future methods, but such guessing is largely a waste of time, since Hitler's own declaration of his objectives, stated in the bluntest of language, is available to all. He has never repudiated a word of this published program, and he has realized a great part of it.

The blueprint of the Nazi program, Germany's "book of destiny," is Hitler's volume, "Mein Kampf," which has been published in English under the name "My Battle." This work, partly autobiographical but chiefly an enunciation of his dogmas, was written in two parts: the first in 1924, when Hitler was in prison after his abortive revolt had failed; the second in 1926, after he had been freed. The German edition runs to 900 pages; the English edition, from which the harshest language has been excised, is less than 300.

There have been some alterations, but the present German edition differs only slightly from the original. The book is today promoted in Germany as the new national Bible of the new Reich. More than 3,000,000 copies, in various languages, have been distributed. Every nuptial pair receives a copy with the Government's compliments. It is the official text from which all Nazi spokesmen draw their inspiration.

An outline of Hitler's demands in "Mein Kampf" for domestic German policy is an outline of what he has achieved since he became dictator. Parliament, all vestiges of democracy and all political parties must go, he wrote. One man, the Man, must have complete control. The nation must adopt a policy of ruthless anti-Semitism. It must root out Marxist and pacifist elements. The church must be brought under control, its doctrines supplanted by a religion of "blood and soil." The press must become an organ of the Government. By elaborate propaganda methods, the people must be won to Nazi-ism. The labor unions must be displaced by one Government union. Germany must throw off the shackles of Versailles, re-establish conscription, build a powerful army. Every energy of the people must be concentrated on creating military might. And so on through a complete picture of "the ideal national state" as it now stands.

What of foreign policy? Its basic principle, running like a crimson thread through the book, is the reunion of all Germans in a Greater Germany. But Hitler will not be content with restoration of the nation's 1914 frontiers. "They were no protection in the past, nor will they give strength in the future." The annexation of Austria was foreshadowed on the first page of "Mein Kampf" as "a work worthy of accomplishment by all the means in our power."

There remains much to be done. Hitler says so in his guidebook, and Propaganda Minister Goebbels restated the Fuehrer's will recently in a speech when he said: "We've taken only a small part of what belongs to us—there still remains a whole series of items to be liquidated."

By what means is all this to be done? Hitler again is specific in stating that such conquest "is the only one which could justify bloodshed in the eyes of God and of future generations in Germany." And even more bluntly (on page 689 of the German edition): "Suppressed countries are not brought back into the bosom of the common Fatherland by flaming protest, but through a mighty sword."

Hitler's scheme of alliances, as worked out in his book, has been closely followed by the Nazi Reich. The Rome-Berlin axis is one result. Hitler counseled friendship with England, looking to an alliance, and conferences for an agreement between the two nations are now on the agenda.

Hitler denounced Bolshevism in his book, and said: "When we talk of new lands in Europe, we are bound to think first of Russia and her border states." Today, his hunger for new lands is leading him toward Czechoslovakia and the Russian Ukraine, ambitions he has reiterated in recent speeches. France "is and remains the inexorable deadly enemy of the German people"; she must be kept down, even by force of arms. Hitler now says he wants an understanding with France, but he has refused to withdraw or modify the bitterly anti-French sections of his book.

In only one essential detail have Hitler's policies departed from his textbook: in the demand for restoration of colonies. His book demands attention be centered on Europe until every German is restored to the Reich. Some commentators view his present colonial demands as an expedient for trading purposes within Europe. Others, citing his references in "Mein Kampf" to resigning colonial ambitions in order to win British support, think that Hitler now has amended his views of Britain's power, and no longer considers it necessary to make this concession.

When it first appeared, Hitler's statement of his goal was considered a fantastic dream. Those who scoff at Hitler, however, underrate his determination and his ability in the Nazi type of statecraft. Not only has he achieved a great part of his aims, but he has chosen the moment when each step could be taken at a minimum of danger.

"Oh, that mine adversary had written a book," lamented Job. The upholders of democracy need utter no such plaint; their adversary has written a book, and it is a book that reveals the man and his aims more effectively than can any document of his opponents.

SPOILS AND THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

Words of warning spoken recently before the Missouri Association for Mental Hygiene by Col. H. Edmund Bullis, executive officer of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, should be taken to heart. "The fundamental weakness of Missouri's system of mental treatment," he said, "is its lack of a permanent hospital personnel built upon career service. Such personnel cannot be built up with administration of mental hospitals changing with each succeeding political administration."

The appointment of Dr. F. A. Carmichael as clinical adviser for all the State's mental hospitals under the Eleemosynary Board is a step in the right direction. As for the City of St. Louis, every interested agency should insist upon well-qualified personnel for the new Bliss Institute to be opened next year.

The spoils system is bad enough anywhere; in the public health services it is intolerable.

WISE WORDS FROM EMPORIA.

Editor & Publisher, newspaper trade journal, has just published the answers of some 20 newspaper publishers to a pregnant question which it put to them. The question was: "With many essential elements for recovery present, what principal obstacle prevents it?"

The most thoughtful answer came from William Allen White, publisher of the Emporia Gazette, and it is well worth quoting in full:

> The obstacle to the thing we call recovery is not fear of one man. If Roosevelt, Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin were to die within a month, the obstacle would remain. For hundreds of millions of men, round pegs in square industrial holes not functioning to full capacity, although our presidents and dictators all were dead, would still feel that the distributive system of Christendom is not perfect. These hundreds of millions will continue to agitate for a larger share than they now receive in the gross product of the Machine Age.
> Universal education and the common use of machinery have fused a new dynamite of discontent in the world. In Europe the common man has turned futilely to the dictator. Soon the dictator will pass. In America, the forgotten man turned to Roosevelt. Roosevelt also is temporary. His followers are here to stay. Unless the wisdom of man can find some fair way to secure exceptional rewards to exceptional men who have organizing talents and at the same time to establish a universally high standard of living which will satisfy the common man who has only a common talent, we shall have no peace in business and industry.

Mr. White's diagnosis will commend itself to all those who like to see something other than heat brought to bear on an argument.

PROPER PROCEDURE IN THE HOUSE.

The petition method has been used in the House to take the wage and hour bill from the Rules Committee and bring it to a vote. There should be no quarrel with this procedure. It is strictly in accord with the rules of the House and with democratic principles. Committee action on bills is essential to the orderly functioning of the House, and committee restraints making for full deliberation are often of the highest value, but that is not to say that a few men—in this case, eight on the Rules Committee—should be allowed indefinitely to withhold an important bill from a vote.

Government by a committee of Congress, as we have said before, can be as repugnant to democratic ideals as the overstepping of prescribed bounds by a President. The wage and hour bill, at the instance of a majority of the members of the House, is to be voted up or voted down on the House floor—and that, in our system of government, is as it should be.

BEWARE OF THAT BUYER!

The Chicago Tribune thinks that Mr. Wrigley of the Cubs needs a purchasing agent. It has just the man for the place. His name is Joe Weil, "Yellow Kid" to the police of all the Americas. With the "Yellow Kid" as his buyer, Mr. Wrigley would never, the Tribune asserts, have turned over $185,000 in cash money to Mr. Breadon of the Cardinals, besides three players inventoried at $85,000, "for the privilege of paying Dizzy Dean's hospital bills and keeping him on the payroll."

The Tribune may be right. Naturally, it knows its city's celebrities as no outsider can. And yet Mr. Wrigley will do well, we feel, not to act impulsively on the Tribune's suggestion. Here's a time for Mr. Wrigley to hem and haw leisurely and protractedly. It is as a vendor that the "Yellow Kid" has won his renown. Is the dashing, dazzling salesman, when at the other side of the deal, the shrewd, astute buyer?

The two arts are distinctive, in a way antagonistic. There is drama in salesmanship, bravura, too, and the poetic thrust of balladry. Your buyer is a plodding wight. He thinks in prose. His deity is caution. The one is the Virginian of legend. The other is a dickering son of Vermont.

The "Yellow Kid" is an alumnus of his own devious school. He is sui generis. When he appears proffering his bargains, then the hills and valleys ring caveat emptor. But as a buyer, with the Wrigley bullion in his pocket, we have a premonition that the gum king would be deep in the gumbo.

WHEN PEOPLE ARE AROUSED.

Official figures on the vote in Cook County in the recent Illinois primary show that all previous records for a non-presidential year primary were broken. The total vote in Cook County for the major parties exceeded 1,310,000. In terms of registration, the vote reached 66.5 per cent as against 58.5 per cent in the highest comparable primary, that of 1934. It was the issue—Kelly-Nash bossism—which aroused the voters and sent them to the polls.

A similar issue has arisen in Missouri. Shall Boss Pendergast control the State Supreme Court? The answer will be given at the Missouri primary in August.

From what he said down in Oklahoma City, we gather that Mr. Hoover knows just what to do and how to do it—now.

GOOD NEWS FROM STEEL.

One bright light has broken through the dark cloud of declining business indices. The United States Steel Corporation has announced that it will offer $100,000,000 of 10-year debentures to the investing public next month. As explained by Edward R. Stettinius Jr., recently elevated to the chairmanship of United States Steel's board, the new issue will be used to erase present bank loans and to complete the corporation's progress of modernization and expansion, which will require an estimated $50,000,000 or more for the remaining part of 1938.

This latter phase of the financing means that at least half of the debentures marketed will go to produce new business; that refinancing of outstanding loans will not account for the major portion of the issue, as has so frequently been the case in debenture issues in recent years. United States Steel's decision to offer the largest new public industrial financing since the crash—now nearly 10 years ago—is a vote of confidence in the future.

RISING SUN—OR SETTING?

The Rewards of Justice Brandeis

Harvard has tendered honorary degree to veteran jurist, but chances are he will refuse belated tribute; Yale, after years of deliberation, made similar offer and was rebuffed; at 81, "his works are his honors and his sufficient memorial"; Justice has seen his long efforts in the law bear fruit, and his disciples carry on his teachings.

Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner, Washington Columnists, in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THIS spring, if he wishes, Louis Dembitz Brandeis may walk through Harvard yard with the other silk-robed dignitaries, in solemn procession behind the Sheriff of Middlesex County, to the sunny stage under the elms where Harvard awards her honorary degrees. If he wishes, he may hear his own name read out; may listen while President Conant recites his great achievements in brief, sonorous Latin; may receive from Conant's hands a sheet of engraved sheepskin.

Harvard has done herself the honor of offering an honorary degree to Justice Brandeis. The honor comes late. It was 22 years ago that Abbott Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard, joined the pack who cried out against Brandeis' elevation to the supreme bench.

Indeed, the chances are that Harvard has waited altogether too long. At 81, the Justice has passed the age when mundane glories mean much. For him a sheet of sheepskin, even from Harvard, where he first knew the law under Langwell and Ames, has no great significance. The chances are that Justice Brandeis will refuse Harvard's offer.

If Harvard is refused, the president and fellows can console themselves with the thought that their colleagues at New Haven have already experienced the same rebuff. Thurman Arnold, author of "The Folklore of Capitalism," Assistant Attorney-General, and one of those to whom the life of Justice Brandeis has been a beacon, tells the story at his own and Yale's expense.

"When I was on the faculty of the Yale Law School," he says, "they asked us to nominate a candidate for an honorary degree. The faculty named Justice Brandeis. President Angell turned it down. Next year they asked the faculty again. We named Justice Brandeis. President Angell gave in, but the trustees turned it down. The third year they asked us again. We named Justice Brandeis. President Angell approved, the trustees approved, but the corporation turned it down. And the fourth year they asked us again. Again we named Justice Brandeis. President Angell approved, the trustees approved, the corporation approved, but Justice Brandeis turned it down."

Brandeis cares so little for honors and memorials that, although Harvard also wants his portrait, to install beside the portraits of Marshall, Webster and Holmes at the law school Brandeis helped to build, the Justice has refused to sit. The artist who is to commemorate the fourth in the great quadrumvirate of American law must work from a photograph, and hasten each morning to the Supreme Court to catch the expression of life.

And why should Brandeis care where his likeness hangs, or on what honor rolls his name may be inscribed? His works are his honors and his sufficient memorial. Only last week, at 81, he added to his monument a most important ornament—the decision in the Tompkins case, reversing an ancient doctrine of the court and restoring to the states powers of local legislation of which they had long been deprived.

The long battle against the curse of bigness; the Massachusetts savings banks insurance system; the great dissents; the writings from which was borrowed most of the best in the thought of the New Deal; the scores and hundreds of young men who have seen in the life of one man their best lesson—by these Justice Brandeis will be remembered. It must give him more satisfaction than any sheet of sheepskin could, to have lived long enough to watch his work bear fruit. To see his disciples' handiwork in such a public document as the President's monopoly message must make him utter to himself:

"There are rewards in store for one who gives of his best for eight decades."

He is, one supposes, in his twilight now, although his friend Holmes lived and did great work for 10 years and more past 81. He still rises with the dawn, to work in his bare study overlooking Washington for hours before breakfast. He still carries his burden on the court. He still interests himself in great causes. He still offers to younger men the illumination of his advice and his example.

But his pace is not so fast, his generosity with himself not so great. His wife, perhaps, it was who ended the Monday afternoons, at which anyone on earth who wished to take the trouble could see the Justice in his simple living room. Now he sees his friends at tea on Sunday, but they must come by invitation. Now his life is more concentrated than ever, more limited to his work.

His favorite proverb is an old German one which means, "In limitation lies mastery." He quotes it to young men whom he tells not to scatter themselves, to concentrate their effort. One wonders what he has concentrated in himself, unless it be simply living the great life.

POLITICAL IN ORIGIN.

From the Newark Evening News.

IN his message proposing an end to tax exemptions for government salaries and securities, the President states that "the doctrine (of absolute prohibitions) was originally evolved out of a totally different set of economic circumstances from those which now exist." The doctrine is more directly traceable to political circumstances.

When Marshall applied it as a limitation on the state taxing power, the Union was endangered by the nullification sentiment then prevailing. This condition was the Chief Justice's real concern in deciding the case.

Years later, when the court ruled that the Civil War income tax could not be collected on the salary of a state Probate Judge, thus putting the same check on the Federal taxing power that Marshall had put on the state taxing power, the doctrine was "upheld by the great law of self-preservation."

But it has been proved that, in the exercise of the judicial power, the commerce power and other powers, the rule of absolute prohibition is not essential to the preservation of the federal system. It is no more essential in the use of the taxing power. That has been demonstrated by the experience of Australia, which discarded the principle of necessity underlying the doctrine of immunity back in 1925.

One House Is Plenty

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

AFTER the annual meeting of the One-House Legislature League at Columbus last week, there should be a new burst of interest in this basic reform of state government. It is to be hoped that it will survive the period of mental and political indolence which often comes with summer weather.

A major change in the structure of state government is a peculiarly difficult reform to make, for it involves the elimination of a considerable number of political jobs—and at the same time it cannot promise tangible benefits, but only the general prospect of better government.

The crusade for a unicameral Legislature, however, ought to become progressively easier as the Nebraska experiment continues. Nebraska seized the opportunity that awaited Ohio, and became the first State to abolish the bicameral system.

The results have not been spectacular, partly because Nebraska's reform was not as thorough as could have been wished. But there are real gains. Nebraska's unicameral Legislature does its work at far less cost, and this is by no means negligible.

The single-chamber Legislature is just as practical and progressive for Ohio as the small Council is for Cincinnati. Nobody in Cincinnati seriously proposes to return to the old system of having a Council chosen by wards, three times the size of the present body.

Unicameralism in Ohio ought to show even more notable benefits for the general public, because Ohio's legislative system is even more awkward than was Cincinnati's before 1926.

WAR'S TOLL OF LIVES.

From the Des Moines Tribune.

THE commonly accepted estimate is 1,000,000 dead in the 21-month-old Spanish civil war.

The full horror of this total is not expressed by reckoning it as 5 per cent of the nation's population. It is the concentration of the deaths, in the age groups that had reason to expect so many more years of life, that makes it so ghastly.

The classic illustration of this distinction comes from another war which involved Spain. The death rate in the American Navy during the Spanish-American War was only nine per thousand as compared with 16 per thousand in New York City at the same period.

That war was a gentlemanly affair as wars go, and the marksmanship and the victories were pretty consistently on the American side—but the apparent healthfulness of the navy was an illusion due to its selected personnel. It had no old people, no children, no one not constitutionally strong to raise the death rates.

In the present Spanish conflict, war deaths are appalling, even in crude percentage figures. How much worse the toll upon the productive generation!

TOO MANY SCHOOLS.

From the Monroe County Appeal (Paris, Mo.).

THERE is a very simple way to reduce the high cost of education in Missouri. It is to reduce the number of schools. The big State schools are just a mass of overlapping and duplication, making costs at least twice what they should be. There are twice as many district schools as conditions justify. Right here in Monroe County, we have nearly 100 schools, some of them with less than half a dozen pupils. By doubling the size of the districts, teaching costs and school taxes could be cut in half.

ETHIOPIAN ISSUE UP TO MEETING OF LEAGUE COUNCIL

Session Tomorrow With Britain and France Working to Get Recognition of Conquest.

RUSSIA AND CHINA CRITICAL OF MOVE

Single Vote Could Wreck Plan to Appease Italy but 'Recommendation' Would Be Way Out.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, May 7.—The League of Nations Council will open its 101st meeting Monday on the second anniversary of Italy's annexation of Ethiopia, and the big question before the Council is recognition of the East African country as part of the Italian Empire.

A single adverse vote could wreck a Council decision. No unanimous vote, however, is required, for a mere recommendation by the Council — usually the practice on questions of procedure.

Ethiopia's legal existence as an independent state, League quarters indicated tonight, may be treated as just that—a mere question of procedure.

Other issues to be before the statesmen will include:

China's appeal against Japan's undeclared war.

Foreign intervention in the Spanish civil war.

Switzerland's demand for "integral" neutrality.

Resentment in Some Quarters.

Resentment faced the plans of Great Britain and France to have the Council give members of the League freedom to recognize the Italian conquest if they desire to do so.

The French and British foreign offices already have laid the groundwork in the campaign to get this permission, to grant Switzerland neutrality within the League and to push other matters through the Council within a week.

A group including Soviet Russia, China, Bolivia and New Zealand—all members of the Council—are critical of any effort to turn the League into a rubber stamp for British and French diplomatic moves.

The opposition was split in two parts—one anxious to fight the British-French moves in the Council; the other which believed the only way to defeat them was to call a meeting of the League assembly to deal with recognition.

Little Trouble Expected.

The French and British, however, have been doing their diplomatic bargaining in advance of the Council meeting and have met with such success that it was reported in Paris they expected little or no trouble when they arrive in Geneva. It was indicated in Paris that both China and Soviet Russia had been persuaded not to vote against the British-French resolution when it is presented.

League quarters saw this as presenting a new problem for the Council—China's plea for material aid from League Powers in the undeclared Chinese-Japanese war.

It was reasoned Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, China's Ambassador at Paris and representative at the League, would expect something in return for a pledge not to make trouble over the Ethiopian issue.

Italy Condemned in 1935.

Italy was condemned as an aggressor after it invaded Ethiopia in 1935. In October of that year, economic and financial penalties were imposed against it by 52 nations. After the annexation of Ethiopia, these penalties were lifted on July 15, 1936, but the League members remained pledged not to recognize the fruits of aggression.

The Foreign Ministers of France, Britain and Russia—Georges Bonnet, Viscount Halifax and Maxim Litvinov—are expected to arrive here by Monday.

If France and Britain win their fight in the Council, it will amount to League recognition of the fact that one of its members whose representative even sits at its Council table has ceased to exist—swallowed up by another nation which is no longer a member.

Haile Selassie's Delegate.

With Britain and France stand a strange group of allies, for not only their own allies, but the friends of the totalitarian states want to see Ethiopia recognized as Italian. Many of them have accorded recognition already.

Emperor Haile Selassie, still recognized by the League itself as the King of Kings of Ethiopia, has sent his representative and seeks a seat at the Council table when the Ethiopian question is discussed.

Monday's meeting of the Council will be the first since one member of the League—Austria—vanished to make a greater Germany and, accordingly, strengthened the ranks of non-members.

MORE BEDS NEEDED FOR TUBERCULAR CASES

Municipal Facilites Below National Standard, Survey Chairman Says.

St. Louis needs a third more municipal hospital beds for consumptives to meet the standards of the National Tuberculosis Association for adequate treatment of sufferers from the disease, it was stated yesterday at a meeting of the Special Committee on Better Clinic and Hospital Facilities of the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis.

The figures, compiled in a survey of municipal tuberculosis facilities by statisticians of the society, were made public by John B. Edwards, chairman of the special committee, which was formed recently to consider the adequacy of clinic and hospital facilities in St. Louis and St. Louis County.

The national association, Edwards said, has determined a minimum rate for cities of two beds for each annual death from tuberculosis. St. Louis, he said, has a total of 766 municipal beds, whereas it should have at least 1180. Recorded deaths from tuberculosis totaled 590 in St. Louis in 1937.

The tuberculosis beds are in five municipal institutions: Robert Koch Hospital, with 543; City Hospital, 60; Isolation Hospital, 60; Homer G. Phillips Hospital for Negroes, 60, and City Sanitarium, 36. Additional beds are available in private institutions, but only a few of them can be utilized for municipal patients.

STEPHEN L. PITCHER ELECTED HEAD OF LANGUAGE TEACHERS

Prof. Coleman of Chicago U. Tells Convention Two-Year Courses Are Too Broad.

Stephen L. Pitcher, supervisor of foreign language instruction in St. Louis public schools, was chosen president of the Association of Modern Language Teachers of the Central West and South at the close of the organization's twenty-first annual convention yesterday at Hotel Coronado. Pitcher had been first vice-president.

The convention, which opened Friday night, was devoted to discussion of new methods of teaching and reconsideration of the purpose of the study of foreign languages. Several hundred teachers attended.

At the sectional meeting of French teachers, Prof. Algernon Coleman of the University of Chicago suggested that present teaching methods are an attempt to cover more ground than students can successfully undertake in the two-year courses to which 75 per cent of all students limit themselves.

Other sectional meetings were held by teachers of German, Italian and Spanish.

SPECIAL PEWTER EXHIBIT TOPIC OF ART MUSEUM TALK

Miss Mary Powell Will Give Two Lectures on Display; Other Activities of Week.

Gallery talks on the special exhibition of pewter now at City Art Museum in Forest Park will be given by Miss Mary Powell, supervisor of education, at 11 a. m. Tuesday and 10 a. m. Friday.

There will be the usual story hours for children and for boys and girls of high school age, next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, preceded by an hour of drawing and museum games. Miss Jessie B. Chamberlain will speak on "The Artist's Place in the Modern World," Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Politics as Big Business In Pennsylvania Primary

jected the orders of their former boss, dropped Kennedy and selected Jones, a Pittsburgh lawyer, who up to that time had been a negligible figure in State politics. The immediate job was to build him up, and so far the task has been difficult.

Relief Voters Plus 500,000 of C I O.

Guffey walked out of the State Committee meeting, and at first was content to back only Kennedy, who could count on the support of Lewis and the C I O workers. Lewis declared that he could deliver more than 500,000 votes. On his own account Guffey thought he could swing the 200,000 relief voters. Besides Lewis, he had another supporter who claimed he could deliver 200,000 votes, Robert L. Vann, owner and editor of the Pittsburgh Courier, the State's largest Negro newspaper. Vann is a real power among his own people and must be reckoned with in Pennsylvania politics. He proved this in 1932, 1934 and 1936. He told the writer that of the 275,000 Negro voters in Pennsylvania, he hoped to persuade 90 per cent to support the Guffey leadership in the present primary.

Guffey then had a windfall—or perhaps he shook the tree. He formed an alliance with Mayor Wilson of Philadelphia, who had announced his candidacy for the Senatorial nomination against Earle.

Mayor Wilson's Record.

Wilson, according to one Pennsylvania observer, holds the record for the political standing broad jump, and he usually lands on his feet. He was a Wilson Democrat, then switched to the Republicans when they came into power and served as City Controller and was elected Mayor in 1935 as a Republican. By the 1936 Democratic national convention in Philadelphia he had changed his registration to non-partisan, and this year switched over to the Democrats. For the last three years he has had the appointment of the city policemen, firemen, street cleaners and sewer men, a block of working voters who can, if they will, deliver when the time comes.

On paper, at least, Guffey had picked up votes for Kennedy by the alliance. Whether this will materialize is another question. Wilson has jumped around a lot in his political career, and the rank and file can't be expected to imitate the calculated St. Vitus dance of such an adept opportunist.

"Technical" vs. Practical Voting.

Many of the so-called "wise boys" say that Wilson will run far behind Kennedy, especially if there is "technical" voting, which means thoughtful marking of ballots. If, however, there is practical voting, the wise ones say, Wilson has a chance, particularly since many voters have been unfavorably impressed by Earle's admission that he borrowed $30,000 from his State government contractor friend, McClosky. There is a sum the average voter can comprehend.

Guffey, Kennedy, Wilson and Vann are putting on a characteristic New Deal campaign of propaganda to appeal to the poorly paid and unemployed worker, and at the same time denouncing their rivals as economic royalists and public plunderers.

Soft Pedal on C I O Alliance.

In their calculations, they figure that of the 1,981,000 registered Democrats, the majority of those voting will be impressed by a direct claim that Guffey and Lewis have been able to get more relief funds and more advanced social and labor legislation from the Roosevelt administration than any other group. As might be expected, the Kennedy-Wilson propaganda calls itself the Guffey ticket and soft pedals the Lewis partnership. This is done on the theory that the C I O voters know who is behind Guffey and Kennedy will act accordingly, while the farmers, who are hostile to the C I O, will not be frightened.

Lewis, so far, has not made any speeches in the State for the Kennedy-Wilson ticket. After all, he is a resident of Alexandria, Va., and his last voting residence was Illinois. His active participation would play into the hands of the Republicans, Margiotti and the lesser state committee speakers who now are carefully selecting their territory for emphasizing Lewis' part in the primary.

John L. Lewis' Big Stake.

Lewis has a great deal to win or lose by the outcome this month and in November. If Kennedy wins over Jones in the primary, it will be hailed as a Lewis victory, and if Kennedy wins in November over Pinchot or Judge James, Lewis will be in a position to have an important say in what legislation shall and shall not be enacted. If he can swing the great industrial State, his national stature will increase.

The direct national stakes for Lewis are just as great. Pennsylvania has 72 votes in the Democratic National Convention, a large trading bloc with which to confront the convention managers who decide what planks shall be put in the platform and what candidates selected. Those 72 votes will mean much more in 1940 than they did in 1936, because there is a distinct possibility that in 1940 the persons intent on dominating the convention will be President Roosevelt, Vice-President Garner and Postmaster-General Democratic Chairman Farley, who are already showing private antagonisms despite public protestations of harmony. In a three-man fight, 72 convention votes would get a lot of consideration, and Lewis as well as Guffey would have the say as to how, when, where they should be cast.

Those 72 votes are so important that Guffey-Lewis leaders say that if Kennedy loses the nomination to the State Committee crowd, they will immediately start work in the districts to line up convention delegates for 1940. There is no doubt that they could get some, but that would mean a divided delegation, with the parts having nothing of the strategic value of the whole.

A Test of Strength.

The primary will show whether Lewis' strength has slipped with his C I O voters. While he claims a membership of 600,000 to 700,000 in Pennsylvania, the practical politicians on his own side concede that their most optimistic hopes do not reach such a figure for the primary. Several explanations are given for this. One is that much of the C I O membership is on paper and does not represent dues-paying members who will follow the Lewis instructions. The other is that even the loyal members, particularly the United Mine Workers, are feeling the pinch of the extra assessments Lewis has put on them for C I O and political contributions. Many of the miners are working only two or three days a week, and the extra dollar or extra 50 cents means real sacrifice. These men, according to the politicians, are wondering whether the Lewis leadership is worth to them what is coming out of their pockets.

If only about 1,000,000 votes cast in the Democratic primary, Lewis and Guffey can make the most plausible claims for a majority. Robert Vann insists that the Negroes are strongly behind Kennedy, and when this group is combined with the 200,000 on relief and the C I O workers, it is easy to reach a figure of more than 500,000. Of course, there is overlapping in the Negro and relief figures.

Cry of Coercion Raised.

The State Committee crowd concedes that Guffey has the edge with his relief workers when they cry that Guffey is "coercing" the relief voters. He and his subordinates appointed the non-relief supervisors, who in turn naturally saw that New Deal voters were not discriminated against. This week Guffey publicly bestowed the Federal patronage in Philadelphia on Mayor Wilson.

Guffey in turn concedes that the State Committee has control of the State employes and what they represent when he joins Margiotti and the Republicans in crying that these employes are being "maced" to contribute a percentage of their State pay to the State Committee. There are 27,000 such employes receiving annual pay of $30,000,000. The Republicans insist that a campaign chest of $2,000,000 has been raised by this "macing." The "insiders" say that while there has been a shakedown, no such amount has been realized. Their explanation is that if the party in power doesn't get its money from the State employes, it will have to take it from the persons and corporations seeking governmental favors.

Grand Jury Investigation.

The Harrisburg grand jury has already started its investigation of these charges of corruption, coercion and "macing," but except for the $30,000 loan by Contractor McCloskey to Gov. Earle, the charges have made little impression. Pennsylvania has a tradition of "to the victor belong the spoils," and it has not been fogrotten that when Boise Penrose died, more than $200,000 in cash was found in his safety deposit box. The $30,000 loan made a double impression because almost everyone thought Earle a rich man. He is more than well-to-do, but his father put his inheritance in a trust fund from which he can only touch the income.

Even the charges that the brewing interests in the State paid $20,000 to State Committee leaders for favorable legislation has caused scarcely a ripple except in the newspapers, and one of the editors who was making the most of the charges characterized the payment as "chicken feed."

The grand jury, which is a county affair, is expected to continue throughout the summer, and its investigations and findings may have a bearing on the November elections. It cannot report before the primary on May 17, and while the investigation has put Gov. Earle and Contractor McCloskey under a cloud of suspicion, it is not expected to return any indictments for several weeks if then. By that time, the primary battle of the professional politicians will be over and the nominations made. Again one of Tom Pendergast's aphorisms will have proved true. He said last September:

"Nominations are not made by spontaneous popular acclaim. That happens only in story books."

The plot in Pennsylvania is not a story book affair. It is realistic demonstration of the power of professional politicians and their organizations.

CANDIDATE FOR STATE SENATE

George B. Calvin, Attorney, Seeks Seat Held by McMillan Lewis.

Former State Representative George B. Calvin, an attorney, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for State Senator from the Thirty-second District.

Calvin, who represented Franklin County in the 1931 Legislature, has since moved here from Washington, Mo., and opened a law office. He resides at 5836 Cabanne avenue. The Thirty-second District is represented now by Senator McMillan Lewis, a Democrat, who has filed for renomination.

St. Louisan Heads Fraternity.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., May 7.—S. Richard Silverman of the faculty of Central Institute for the Deaf, St. Louis, was re-elected today president of Mu Iota Sigma, a national fraternity for teachers of the deaf. Miss Elizabeth Euwer of Central Institute was chosen secretary.

SCHOOL BOARD'S SURPLUS SHRINKS IN NEW BUDGET

Total of $1,724,868 Indicated Is Less Than Minimum Working Capital Held Necessary.

OFFICIAL SUGGESTS CUT IN EXPENSES

Treasurer Hickey Says Board Must Either Obtain New Revenue or Revise Its Policies.

A tentative budget of the Board of Education for the coming fiscal year, prepared for consideration of the 1938 school tax rate, showed a reduction of the board's surplus at the end of the year, June 30, 1939, to $1,724,868.

This would be less than the minimum surplus or working capital the board has held necessary to meet expenses during the first five months of each fiscal year, while awaiting receipt of taxes. From $1,800,00 0to $2,000,000 of working capital has been required for this purpose.

In the fiscal year 1936-'37 the board's expenditures exceeded income by $125,696 and a recent estimate for 1937-'38 placed this year's excess of expenses over receipts at $346,490. In each instance, the excess was drawn from the surplus account. On the basis of appropriations requested by department heads for 1938-'39, the excess next year would be $1,870,261.

Secretary-Treasurer Philip J. Hickey, in response to inquiry by a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday, expressed the opinion that the appropriation requests should be reduced by $400,000 to $500,000 before adoption of the budget in July. A reduction of $500,000, however, would leave an excess of expenditures of about $1,300,000 more than income, making the surplus at the end of 1938-'39 about $2,200,000.

Outlook for Income.

"It is very obvious," said Hickey, in a foreword to the tentative budget, "that the board is confronted with a problem of obtaining additional revenue or a drastic revision of its general financial policies. A careful study of the sources of income for the last three years would seem to indicate that the income will remain at approximately the figures estimated for 1938-'39 ($10,768,100) unless the valuation upon which the tax rate is based is materially increased or decreased."

After the coming year it will be impossible to continue drawing on the surplus to meet demands, Hickey warned. It would be futile to look for increased contributions from the State, he added, without a complete change in the existing method of apportioning the State school fund.

The $10,768,100 estimate of income for the next fiscal year consisted of the following items: 1938 general taxes, $7,547,000; delinquent taxes, $1,200,000; merchants' and manufacturers' taxes, $807,500; various State funds, $1,006,500; interest on permanent fund, $78,000; rent from board's office building, $55,000; miscellaneous, $74,100.

In comparison, income for the current year was estimated at $11,361,789, of which all but $150,000 was actually received in the first 10 months, and receipts for 1936-37 were $10,798,902.

Requests by Departments.

The budget for the current year counted on $1,800,000 income from delinquent taxes, but in the first 10 months only $1,631,874 was received, in spite of the special inducements for payment in 1937. The board has concluded it can count on no more than $1,200,000 in delinquent taxes annually and on total income of not more than $10,800,000 under present conditions. However, its expenditures for the current year were estimated at $11,708,280 and for the previous year they were $10,924,599.

Estimating a surplus of $3,595,130 at the end of the current year, next June 30, the tentative budget listed departmental requests for 1938-39 appropriations at $12,638,361, divided as follows: Instruction, $8,998,676; building, $2,213,052; supply, $808,100; finance, $582,880; auditing, $30,452; law, $5200.

For the current year, departmental expenditures were estimated as follows: Instruction, $8,644,428; building, $2,089,210; supply, $766,296; finance, $172,245; auditing, $30,900; law, $5200. The increase for the coming year in the finance department would be due to inclusion of $409,473 of already earmarked funds for erection of a new Stowe (Negro) Teachers' College.

Increase in Salaries.

Included in the instruction department request for the coming year was $8,579,266 for salaries of the teaching corps, compared with estimated cost of $8,237,500 in the current year. This would allow for a small increase in the number of elementary teachers and payment of automatic salary increases; it would be subject to a decrease of about $100,000 for salary deductions due to illness.

Among allowances requested for the building department were: Operating salaries, $965,043, an increase of $4252 over the estimate for the current year; operating expenses, $113,000, a decrease of $7000; maintenance expenses, $286,453, an increase of $41,401, attributed largely to greater needs for repairs and higher wages for mechanics.

The board is expected to fix the general tax rate for 1938 at the authorized maximum of 85 cents on the $100 valuation Tuesday, as recommended last week by the Finance Committee. It also will take up a proposal for an $8,000,000 construction program, dependent on a proposed bond issue and Federal grant. With general expenses exceeding income, it has been unable to continue its old policy of erecting new schools with current revenue. The proposed general survey of the school system would include a study of fiscal policy.

SIX NOMINATIONS SO FAR FOR 1938 ST. LOUIS AWARD

They Include Prof. W. W. Burke, Henry J. Gerling and Ex-Mayor Henry W. Kiel.

Six nominations for the St. Louis Award, presented each year to the resident of metropolitan St. Louis deemed to have performed the most outstanding service for the community, have been received so far by the award committee.

One of the nominees is "the business man who, during the current year, has given employment to the greatest number of persons." The others are Julian B. Cohn, for his work as chairman of the Social Planning Council's Relief Committee; Prof. W. W. Burke of Washington University, for his work in behalf of social legislation in Missouri; Superintendent of Schools Henry J. Gerling, for his administration of the public school system; former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, for his work as chairman of the United Charities campaign and chairman of the Municipal Opera Association, and Smoke Commissioner Raymond Tucker, for his services in smoke abatement.

The award, a certificate and $1000, will be for services to the community in the year ending next June. Nominations may be sent to the secretary of the committee, Gilbert Harris, of the Y. M. H. A., or to any member of the committee.

SIDNEY E. SWEET JR. HOME AFTER TEACHING IN CHINA

Son of Christ Church Dean Says War Has Stimulated Unification of People.

Sidney E. Sweet Jr., son of the Dean of Christ Church Cathedral, returned to St. Louis yesterday from China, where he had been teaching English to Chinese boys in the Yali (Yale) School at Changsha since his graduation from Yale University in 1936.

As a result of his observations of war conditions he has concluded that, although many Chinese civilians have suffered terribly and there have been great property losses, China nevertheless should thank Japan for providing the stimulus for unification of the Chinese people.

The war, he said, had resulted in the drawing of opposing factions into common action with the National Government, in closer cooperation among the provinces, in the ouster of provincial governors holding power through private armies, and in the spread of education through moving of educational institutions from coastal cities in the war zones to the interior.

At Changsha, he related, sirens sounded frequently as warnings against air raids. But when the first raid did come last November there were no warning signals. The raiders had come and gone, leaving behind about 100 dead, almost before their presence was realized.

Sweet will speak on China at a luncheon meeting of the Cathedral Men's Club next Wednesday in Bishop Tuttle Memorial.

59 WELFARE AGENCIES PUT ON APPROVED LIST

Charities Committee of Chamber of Commerce Announces Additions.

Approval of 50 more welfare agencies for the year beginning June 1 has been voted by the Charities Committee of the Chamber of Commerce. In the list are:

Adeline Ruenzi Radio Fund for the Blind, Ben A'Kiba Aid Society, Board of Religious Organizations, Boy Scouts of America, Catherine Springer Home, Catholic Outing Home, Catholic Woman's League, Central Institute for the Deaf, Children's Home Society of Missouri, Christian Orphans' Home, Colored Old Folks' Home, Community Fund of St. Louis, Community Music Schools Foundation, Inc., Cultural and Service Club for the Blind, Episcopal Home for Children, Epworth School, Evangelical Deaconess Home & Hospital, Federation of Jewish Charities, The Founders, Frank Wyman Outing Farm for Children.

General St. Vincent Orphan Home, Girl Scouts of St. Louis, The Girls' Home, Goodwill Industries, Grace-Holy Cross, Home for Aged and Infirm Israelites, Home of the Friendless, Hospital Social Service, International Institute, Jewish Hospital, Jewish Sanatorium, Jewish Welfare Fund, Memorial Home, Methodist Home for Children, Missouri Tuberculosis Association, Missouri Welfare League, The Old Folks' Home, People's Hospital, St. Louis Chapter of the American Red Cross, Webster Groves Chapter of the American Red Cross, St. Louis Altenheim, St. Louis Children's Aid Society, St. Louis Circle International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, St. Louis Colored Orphans' Home, St. Louis County Welfare Association, St. Louis League for the Hard of Hearing, Inc., St. Louis Maternity Hospital, St. Louis Obstetric Hospital and Dispensary Association, St. Louis Provident Association, St. Louis Society for the Blind, Social Planning Council of St. Louis and St. Louis County, Sommers Children's Bureau, Tuberculosis Society, United Charities, Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A., Visiting Nurse Association, Veterans' Welfare Association, Urban League of St. Louis, Inc., and Young Women's Christian Association.

One of the agencies in the list approved—the St. Louis Circle, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae—is of more recent origin and received the approval of the committee following a special investigation by a committee consisting of Mrs. Ben Forrestal, Mrs. A. B. Harrington, E. E. Haverstick Jr., and Mrs. Pearl Case Blough, representing the Social Planning Council, and the Rev. Alphonse M. Schwitalla and Emil Brill, representing the Charities Committee of the Chamber of Commerce. It has been the policy of the Charities Committee for many years when a new agency applies for its approval, to appoint a special committee to make a detailed investigation, on the basis of which the agency is either approved or disapproved.

The committee will hold a final meeting next week to complete its work of indorsement for this year.

Gov. La Follette 41 Tomorrow.

MADISON, Wis., May 7. — Gov. Philip Fox La Follette, who will observe his forty-first birthday tomorrow, said today the sore throat which has confined him to the executive residence would not keep him from eating his birthday cake. He described his illness as a common cold which followed his third party speaking engagements in Iowa.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY
JOHN G. NEIHARDT

Suggests Zola's "Nana"

LAUGHTER IN THE DARK. By Vladimir Nabokoff. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

ALBERT ALBINUS, wealthy, respectable, and somewhat dull, might have endured his placid routine and his pallid wife until he had safely passed the dangerous emotional age of 40 had he not encountered Margot Peters in the dark, romantic depths of the Argus cinema. Margot was a waif whose parents had felt nothing but relief when she fled from her home with its soul-grinding poverty. She had managed somehow to exist, not without making humiliating and degrading concessions. Of all Margot's lovers, the artist who had lived with her under an obviously fictitious name and then suddenly deserted her was the only one she remembered with anything save revulsion. But poor girls in post-war Berlin could not pick and choose at will.

She accepted and encouraged the blundering advances of Albinus with resignation and a measure of greedy anticipation. Such a man could be helpful in furthering the scheme she carried vaguely in the back of her head. She wanted to be a cinema star. She was as playful—and heartless and unmoral—as a kitten, and it was not long before her mischievous propensities had brought about a separation between Albinus and his wife. The path of the aging philanderer was progressively downward. Jealousy and fear attended him constantly; he knew that only his checkbook secured Margot's caresses. Though he felt that he had incurred a grave risk of losing her altogether to some sleek film idol, he set about trying to purchase her a career as an actress. When it became evident that she possessed no talent, Margot somehow felt resentful toward Albinus.

Margot's first lover reappeared, and the old attraction was rekindled. The artist, Axel Rex, was a congenital sadist. "As a child he had poured oil over live mice, set fire to them, and watched them dart about for a few seconds like flaming meteors." He had callously abandoned his poor half-witted mother when he fled Germany to avoid the World War. With malicious cunning, Rex contrived to rob Albinus of his mistress, his self-respect, and his wealth.

Mr. Nabokoff's humor is vitriolic, and his scheming artist exhibits a refinement of cruelty that is often an attribute of the literature of a decaying society. Repelling, yet fascinating, is the description of Rex's grotesque game of blind man's buff with sightless Albinus, who senses his despoiler's presence but cannot be sure of it. Margot, in her role as the temptress who gradually strips a sedate gentleman of the last vestige of his pride, suggests Zola's "Nana," though Mr. Nabokoff's portrait of the courtesan is considerably less forceful than that of the French master.

Another Wellsian Dream

WORLD BRAIN. By H. G. Wells. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.)

LATELY, H. G. Wells has been preoccupied with the belief that if man is to cope with present-day complexities of life, the educational systems of the world must be reorganized to bridge the gap "between the occasions that confront us and the knowledge we have assembled to meet them." Hence, he has written numerous articles for newspapers and magazines, and lectured in England and America on that theme. The present volume is a collection of some of these addresses and papers prepared within the past year and a half.

The way to overcome the ills of the world, Wells believes, lies in "raising and unifying, and so implementing and making more effective, the general intelligence services of the world." What is needed is an organization and clarification of the knowledge and ideas that already exist, in the evocation of what Wells calls a World Brain. This World Brain "will replace our multitude of unco-ordinated ganglia, our powerless miscellany of universities, research institutions, literature with a purpose, national educational systems, and the like."

The World Brain is to take shape in a World Encyclopedia, to be edited and prepared by foremost specialists of the day, bringing together the "scattered and ineffective mental wealth of our world." The Encyclopedia "would play the role of an undogmatic Bible to a world culture. It would do just what our scattered and disoriented intellectual organizations of today fall short of doing. It would hold the world together mentally." Wells is convinced that ultimately it "must exert a very great influence upon everyone who controls administration, makes wars, directs mass behavior, feeds, moves, starves, and kills populations." Exactly how the Encyclopedia would influence these controlling forces Wells neglects to say.

It will be obvious, of course, that Wells lives in a quasi-scientific world of his own, creating a cosmos that is completely removed from the actualities of our familiar world. The solutions he offers would perhaps be effective in a world of H. G. Wellses, but in a world of gangster-dictators and 25-million-dollar battleships it must be regarded as a Utopian dream. However, the present little volume makes good reading, and perhaps leaves one with some slight regret that this is not a world of H. G. Wellses.

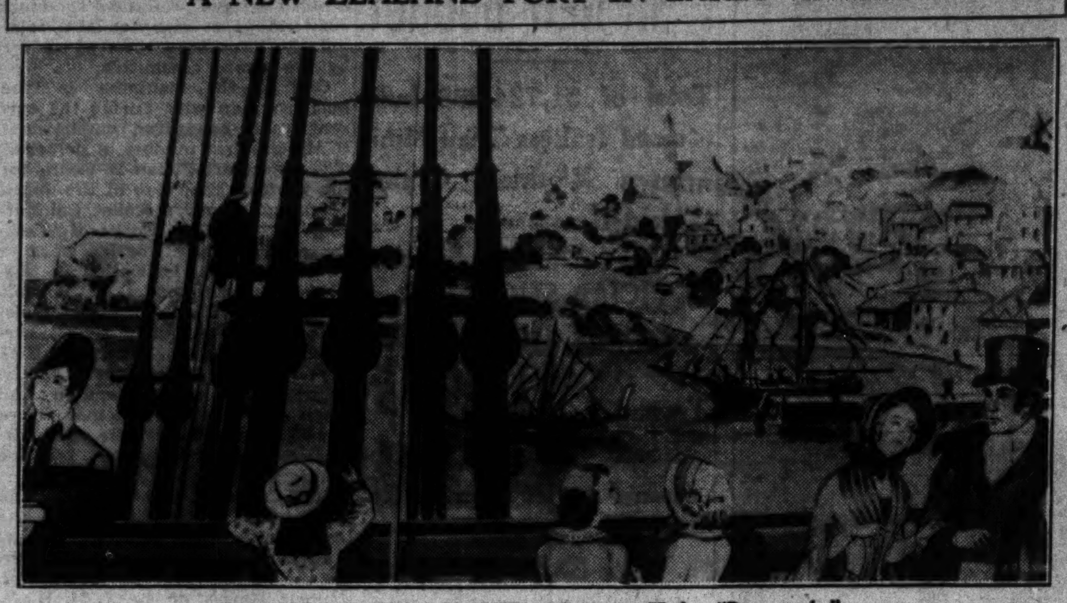
A NEW ZEALAND PORT IN EARLY DAYS



From a Painting by John O'Hara Cosgrave II for "Promenade."

Antipodean Pioneering

PROMENADE. By G. B. Lancaster. (Reynal & Hitchcock, Inc., New York.)

"SO THERE it went on, this insatiable promenade of the generations. Two and two . . . looking into each others' eyes and never seeing where they were going, or looking aside and seeing too far."

For the Lovels of the English aristocracy, the promenade went on during the nineteenth century in New Zealand, where in 1839, his fortunes ruined by the long wars on the continent, Peregrine, strait-laced, haughty leader of the family, had led his older brother, Sir John, and his buxom wife, Caroline; Maj. Henry Lovel, the family bachelor; Jermyn, a young, fiery orphan cousin; and his own frightened, 15-year-old bride, Sally. Life was very different in the huts made of cabbage-tree trunks from what it had been at Lovel Hall, but meek little Sally, like the obedient, nineteenth-century wife she was, baked, washed, mended, and bore Peregrine several sons to help him found his dynasty in the new country. And the fortunes of the Lovels followed the fortunes of New Zealand.

The story is handled in much the same way as the author's earlier, equally interesting "Pageant," which dealt with English colonization in Tasmania, and the characters are strongly reminiscent of those in the earlier novel.

For some who like their romances romantic and adventurous and a little heart-breaking, the story of the Lovel love affairs will be the chief interest of the book. And for those who find the plethora of romance a little burdensome, there is compensation in the really magnificent panorama of life in New Zealand during those most important years in its history from about 1840 to 1900.

Miss Lancaster (Edith Lyttleton) writes in a vigorous style of the curious blending of English reserve and tradition with rough colonial ways in the early days of colonization, of the tragic conflict with the Maoris, proud native race rich in its own traditions despite its savagery, and of the more tragic intermingling of the two races. She makes very real the misunderstandings between the colonists and the Home Government—the mismanagement which kept the country in a state of confusion—and the inborn loyalty of the colonists to England, which, in spite of their dissatisfaction, kept them thoroughly English. "Promenade" is a book that is well worth reading.

Stanley Vestal's Latest

RICH materials for a score of novels exist in the recorded history of the taking of New Mexico by the United States in the late 1840s. Stanley Vestal has used some of these sources for his present book. It relates the story of the troubled affairs of John Martok, son of a mountain man, and Molly Revell, willful daughter of Kentucky.

The incessant political and military intrigues in New Mexico were always causing them trouble. Then, too, Molly's worthless husband, Lieut. Revell, was forever popping up to complicate matters. When Revell started for the Ute country with some spurious land grants to take forcible possession of Martok's grazing grounds, the Utes jumped him. He got away and hid in the mountains.

Martok, hot on Revell's trail, ran into the Ute war party, and a perfectly grand fight followed. Then, of course, John still had to settle with Revell.

Reviews Fascist Possibilities

YOU CAN'T DO THAT. By George Seldes. (Modern Age Books, Inc., New York.)

THE author of "You Can't Do That" is neither alarmist nor prophet. He does not say that for America Fascism is just around the corner. He does contend that of the three conditions necessary for the development of Fascism, two already are in full swing.

The first of these conditions, according to Seldes, is a willingness on the part of the propertied classes to "subsidize a pro-Fascist movement." He finds proof of this willingness in the vast amounts of corporation money which have been poured into such organizations as the American Liberty League and the National Civic Federation. He takes cognizance of the avowed democratic principles of these groups, but repeats George Washington's warning against "the impostures of pretended patriotism." The so-called "60 ruling families" support such organizations, he asserts, because they see in them the nucleus of a mass anti-labor, pro-dictatorship movement. Seldes points out that Big Business always has been loud in its lip service to the Constitution. He charges, however, that by deed it has demonstrated its desire to "make a desert of the Bill of Rights."

He cites the House of Morgan's $100,000,000 loan to bankrupt Italy, the indorsement of Hitler and Mussolini by William Randolph Hearst, Charles M. Schwab, and other corporation heads. Such incidents, he contends, show that America's "economic royalists" feel that only in a labor-regimenting dictatorship is there a refuge for profits jeopardized by economic unrest and militant labor.

A second factor vital to Fascism, Seldes says, is the existence of an armed force subservient to the propertied classes. In this connection, he charges that the United States War Department and the American Legion have demonstrated "clear Fascist leanings." In 1928, a War Department manual contemptuously defined democracy as a "government of the masses" whose "attitude toward property is Communistic." A few years later, another department manual instructed soldiers to "shoot to kill" in strike disturbances. Protests have caused both manuals to be withdrawn, but, according to Seldes, the "shoot to kill" booklet is still the Bible of the National Guard, State militias, and vigilante groups.

Seldes lists the "right demagogue" as the third prerequisite for Fascism. He sees as yet no American Hitler; but he does see a tragic "mental inability on the part of vast strata of society to distinguish between the real libertarians and the enemies of liberty quoting the founding fathers."

Though the picture is gloomy, Fascism can be averted, Seldes believes, if liberals, radicals, workers and intellectuals will lay aside political differences and unite in a pure preserve-democracy program.

The Death Song Of the Sacs

WIND OVER WISCONSIN. By August Derleth. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

THE wind that walked over Wisconsin in the time of the early 1830s was weighted with portents of evil for Black Hawk and his people. He spoke of it to his white friend, Chalfonte Pierneau, giving him warning of the hopeless war that was to come—"even as the leaves go with the wind, we shall go." That war against the white chiefs would be hopeless, he well knew; but his people had suffered wrongs at the hands of the white men, who had taken away their homes, their cornfields, and even their burying ground, and his braves were asking whether Black Hawk was their leader or a woman. Black Hawk could not endure that. He was Chieftain of the Sacs. He had the ancient medicine bags of Thunder, his grandfather. It was his fate to lead his people, even though the wind over Wisconsin might drive them as it drove the leaves.

"Wind Over Wisconsin" sings the death song of the Sacs, robbed, cheated, tricked, and murdered. Through the story runs Pierneau's friendship for Black Hawk, deepened by the French trader's detestation of the white men's deeds. Set against the conflict is serenity of life, not without times of terror, as it was lived in the fortress-like home of the Pierneaus on the Wisconsin's bank. It stood while the fur-trading era passed and settlers came to turn the sod and sow the grain. Now there is nothing left to remember, nothing to tell how trappers, and pioneers passed down the stream of time and disappeared. It is all gone, as the Indians went, as leaves before the wind, driven into the lost places of time.

If, in the telling of his tale, August Derleth is more poet than historian, with stateliness of speech and richness of color beyond the speaking and the seeing of the rude men who lived in that early time, there is, it may be believed, more of truth in the poet's feeling than in the historian's recording.

"Wind Over Wisconsin" is the second in a group of novels planned by Derleth to give a unified picture of Sac Prairie in his native Wisconsin. The first, "Still in the Summer Night," was about Wisconsin in the 1880s.

The Passing Order

CAROLINE ENGLAND. By Noel Streatfeild. (Reynal & Hitchcock, New York.)

MISS STREATFEILD'S absorbing and satisfying novel is as English as "Mr. Chips"; in fact, it might be described as "Mr. Chips" in the feminine gender. Everything in it is familiar; the county family that had "a reputation for good English honour" and "an unshakable conviction that to be born a Torrys was as great a gift as God could bestow"; their manor; the child Caroline, who grows up and grows old in the book; the rigid, cruel nurse; the kindly old rector and his compassionate daughter who becomes governess; an old gardener, villagers, servants, London town, Swan walk, the "lower orders." At length, old age in a cottage, with Pells and Brownie to bring up the morning tea.

Miss Streatfeild has produced a saga around the life of Caroline England, who seems to gather into her own personality the character and traditions of a segment of England's people. Insight and restraint are evident in the development of the story, which is a psychological study throughout, but which gives glimpses of a way of living. As the gallant and disciplined spirit of Caroline moves through the shifting scenes, the reader realizes—not without a wistful sigh—that it is a way of living which is undergoing severe mutations. For within Caroline's lifetime the manor is sold to become an hotel, and the family that had lived there since the time of Queen Elizabeth is dispersed.

But following the wistful sigh may come a breath of hope that the order and security which seemed permanent under a now dying system will persist upon even a more stable basis, one that will not require the individual to be crushed into the mould of the family. That is probably what the author is trying to say all the way through her book—that it is the unconquerable spirit typified by Caroline England which will persevere and outlive mistakes in a difficult period of social evolution.

—Marie Bliss.

An Adventurous Biologist

THERE are probably few biology instructors who, from their somewhat drab world of eviscerated dogfish and formalin-soaked cats, do not allow themselves occasional wistful imaginative wanderings into the realm of experimental science, beset by romantic hardships and dangers, shining with the promise of excitement and solid achievement.

Gripped by such a mood, a young London biology instructor one day in 1929 applied for a job on an expedition to study the habits of whales in Antarctic seas. To his amazement he was accepted, and shortly thereafter found himself at a whaling station in South Georgia, a small island at the far end of the Atlantic. His experiences on the island, aboard the scientific ship "Discovery II," and at other points on the bottom of the world are recorded in this book.

Of his achievements Ommanney writes little; but of excitement there is plenty, of hardships and dangers more than enough. He went through his rigorous daily tasks at the whaling station, measuring, cutting, examining the great beasts in freezing weather, while the workmen waited impatiently for him to get out of their way. For this exacting routine he exchanged the equally exacting job of biologist on an oceanographic survey made by the "Discovery II." The ship penetrated nearly to the mainland of the Antarctic continent, got jammed in the icepack, and escaped, bruised and battered, after nine harrowing days. He was aboard the "Discovery II" in 1935 when it was suddenly converted into a rescue ship for Lincoln Ellsworth, the American polar flier, who was picked up at Byrd's deserted camp in Little America. And then, greatest adventure of all, he was marooned with five other men on the ice-bound coast of King George Island, ate seals and penguins, lived for days without sleep or shelter, and was on the verge of exhaustion when the faithful "Discovery II" finally located the party.

Ommanney writes exceedingly well, viewing his own activities from an ironically humorous point of view that is flavored rather than clouded by the immutable mental patterns imposed by British caste traditions. He avoids scientific jargon, can be lyrical when the occasion demands, and builds up a mood of suspense and despair in his account of the castaway experience of which any novelist might be proud.

—Jean Winkler.

A Human Problem

WHERE NOW LITTLE JEW? By Magnus Hermansson. (Bonnier, New York.)

"THE Jews are not a race." This is the categoric statement which the author makes in discussing the Jewish question. His belief is based on the investigations of outstanding anthropologists, biologists, and ethnologists whose works he quotes.

But if the Semitic race is as much a myth as the "Aryan", anti-Semitism, unfortunately, is a horrible reality. Since the author is convinced that the Jewish question is not a racial or national question, he concludes that it is a religious and social one, his emphasis being on the religious rather than on the social aspect. He maintains that the Jewish question can never be solved satisfactorily so long as the Eastern Jews are dominated by Talmudism, which rests on the "isolating power of the Ghetto walls."

Mr. Hermansson sees the Zionist experiment as doomed to failure, for Palestine became not a Jewish state but an English colony, and is "a potential lethal chamber or guillotine" for the Jews who go there.

The author favors assimilation at any price, the assimilation which includes baptism, mixed marriage, and absorption into the national whole. He finds cause for hope in the extent of mixed marriages, and concludes that the Ghetto and Judaism as such exist only because of hatred and persecution. Since in many lands "Jewish converts to Christianity are not welcomed into the church," he sees the solution of the Jewish question in the "conversion of the Jews—and the Christians—to Christ."

The work is full of inconsistencies and inaccuracies. The author does not seem to have any first-hand knowledge of the subject, depending on books the contents of which he has not always comprehended.

When the reading is finished, one is inclined to favor the title which suggested the present one—"What Now Little Man?"; for, in a broad sense, the plight of the Jews is also the plight of humanity.

—Albert Easton.

Realistic Picture Of Farming

THIS PASSION NEVER DIES. By Sophus Keith Winther. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

IN two previous novels, "Take All to Nebraska," and "Mortgage Your Heart," Mr. Winther has treated the lives of Danish immigrants in Nebraska. The present volume continues this theme. It is the story of Peter Grimsen and his family, their struggle with the post-war depression of 1920, and the ultimate absorption of the Grimsen boys into the stream of characteristic American life.

The tale is a bitter one, for this author has none of the backyard gardener's illusions about farming. There is no cloudy idealism here, no false rhapsodizing over the beauties of life in the country. Not that Mr. Winther is insensible to such beauties. But "This Passion Never Dies" is a realistic picture of modern farming; and, nowadays, the farmer must fight not only against his natural enemies—drouth, hail, grasshoppers—but against the clever business man as well. The drama of this novel arises from the intrusion of commercial men and methods into what is, after all is said, not a business but a way of life. In that conflict of farmer against banker and lawyer, the farmer is inevitably defeated. He has never learned the fine art of legal swindling, nor the golden rule of business: do others before they do you. He understands but vaguely the financial operations and the bits of paper by which the "smart" man takes from him the product of years of labor. He only knows, at the last, that the work and the struggle have been wasted.

A dark book and a bitter book, yes; but not a hopeless one. All these mean and sordid elements are woven into a web of true tragedy, and the story becomes noble and significant because of the character of Peter Grimson. Defeated, he refuses to accept failure; deprived of his farm, his machinery, and livestock, he will not resign himself; old, penniless, failing in health, his spirit is not broken. To his last breath, he fights for his ideals, upholds his dignity as a farmer. Moreover—and this is the important thing—he passes those ideals on to his sons, in their own new ways of American living.

So, after all, it is Peter Grimson, the farmer, who is victorious. He may have lost the material things he fought for, but the spirit with which he fought is a thing that no mortgage, no fluctuation of the grain market, can take away. It endures forever in the lives of his descendants.

Homestead Life In the Dakotas

FREE LAND. By Rose Wilder Lane. (Longmans, Green & Co., New York.)

"FREE LAND" is a simple and unpretentious tale describing the settling of the Dakotas shortly after the passing of the Homestead Act. David Beaton leaves his father's prosperous Minnesota farm and goes forth with Mary, his bride, to create a place for himself in this undeveloped country. These two young people undergo the usual experiences of pioneers in a new territory: the rigors of winter, the burning heat of summer, the struggle with the virgin soil and the tenacious prairie grass, the birth of children, alternate success and defeat.

This is, of course, subject matter out of which might have been fashioned a work of heroic proportions or a subtle psychological study. In this straightforward narrative there is, however, a striking lack of anything save the dull and commonplace. True, there are numerous blizzards, drouths, cyclones, and Indian scares, but real plot or dramatic action, even the excitement of good melodrama, is conspicuously absent. Miss Lane's carefully accurate accounts of the Dakota seasons possess about as much emotional significance as does a cinema newsreel. There is a wealth of "local color," but no genuine atmosphere.

The worst fault of all, however, is the flat mediocrity of the character portrayal, an over-simplification of outline as deficient in passion, intensity, or maturity as a child's drawing. The author fails to reveal with any clarity what is going on beneath the surface of the minds of Mary and David. Then there is Nettie, who might have become romantic, heroic, or pathetic according to her creator's will, but who remains shadowy and unformed. And, most disappointing of all, we never become truly acquainted with the character who possesses the most possibilities of all, the sprightly and firm-minded Eliza, who blackmails her tardy lover into marriage and then proceeds to "make a man" of him.

These people are not untrue to life; they simply do not live at all. We are told that they love, beget children, fight the elements, but we never feel that their fate is of any real importance. They seem mere props against which to lean sketches of the Dakota weather.

DYKE'S AUTOMOBILE AND GASOLINE ENGINE ENCYCLOPEDIA. By A. L. Dyke. (The Goodheart-Willcox Co., Inc., Chicago.)

The work here noted has been regarded as the classic in its field for more than a quarter of a century. The eighteenth edition, just published, contains much new material, covering all recent developments in automobile building. The author, a St. Louisan, was one of the pioneers in the field, having built automobiles as early as 1899.

She Scores Again

Gwen Bristow.

Worthy Successor Of "Deep Summer"

THE HANDSOME ROAD. By Gwen Bristow. (Thomas Y. Crowell Co., New York.)

LAST year Miss Bristow won wide recognition with her first novel, "Deep Summer," a memorable story of Louisiana in Revolutionary War days and of the planters who helped to found a grand tradition there. In her new and equally memorable novel she continues her account of this tradition, showing how it fared during the 1860s in the Louisiana of the Civil War and Reconstruction period.

"The Handsome Road" is a story of contrasts, centering around the lives of two young women. Corrie May Upjohn belongs to Rattletrap Square, the wretched "poor white" section of a small plantation town. Although totally uneducated, she is shrewder than most of her people, and as she comes to appreciate her own place in the scheme of things, she feels the spirit of revolt. Even the slaves have good reason to snub the "white trash." With a growing bitterness against the rich plantation folk, Corrie May resolves that, whatever the cost, she will "be somebody" and eventually get to walk down the Handsome Road of which the Negroes sing. Meanwhile she accepts part-time work and other favors from Ann Sheramy Larne, mistress of Ardeith Plantation.

Lovely Ann Sheramy was born to wealth and position. Her marriage to Denis Larne united two of the most distinguished families of Louisiana and seemed destined to settle Ann forever in the security of the aristocratic life to which she had been bred. Educated according to the best standards of her day, Ann nevertheless was given little except the tradition of high birth with which to face the trials of the war and its aftermath, the carpet-bagger regime. In showing how these two women met the times and emerged from them, Miss Bristow tells an exceptionally interesting story, at the same time revealing considerable skill in character portrayal.

Readers will find in this book many things for which to be thankful. The mere fact that not a single battle of the war is actually fought in its pages provides a welcome change without sacrifice of interest. There are many fine descriptive passages, too, adding color to the story itself and serving nicely to emphasize the social contrasts which form its principal theme.

—Francis L. Harmon.

The Moonlight Did It

ESCAPE. By Royal Brown. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

LONG a popular short story writer, Royal Brown now offers his first novel, which deals with two young people who are attempting to escape from something—Bing McAdams (which isn't his real name) from conventional Society with a capital S, and Ellen Jones (which isn't her real name) from an alleged crime of which she is innocent.

Having taken a position as waitress in a summer hotel, "Jonesey" serves dinner to Bing, who has come ashore from his little yawl. Later that night, he rescues her when her canoe capsizes. Moonlight does the rest. After a whirlwind courtship, they are married, but a few hours later, Ellen accidentally learns who her husband really is, and fearing that the publicity which might follow their marriage will cause trouble for him, she escapes in his car while he is chopping wood—again in the moonlight!

Bing, torn between love and suspicion, rushes through the remaining pages of the book trying to find her, which, of course, he does at the end—also in the moonlight.

"Escape" is just another short story which is a bit too long.

With the Emphasis On the Man

CHARLES DARWIN. A Portrait. By Geoffrey West. (Yale University Press, New Haven.)

TO the fundamentalists Charles Darwin has been anathema since his "Origin of Species" upset their nicely arranged conception of creation. To skeptics of every ilk he has been a fount of justification for whatever theories they have advanced for the elevation of the human species. As each might look closer into the writings of Darwin for a clearer conception of that whereof they speak, so each might read this book for a clearer, and perhaps more reasonable, conception of Darwin the man.

The author is not a confirmed advocate of the Darwinian theories, although, as he asserts in his preface, when he began his study he took Darwinism for granted. What he does in his book is to attempt to evaluate both Darwin and Darwinism, with the emphasis on the first. Darwin is pictured as rather a conventional Victorian who considered a Church career even after the famous voyage of the Beagle, but whose researches as a naturalist practically forced upon him his revolutionary conclusions. He was almost as much surprised by the outcome of his theorizing as was Malthus when he discovered whither his speculations on population and food were leading.

In his youth there was little startling about Charles, grandson of the noted Dr. Erasmus Darwin. He was "evidently a difficult child, hard to arouse, slow to learn, seldom eager, a self-centered day dreamer." He did not excel in his studies, and when 16 his father removed him from school because he cared for nothing but "shooting, dogs, rat-catching." Nevertheless his interests did include pebbles, insects, plants, and birds, and grew after his father sent him to Edinburgh to become a doctor.

He didn't want to be a doctor, told his father so, and the proposal was made that he study for the clergy. He agreed, and spent the next several years studying for that. He also became very deeply involved in the study of natural history, and in 1831 accepted, after considerable vacillation, the offer to join the party of the Beagle, as naturalist.

His discoveries on that famous voyage gave him most of his material for his theory of the struggle for existence; but it was 20 years before he published "Origin of Species" at the strong urging of friends. He was timid, and feared the effect of the theory, because of its implications anent the creation of man. His last 40 years he spent in a country house after his marriage to Emma Wedgewood, gathering and carefully associating facts before he based any conclusion on them. Most of the time he was a semi-invalid, although at his death, in 1881, he was 73 years old.

—O. F. Fink.

Adolescent Katy

THE DAUGHTER. By Bessie Breuer. (Simon & Schuster, New York.)

THE delicately appreciative ripples caused by Bessie Breuer's first novel, "Memory of Love," will be considerably widened by "The Daughter." Miss Breuer tells the story of Katy confronting adulthood, confused by her divided loyalty to divorced parents, torn between admiration and envy of the charm of Carlotta, her mother, and shamed by Carlotta's many affairs. Wandering for years from one second-class hotel to another, driven by her mother's ennui and insatiable instability, her love for her father frustrated, Katy attempts to create a life apart from life, through music and literature, particularly the poetry of Auden. Not so long ago it was T. S. Eliot, wasn't it?

In one of their flights from no place to nowhere else in particular, they stay at a lesser publicized Florida resort, where Carlotta charms everyone and Katy glooms on the outskirts. But the carousing, friendly, corn-drinking, simple Southerners engulf her. Charlie, the epitome of them all, shifts his attention from Carlotta to Katy. The rest of the novel concerns itself with this violent and tortuous love affair of two persons mentally remote from each other, and its final, crashing denouement.

This is not simply a novel of adolescent disillusionment, but a study of the ramifications of character and of social forces as they impinge dreamlike on Katy's agony.

CORPORATE BOND RALLY IN SHIFT FROM U. S. ISSUES

Apparent Return of Investment Confidence Is Keynoted by Inferences From U. S. Steel's Debenture Offer.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Bond market leadership the past week shifted from U. S. Governments to corporate issues and the latter summoned fresh rallying power in anticipation of early revival in the long dormant capital market.

Apparent return of investment confidence was key-noted by inferences drawn from United States Steel Corporation's announcement Tuesday that it would make public offering of $100,000,000 debentures next month. This will be in connection with its nearly completed improvement and modernization program.

On the heels of this it was reported in financial circles several other big corporate units felt if "big steel" regarded conditions favorable enough for a financing operation of such magnitude they too would go about preparing for market sizeable new security issues.

Potential Support.

Fully aware the investment market now enjoys vast potential support in consequence of the Federal Government's gold desterilization and the $750,000,000 reduction in bank reserve requirements, bond dealers felt the promised resumption of normal activity in the capital market would tend to instill new life in the bond market.

Back of the projected plans for new capital raising was seen the possibility that important impulses toward general business recovery might be released by renewal of corporate spending for construction.

Although the average gains were modest the corporate list advanced broadly under the joint leadership of rails and utilities. The carriers were given the best support in a long time on the speeding up of the Washington program to give the roads financial aid. Power company bonds moved up with utility shares, which appeared to be influenced by talk of more friendly relations between the Government and the companies.

U. S. Government issues moved indecisively, but at the end changes were narrow. Trading was light in comparison with the volume on which they recorded the big April gains.

Rails Strong at Week-End.

Continued strength in secondary rails featured today's market.

All groups were higher, according to the Associated Press averages, although the carriers led the other major corporate divisions by a substantial margin.

Industrials also did well. The foreign list was firm. U. S. Governments were irregular, closing 6-32ds higher to 3-32ds lower.

Erie refunding 5s moved up 2 points at 14 and Great Northern Railway "G" 4s up 2¼.

Higher by a point or more were Chicago Great Western at 18⅜; New York Central 3¼s at 63 and Northern Pacific general 4s at 54.

Among the communications, American Telephone 3¼s of '61 were up ⅛ at 102; and Western Union 5s of '51 up 1¼ at 60¼.

American Foreign Power 5s rose 1⅞ to 54. International Paper 5s of '47 improved 1⅜ higher at 89⅜.

French 7½s gained ½ at 101 and German Government 7s dipped ¼ to 30⅜.

COTTON PRICES LOWER IN CLOSING TRADES OF WEEK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Cotton eased moderately today under light foreign selling, when markets abroad failed to respond to the sharp recovery here on Friday. July sold off from 8.70 to 8.63 and closed at 8.67, with final prices 3 to 4 points net lower.

The market opened 1 to 2 points lower. Trade price fixing and commission house buying at limits absorbed the offerings, but other demand was restricted. Prices eased to net losses of 7 to 9 points later in the session under Brazilian hedge selling, but rallied partially at the close on week-end covering.

Sales of print cloths for the week were estimated at about half of the current curtailed mill output. Spot cotton sales were light.

It was reported that 2906 bales entered the Government loan during the week, making a total of 5,340,194 thus far, exclusive of 154,827 bales repossessed by borrowers. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week was estimated at 50,000 against 63,000 last year and 47,000 two years ago.

GROUP OF MINING SHARES LEADS CURB MARKET TRADE

Most Utilities Dip Under Profit-Taking—Sales Larger Than Week Ago.

NEW YORK, May 7.—A group of mining shares paced the Curb market generally into higher ground today, although most utilities dipped under profit selling.

A favorite was Newmont Mining, which ended 1½ up at 56½, while Aluminum, Ltd., bounced two to finish at 89½. Sherwin Williams, ahead 1¼ at 89¾, led a group of selected industrials.

Gainers of fractions to a point or more included American Cyanamad "B," Lake Shore Mines, Niagara Hudson Power, Pan American Airways and Pennroad.

On the heels of yesterday's recoveries American Superpower, Electric Bond and Share and Arkansas Natural Gas "A" showed minor losses. A few oils, including Creole and Sunray, were a trifle lower.

Volume picked up to 106,000 shares compared with 34,000 a week ago.

Security Markets Get Back Into Forward Stride After a Period Of Hesitation and Floundering

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 7.—The April-May recovery in security markets got back into its forward stride this week after an interval of hesitation and floundering.

Wall street witnessed an unusual spectacle in the stock market when public utility shares, neglected step-children of the 1935-37 bull market, took the leadership on the upside. Stocks of several utility holding companies, beaten down almost to the vanishing point the past year, were heavily bought yesterday to the accompaniment of mounting hopes for peace in the battle over Government regulation and encroachment in the power field.

Industrial shares and rails fell in step with the power group in one of the broadest upturns of the recovery. Trading, moreover, expanded on the upside, which tape-watchers took as one of the best indications the tide was running to the bull side, at least for a while. Hardly more than 350,000 shares in Monday's sagging market, transactions on the big board increased to more than a million shares yesterday, largely as a result of a last-hour scramble to buy utilities.

ers than the upturn in stocks was rs than the upturn in stocks was a broadening of the recovery in bonds. The investment market advanced to new peaks for the month. Some top-grade, utility issues rose to levels which afforded a yield of less than 3 per cent. Railroad bonds took long strides toward regaining ground they lost on the March decline.

Capital Market Reawakening.

With the advance came evidence of reawakening in the new capital market, dormant for more than a year except for occasional offerings. United States Steel announced plans to raise $100,000,000 through an offering of debentures, probably next month, in the largest industrial loan for plant improvements since 1929.

Other big corporate issues were reported in the mill for June or mid-year offering. A $15,000,000 General Foods preferred stock issue was reported to have been taken readily, encouring investment dealers in the belief 1938 would bring a thaw in the capital market.

Traders sought their chief bull clues in political events and watching steps of corporations to borrow from the huge supply of idle dollars amassed from credit liquidation and Federal moves to expand bank loans and investments.

Business barometers revealed little change in the industrial tempo. After falling to a new low for the recession the preceding week, the Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity rallied to 67.5 from 66.8. A year ago it approximated the recovery peak at 108.3. Better-than-seasonal showings in electric power consumption, railroad carloadings, automobile production and carloadings accounted for the gain.

Rise in Utilities.

But those whose eyes were looking forward, rather than at statistics mirroring the past, were disposed to stress hints of revival in new financing as the most reliable bull signal the market place has had in recent months. Plans for capital expenditures, they noted, were the main theme of several new security offerings rumored or announced.

The rise carried some utility shares close to the early 1938 tops. The market generally, however, was still well under levels from which it started down late in February on a dash into new low territory for the 1937-38 bear swing.

Action of power shares was emphasized in some quarters as indicating the market was drawing inspiration from other than "inflation ideas." Further devaluation of the French franc brought a flurry of buying in gold shares and some talk of further reduction in the gold value of the dollar. However, this talk did not seem to get wide credence in speculative circles in face of strategy in London and Washington to maintain relative stability of the pound and the dollar.

Major Staples Sag.

Major staples continued to sag in absence of large-scale resumption of forward buying in wholesale markets. Slow textile business indicated industry still was preoccupied with attempts to reduce inventories while waiting for trade revival. The Associated Press index of prices of 35 key staples fell to the lowest since June, 1934.

The French devaluation for some time had been regarded as an overhanging development which caused billions of francs to flee to London and New York. Security markets seemed to take the news with some relief at having it out of the way.

Total stock sales during the week amounted to 3,642,530 shares, compared with 2,494,530 a week ago and 4,136,280 corresponding week a year ago. Sales from Jan. 1 to date were 81,885,994 shares, compared with 198,275,685 a year ago and 225,439,783 two years ago.

Air Crafts Rise at Week-End

Aircrafts and specialties developed renewed strength in today's market while the fast sprinting utilities of the preceding session took a rest.

Although there were few severely depressed issues in evidence, many were unable to get out in front and the close was moderately irregular.

The day's news was without particularly stimulating qualities and traders with comfortable profits decided, in many cases, to cash in over the week-end and await further developments on the industrial and political fronts.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was unchanged at 40.8, but on the week was up 2.6 points, the best six-day advance in about a month. Transfers totalled 556,240 shares, the largest Saturday volume in three weeks. The volume for the week was around 1,000,000 shares above the preceding period.

Labor Hour Bill.

Brokers thought the day's speculative sentiment was dimmed to some extent by the resurrection by petition of the wage-hour bill which had been shelved by the House Rules Committee. It was the concensus, though, that no important selling was touched off by the come-back of this measure for a full vote later in the House.

The aviation group, frequently in the recovery spotlight lately, loafed through Friday's sharp upturn only to receive fresh support today when hopes of much heavier airplane purchases from abroad were revived.

Those who have been following the utilities, while maintaining a friendly attitude toward this department, seemingly were inclined to restrain buying ardor pending more definite moves for a truce between the power companies and the administration.

Steels lagged throughout as a drop of about a point in mill operations was forecast for the Pittsburgh and Youngstown districts next week. Rails gave ground notwithstanding the favorable outlook for Government aid and a more than seasonal increase in last week's freight loadings. Motors also lacked vitality in view of the cloudy sales picture for the automobile makers.

Rails Push Upward.

Despite the negligible showing made by rail stocks, carrier bonds continued to push forward. These were believed buoyed by the growing idea that, if and when the lending powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are broadened by Congress, holders of senior rail securities would benefit. A wage cut compromise with the unions was also thought possible.

Prominent share gainers in the two-hour stretch included Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, Curtiss-Wright "A," United Aircraft, American Can, Allied Chemical, Woolworth, Goodyear and Loew's.

On the downside were Consolidated Edison, North American, Electric Power and Light, Pacific Gas, Chrysler, General Motors, United States Steel and International Harvester.

The Associated Press commodity index, after eight consecutive declines, tilted forward. Wheat at Chicago was up ¾ to 1¼ cents a bushel and corn added ¼ to ½. Cotton was down 15 to 20 cents a bale.

A. T. & T. MARCH OPERATING INCOME OF $1,202,703

NEW YORK, May 7.—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported today net operating income for March totalled $1,202,703, compared with $2,166,608 in March a year ago. Gross income for the month was $9,047,634, against $9,860,088 last year.

Net operating income figures above cover operating activities only, chiefly the company's long lines business. They are exclusive of non-operating income, such as dividends, interest and other revenues received and non-operating charges, such as interest and rents paid.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., reported today a net loss of $590,079 for the first quarter of 1938. This compares with a net loss of $359,933 for the corresponding quarter last year. Total operating revenues for the first quarter amounted to $1,161,822, an increase of $88,407 over the same period last year, the company reported, but operating expenses increased by $308,492.

NEW YORK, May 7. — The annual pamphlet report of the Illinois Central System for 1937 showed net income of $1,960,316, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 62 cents a common share. This compared with net income in 1936 of $764,743, or $4.10 a share on the 6 per cent preferred stock.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Cities Service Co. reported consolidated net income for the quarter ended March 31, of $3,187,493 equal to 4 cents a capital share, compared with $3,315,317, or 6 cents a share, in the comparable 1937 quarter.

CHICAGO, May 7.—Campbell, Wyant & Cannon Foundry Co. reported net loss for the first quarter of the year of $80,176 compared with a net profit of $228,449, equal to 65 cents a capital share, in the comparable 1937 quarter.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY UP FROM 4-YR. LOW

For First Time in Months Not One Component of Index Makes New Low.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Industrial activity turned up moderately this week from the four-year low touched the week before.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index, based on latest available statistics, rose to 67.5 per cent of the 1929-30 average from 66.8 in the previous period and 108.3 a year ago.

For the first time in some months, not a single component of the index made a new low. Automobile output, freight carloadings, residential building and electric power production advanced, while steel mill activity and cotton manufacturing dipped substantially.

Steel mill operations were reduced for the third consecutive period, as orders from all major consumers showed no signs of picking up.

The index with its seasonally adjusted components based on latest data, and 1929-30 as 100, compared as follows:

	Latest Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Automobile production — — —	41.5	40.9	108.1
Steel mill activity — — — —	41.2	42.9	122.1
Electric power production —	103.2	102.8	118.9

French Financial Crisis Settled By Another Devaluation of Franc

Repatriation of French Capital Immediately Follows De Facto Price of 2.79 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 7.—As has happened several times in the past, the French financial crisis this week was settled by another devaluation of the franc.

Working in co-operation with the British and American governments, under the provisions of the tripartite monetary agreement of 1936, the Daladier Government devalued the franc to around 2.79 cents, in terms of the dollar. The Ministry of Finance made it clear this was "de facto" stabilization—that the final figure at which the franc was to be stabilized would be determined in the coming months.

At 2.79 cents, the franc was worth around 8½ per cent of its World War value of 19½ cents.

Devaluation brought quick results in repatriation of French capital, which had left the country in the course of the past few months as the crisis was developing. The demand for francs in London, New York and Amsterdam was so heavy that the French control fund sold francs in heavy quantities to keep the level around the devalued figure.

In foreign exchange circles here, there was some feeling that the Daladier Government put the franc at a lower figure than its weakness warranted, so as to attract repatriation and allow for an appreciation in the coming weeks to bolster confidence of the investing public when the Government brings out its remilitarization loans.

The week saw another engagement of $5,800,000 in gold in Japan for shipment here—the only gold engagement of the week.

Major European currencies moved lower in terms of the dollar today, although the French franc, after a narrow advance, ended unchanged.

The French stabilization fund was apparently still operating to prevent a too sharp rise in the franc, thus carrying out Premier Daladier's pledge to keep the unit close to the newly devalued rate of 2.79 cents. Repatriation of French balances, banking circles pointed out, was still far from completed.

Sterling lost ¾ of a cent. The drive on the Holland guilder let up a little but that unit lost .04 of a cent. The belga, shaky because of cabinet difficulties with financial measures, lost .06 of a cent. The Swiss franc dropped .05 of a cent.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Foreign exchange closing rates follow: Great Britain in dollars, others in cents: Great Britain, demand, 4.98¼; cables, 4.98¼; 60-day bills, 4.97⅝; France, demand 2.80¼, cables 2.80½; Italy, demand 5.26½, cables 5.26½.

LONDON, May 7.—The United States dollar recovered ¾ of a cent in terms of sterling today, closing 4.98¾ to the pound against sterling at $4.98⅞ in New York over night.

Stock Issue Authorized.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., May 7.—The Public Service Commission authorized the Northern States Power Co. to issue $8,000,000 of common stock for refinancing purposes on certain conditions, set down by the commission.

The commission simultaneously canceled a 1932 ban on payment of common stock dividends, providing the firm complies with requirements on its preferred stock. The company is a unit of the Byllesby interests.

New York Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, May 7.—The weekly statement of the New York Clearing House shows: Total surplus and undivided profits unchanged at $908,102,600; total net demand deposits (average) decreased $91,107,000; time deposits (average) decreased $11,551,000; clearings week ending today $3,504,493,480; clearings week ending April 30, $3,353,503,598.

ERRATIC CHANGES IN TIN FEATURE METALS

Domestic Copper Holds at 10c, Valley—Lead Rules Steady.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Highly erratic fluctuation in tin featured the non-ferrous metal markets last week.

Moving swiftly over a range of 235 points, tin finally ended net 95 points higher, as the New York spot price soared from a low of 36.25 to a top of 37.60 cents a pound. Sentiment was dominated entirely by the progress of the buffer pool negotiations, with the prospects for an agreement lifting prices sharply at the end.

Under the proposed plan of the international committee the ordinary export quota would vary with conditions, while a buffer stock would be accumulated over a six months' period, which quota would be normally 15 per cent of standard tonnages.

Domestic copper held at 10 cents a pound, Valley. Demand was slow, coming chiefly from company owned fabricators. Independent consumers came in only for occasional lots. Export copper fluctuated narrowly. Renewal of the Cartel agreement for an indefinite period promised a stabilized market through a check on production as well as consumption.

Lead was steady and unchanged at 4.50 @4.55 cents a pound, New York. Despite low stocks, consumers bought sparingly.

Zinc held at 4.15 cents a pound, East St. Louis. Consumers have been drawing on reserve supplies, which are apparently ample.

Steel ingot output dropped off to 30.5 per cent of capacity. Some railroad buying of freight cars developed, but otherwise inquiries dwindled.

Chinese antimony declined ½ cent to 14.75 cents a pound, the lower levels, however, attracting a better consumer demand.

FROST FORECAST BULLISH FACTOR IN WHEAT TRADE

Advance of Nearly 2 Cents on Weather Prospects — Liverpool Strength Also Influence.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 7.—The price of wheat, registering almost immediately forecasts of frost or freezing in some districts of the winter wheat belt, shot up almost 2 cents a bushel today but then settled back to lose almost half of this gain.

There were other factors stimulating buying, such as higher than expected prices at Liverpool and some strength in securities, but wheat pit discussion centered on weather developments in the Southwest, where the crop approached harvest. The market's action, however, caused little short covering and prices reacted from highs reached the first hour. Many traders hesitated to act prior to issuance next week of the official forecast of wheat production.

Wheat closed ¾ to 1¼ cents higher compared with yesterday's finish, May 81⅛@¼c, July 79¾@½c, September 80⅛@¼c; corn ¼-½ up, May 58⅛c, July 59¼c, September 60¼@¼c; oats ⅜-⅝ higher, May 28½@⅝c; Rye ⅜-⅞ up, May 59¾c; provisions unchanged to 8 higher.

Climaxing a week in which experts forecast the greatest winter wheat harvest since 1931, weather and crop news from the Southwest was more or less disturbing even though rain or snow was reported in many grain belt sections. Temperatures as low as 30 degrees were reported in some localities and the forecast predicted local snows for the main belt with frost in parts of Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas and general frost in Nebraska.

Crop authorities expressed belief that the cool weather, while presenting possibility of damaging frost, checked the spread of rust. Some said that damage caused by the early April cold weather was yet to be realized.

Liverpool wheat closed 1 to 1⅜ higher, or better than due. Export sales of North American wheat were estimated at 200,000 bushels and cables indicated continental demand might improve.

Export sales of corn were estimated at 200,000 bushels, mostly to the continent. Some buying of corn here was through houses with export connections. Purchases to arrive and carlot receipts continued large.

Oats and rye markets reflected the upturn in wheat while provisions also were slightly higher.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, March 7.—No local quotations was made in the grain futures market today.

Liverpool wheat closed 1 to 1¼d higher after opening ⅝ to ⅞d up.

Winnipeg wheat opened ⅝ to ⅞c higher and early was ⅞ to 1¼c up. The close was ¾@⅞c higher.

Argentine wheat opened ¼c higher and corn ⅝ to 1¼c better.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was 1@1½c higher. The supply was rather small and the demand fairly good, but there was a carryover due to buyers and sellers being apart. Trading basis was about steady, except for a car of straight red which was exceptionally fancy and which commanded a better premium. There was good inquiry from mill and order buyers. Corn was unchanged. Glucose makers were the chief purchasers. A few cars went to elevators. Premiums were unchanged to slightly under Friday's levels. Oats were unchanged to ½c higher. Advanced asking prices restricted buying. Elevator bought a car of No. 3 white, while a car of red went for shipment.

COMMODITIES DO NOT JOIN STOCKS IN RISE

New Lows Made as Heavy Liquidation Sweeps Major Farm Staples.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Commodity prices slid into new low ground for the year again this week, as heavy liquidation swept the major farm staples.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important commodities tumbled to 66 per cent of the 1926 average from 66.86 last week, compared with 91.98 a year ago.

The rally that carried security prices sharply higher during the week was not transmitted to commodities, declines among the items making up the index outnumbering gains three to one.

Harrdest hit were livestock quotations, this measure plunging from 73.03 a week ago to 69.50 in the latest period. Hogs, cattle and lambs gave ground steadily as supplies continued to rise despite little change in demand. The barometer has slumped 11 per cent since early March under this deluge of offerings.

New Low Levels.

With estimates of probable harvests of principal crops being boosted almost daily by private experts, agricultural staples sank to a new low level. Corn, wheat, oats and cotton fell back, while rye managed a narrow advance.

Items making up the housewife's daily shopping list pushed lower and also touched a new bottom. Sugar, cocoa, flour and lard made up this majority, only coffee chalking up an increase.

The pressure of still-heavy inventories forced a further markdown in textile prices. Wool and cotton cloth yielded fractionally, while silk poked upward. Trade circles pointed out that although production was at a comparatively slow pace, demands from dealers and retailers was even smaller, thereby adding to existing stocks.

Industrial raw materials were mixed, with declines in relatively heavily weighted items carrying the index down. Bituminous coal, lumber and antimony weakened, rubber, burlap and tin moving up.

What Index Shows.

LEAD, ZINC AND COPPER

Lead was steady at $4.35 per 100 pounds in St. Louis Saturday. Zinc was steady at $4.15 per 100 pounds.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Lead and zinc futures closed unchanged. Straits tin futures closed 50 higher. No sales.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Copper steady; electrolytic spot, 10.00; export, 9.67½@9.72½. Tin steady; spot and nearby, 37.60; forward, 37.65. Lead steady; New York spot 4.50@4.55; East St. Louis, 4.35. Zinc steady; East St. Louis spot and forward, 4.15. Iron, aluminum, antimony, quicksilver, platinum and wolframite unchanged.

NEW YORK, May 7.—St. Joseph Lead Co. reports 175 tons of Southeast Missouri pig lead sold yesterday at $4.35 per 100 lbs. East St. Louis, and 50 tons at the New York average.

New York Sugar.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Raw sugar declined 3 points today to 2.75, the lowest level recorded since January, 1935. Sales at this level were confirmed of 81,000 bags of Philippines due during the coming week.

Futures eased under further liquidation and hedge selling, encouraged by the decline in the actual market. No. 4 contract closed 1 to 2 points net lower as September declined from .93½ to .93 and May from 1.00½ to .99½, with sales 1300 tons.

Refined was unchanged at 4.55@4.65 for fine granulated with only a light withdrawal demand reported.

PRICE TREND HIGHER ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

Changes for Week Generally Limited on a Light Trade Volume.

Prices of securities listed on the St. Louis Stock Exchange tended upward last week. Gains, however, were made on restricted turnovers. Nearly a dozen issues were unchanged. Price alterations were mainly fractional.

National Candy, International Shoe, Key Company, Hamilton-Brown and Falstaff higher.

In the lower group on small turnovers were Wagner Electric which sold down 1½ points and Brown Shoe wich declined a like amount.

No Action on Ohio Oil Dividend.

CLEVELAND, May 7.—Directors of Ohio Oil Co. failed to take action today on the common dividend. On June 15 and Dec. 15 last year the company ordered payments of 50 cents each on common.

O. G. Donnel, president, said the omission was due to a decline in demand for petroleum products, "coupled with development of excess of new production."

U. S. Steel Is Spending 250 Millions

highly refined processes. Such mills represent large capital outlays, and while they are very economical if running full, they are very costly if running only on part time. Thus, the concentration of production became a factor of such importance as, sometimes, to outweigh freight rates.

"In certain of our plants the obsolescence, taking that word in its broader significance, was such that their abandonment was scarcely a matter for discussion. But we proceeded very slowly with our program, getting rid of no facilities until we could see our way clear to take over their potential production in some other fashion, and during the rigorous period of the depression we largely suspended the program."

Taylor followed this with a list of plants closed down, beginning in 1928 and going down through 1937. While many of these were obsolete Bessemer plants, there were included sheet and tin mill plants replaced by mechanization. Most of these plants were in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

New Strip Mill.

The most important single project in the modernization program is the new Irvin mechanical strip mill on the Monongahela River above Pittsburgh. Nearing completion, this will be the largest of its kind in the world, with a capacity of 600,000 tons a year produced "in the most modern and most economical manner, and will substitute for production in the district which is obsolete or will shortly become so," Taylor told the stockholders. The cost of the Irvin plant is $65,000,000, and when producing at 45 to 50 per cent of capacity will employ only about 4000 men.

The second largest unit is that which has been completed at Fairfield, Ala., near Birmingham. This plant, costing $30,000,000, will make cold reduced tinplate for Southern and Western markets. It gives U. S. Steel a greater concentration in the South than ever before. And, incidentally, Southern steel mills have been running, until recently at least, at levels of production considerably above those of Northern mills.

Steel Centers in Ascendancy.

As part of the modernization program a new mechanical mill has been constructed at Youngstown, O., at a cost of $10,000,000. A new plate mill at Homestead, Pa., cost $11,000,000. Improvements at Gary, Ind., for the most part replacement of old plants with modern mechanical mills, have cost $45,000,000.

The balance of the cost has been spread about various parts of the country. On April 1, about $56,000,000 was still to be spent, and part of this will come from the sale of the new bonds. During Taylor's 10-year term as chairman of the board there was spent for "additions, betterments and modernizaticn" a total of $642,529,358, but a considerable part of this may be put down to the ordinary maintenance necessary from year to year.

The steel centers that are in the ascendancy as a result of this program are Birmingham, the Pittsburgh area, Youngstown and Gary. Dozens of lesser communities, many of them dependent upon three, four or half a dozen mills, are left in a serious plight, with a stranded population of former steel workers.

Ready for Competition.

Obviously, before undertaking a reconstruction program of the magnitude of this one, technical advisers must have worked out in detail the savings to be accomplished. There must have been a very clear realization of the saving in production cost per man-hour unit and the difference in the wage factor that would result. But such figures are not available to the public. Officials say they would give too much away to curious competitors.

The total number of men employed by the corporation in 1927 was 231,549, as compared with 261,953 in 1937. The comparison means very little, however, since many men worked 10 and even 12 hours a day in the former year. They do not show what would be the real basis of comparison—how much steel was produced per man-hour worked. Also, last year in the brief boom of 1937 there were old hand mills in operation that have been subsequently closed. The payroll in 1927 was $430,000,000, as compared with $442,000,000 in 1937.

The fact which remains is that "Big Steel" is stripped down for the competitive race. Competition means cutting costs, and when labor cost amounts to a sizable portion of the total, that is where the cutting must come.

County Gas Co. Actually Unregulated as to Rates

value. The assessment of the gas company's property, all in St. Louis County, is $1,427,500, only about one-sixth of the amount ($8,824,500) on which its rates gave it a 6 per cent return.

This fixing of the tax assessment value at $1,427,500 for physical property was not without controversy. Last year County Assessor Martin L. Neaf sought to raise the assessment to $2,583,410, and this year to $2,705,810. Both years the company's appeal to the County Board of Equalization resulted in the fixing of the lower figure.

Laun Handled Appeal.

Handling the appeal both years for the company was Albert C. Laun, a vice-president of the Union Electric Co. of Missouri, with which the St. Louis County Gas Co. is affiliated by reason of the fact that both are subsidiaries of the North American Co., giant holding corporation. Laun is one of the best known lobbyists at Jefferson City, where he spends most of his time during sessions of the Legislature. He is widely known among legislators and county and State officers.

When the company's appeal from the increased assessment came before the Board of Equalization last March, Assessor Neaf undertook to support his valuation with witnesses and detailed statistical exhibits. From the company's reports to the Public Service Commission he had prepared tables showing its balance sheet for 1936, its income account, its fixed capital, its retirement reserves, the number of customers and other data. The 1937 report was not then available.

Records of Mains.

The Assessor sought to subpena plat books of the company showing the mileage and size of its mains, but after Laun told the Board it would require months to prepare such a record all members of the Board except Neaf himself voted against this. Neaf then produced a witness, John Ouhrabka, 3282 Shenandoah avenue, who said he was formerly employed as an engineer by the company, then testified that charts showing the size and location of all mains were kept up to date, being revised daily as changes were made.

For the value of the structures and equipment Neaf had diagrams and engineers' estimates of cost of construction. Neaf was three hours presenting all his testimony. Laun was the only witness for the company, the gist of his testimony being that value added to the company's property by improvements in the preceding year had been offset by depreciation, from which he argued that the assessment should be set at the 1937 figure.

How Equalizers Divided.

Laun told the Board that the company would have to increase its rates if its tax assessment were increased. Neaf reminded Laun that the rates could be increased only through a rate and valuation case before the Public Service Commission. Laun agreed this was so.

At the close of the hearing Neaf was the only one of the five members of the board to vote to sustain his assessment. The other four—the three judges of the County Court and Highway Engineer John M. Curtsinger—voted to reduce it to the 1937 figure. Judges of the County Court are Thomas H. Thatcher, presiding judge, and William E. Lauer and Eugene G. Tighe.

Neaf had set the assessment at $461,090 for real estate and $2,244,720 for personal property, the latter including gas mains, meters, services and all sorts of gas-making and storing equipment. The board set the assessment at $424,450 for real estate and $1,003,050 for personal property.

The company distributes mixed gas of 800 B. T. U. heat value, enriching its manufactured gas with natural gas purchased from the Mississippi River Fuel Corporation. The quantity of natural gas used in 1937 was three times that of manufactured gas.

Where the Income Went.

In addition to its income of $511,470 available for return, the company also had non-operating income of $5220, making a total corporate income of $516,690. This was disposed of as follows: $330,000 for dividends on $3,000,000 of common stock, all owned by the North American Co.; $75,000 for interest on $1,500,000 of 5 per cent bonds; $105,342 transferred to surplus, and the remainder for miscellaneous corporate expense as distinguished from operating expenses.

Dividends were at the rate of 12 per cent annually on par value of the common stock. Part of the stock—$500,000—was outstanding only for the last six months of the year.

Louis H. Egan, president of Union Electric Co. of Missouri, also is president of the St. Louis County Gas Co. Several other operating officers and directors of Union Electric serve in like capacities for the gas company.

MISS NANCY SPARKS WINS OVER 15 RIDERS

Gains First Place at Fontbonne-St. Joseph's Annual Horse Show.

Miss Nancy Lee Sparks, 6631 Waterman avenue, a senior in St. Joseph's Academy, won the cup for the best rider yesterday in the fifth annual horse show of Fontbonne College and St. Joseph's Academy.

Sixteen students of the schools, winners of firsts and seconds in single riding events, entered the best riding event, the principal class in the show. They were mounted on three-gaited horses. A total of 68 riders participated in the show, which began Friday evening at the Missouri Stables Arena, 5200 Berthold avenue.

Second place for best riders in the show was won by Betty James, 1501 McKnight road, St. Louis County, and Virginia Martin, 7130 Lindell boulevard, placed third. Miss Sparks had won first place in the event for best riders in the academy.

In the event for best rider in the college, Josephine Reynolds, a junior, placed first; Catherine Burmeister, second, and Doris O'Connor, third. Best rider in the intermediate class was Jean Coff, with Patricia Harner, second, and Jane Royal, third.

In the event for the best riders in the academy, won by Miss Sparks, Rosemary Ward was second and Helen Marie Badaracco, third.

The best college pair in the novice and intermediate classes were Mary M. Nelson and Marian Murphy. Anna M. Grace and Eleanor Amend placed second, and Rosemary Macken and Rosemary Walsh, third.

A potato race, won by a college team of five riders by a score of 21 to an academy team's 17, was followed by the class for best college riders in the novice class. June Schaefer placed first; Dorothy Coff, second, and Lee Stabler, third.

Best academy pair in the novice and intermediate classes were Constance Sueme and Rita Reame. Henrietta Binder and Mary J. Zucchero were second, and Jean Coff and Mary Heneghan, third.

FUNERAL OF DR. A. F. WULZE

Dentist Attended Orphans for 40 Years Without Charge.

Funeral services for Dr. A. F. Wulze, a dentist, who died last Wednesday of heart disease at his home, 4221 Delmar boulevard, were held yesterday from the W. A. Stock mortuary, 2117 East Grand boulevard, with burial in St. Peter's Cemetery.

Dr. Wulze, 70 years old, had for the last 40 years attended the children of the German St. Vincent's Orphanage, in Normandy, without charge. Surviving are his sisters, Mrs. Mary Buerk and Mrs. Augusta Shea of St. Louis and Mrs. Emma Yartim of Chicago.

BISHOP HOLT TO STAY IN ST. LOUIS TILL JULY

St. John's M. E. Pastor Returns From Conference at Which He Was Elevated.

Bishop Ivan Lee Holt, pastor of St. John's Methodist Church, who was raised to the episcopacy last Tuesday at the General Conference of the church at Birmingham, Ala., returned to St. Louis yesterday.

Bishop Holt told a Post-Dispatch reporter he would remain here until July 1, when he will go to Toronto to preach at the Deer Park United Church during July and August. Early in September he will go to Dallas, Tex., which will be his headquarters as bishop.

During the autumn and early winter Bisohp Holt will be occupied with annual conferences in his district, which includes the Central, North and Northwest Teaxs conferences and the New Mexico conference.

He plans to return to St. Louis for the Christmas holidays and hopes to be here the following spring for the conference which will work out details of union of the Southern Methodist, Northern Methodist and Methodist Protestant Churches. At that conference, he said, there is likely to be a general reassignment of Bishops.

Bishop Holt expressed his gratification that the vote for union of the three Methodist churches at the Birmingham ocnference was 95 per cent, a higher percentage than was obtained in either of the other two churches.

His successor as pastor of St. John's, Bishop Holt said, will not be chosen until October.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION TO BE HELD HERE IN 1940

Missouri Council Votes to Include Word "Church" in Name Because of Expansion.

Delegates attending the three-day convention of the Missouri Sunday School Council at Kansas City voted at the closing session Thursday night to hold their 1940 seventy-fifth anniversary convention in St. Louis, where the organization was founded.

The 1500 delegates also voted to change the organization's name to the Missouri Church and Sunday School Council in view of its program of expansion in taking over functions of a Council of Churches as well as a Council of Religious Education.

Three or four regional conferences will be held in 1939 instead of a State-wide convention. The Rev. Frank C. Tucker, pastor of St. Francis Methodist Church, St. Joseph, Mo., was elected president for the year.

License Suspensions Concurrent.

It was announced at the Excise Commissioner's office yesterday that two 10-day suspensions of the liquor license of Irene Pappas for a tavern at 601 Market street, ordered Friday, would run concurrently. They will become effective tomorrow, having been ordered on two charges of being open after hours.

CATHEDRAL BLOCK ON LINDELL OPEN FOR APARTMENTS

Development Made Possible by Modification of Restrictions Between Newstead and Taylor.

PARK ENTRANCE CORNER FREED

Site Opposite Hotel Chase Is Pointed to as Capital Location for Lofty Structure.

By Berry Moore

With the modification of the building restrictions on the north side of Lindell boulevard, between Newstead and Taylor avenues, which includes St. Louis Cathedral, to permit the erection of apartments, the attention of promoters of buildings of this character is now focused on this block.

Plans, accordingly, are expected to materialize soon for pretentious apartment buildings for the block, provided the ground is to be had at reasonable prices. Incidentally, ground values on the north side of the block have been automatically enhanced, real estate men declared, by the removal of the barrier against apartments, permissible under the zoning law.

During the last 10 years, many alluring offers have been made for sites on this frontage, conditional upon the modification of the restrictions, which excluded apartments.

STEEL CORPORATION CLOSES NEGOTIATIONS FOR 2 ACRES

The Steel Sales Corporation, with headquarters in Chicago, has concluded negotiations for the purchase of a two-acre tract at the northwest corner of McRee and Oak Hill avenues, owned by the McRee estate.

The purchase carries plans for the erection of two fireproof warehouses, each 100 by 300 feet in dimension, as a source of supply for its products. Construction on the first unit is scheduled to start as soon as the building plans are available. There will be loading platforms with spur track connection with the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

The McRee estate was represented by Henry McRee of Williams, McRee & Co., mortgage bankers, in the negotiations. Elmer Marks, real estate dealer, represented the steel company. The steel concern now maintains a warehouse at 4067 Park avenue.

The proposed warehouses will be in the industrial district which includes the Woodward & Tiernan Printing Co., 1519 Tower Grove avenue, and the Liggett & Meyers Tobacco Co., at 4241 Folsom avenues.

DOCTOR BUYS RESIDENCE ON CRESCENT DR. IN DAVIS PLACE

The building is equipped with an air-conditioning system and has a basement rathskeller. There is a two-car attached garage. Shaw & Francis, Inc., handled the transaction.

REALTY INSTALLATION BANQUET ON MAY 17

E. L. Kuhs Will Be Installed as President of Exchange With Officers.

Edward L. Kuhs will be installed as president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, together with new officers and directors of the organization at a belated banquet to be held Tuesday evening, May 17, in the gold room of the Jefferson Hotel.

Following his election to the presidency in October, for 1938, Kuhs suffered a broken hip which deferred the installation which was scheduled to take place early in January. He is president of the Edward L. Kuhs Realty Co., and is a former member of the Board of Aldermen. Arthur C. Hoehn, first vice-president of the exchange, was acting president of the exchange in Kuhs' absence.

Joseph W. Catharine of Brooklyn, N. Y., 1938 president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will pay his official visit to St. Louis realtors on this date and will be their honored guest at the banquet, as well as deliver the principal address.

Officers to be installed with Kuhs are Arthur C. Hoehn, vice-president, Henry R. Weisels Co., first vice-president; George S. Metcalfe, secretary, Strodtman & Strodtman Real Estate Co., second vice-president; Henry L. Cornet Jr., president, Cornet & Zeibig Inc., treasurer, and Chester A. Doerflinger, president, Doerflinger Realty Co., secretary. Directors to be inducted are: Frank A. Gilbert, president, Gilbert Real Estate Co., Inc.; Oliver F. Hannauer, secretary, Hannauer Real Estate Co.; J. Melvin Levi, president, J. M. Levi & Co.; Minard T. MacCarthy, vice-president, Albert G. Blanke Real Estate Co.; Curt C. Mack, zone manager, Federal Housing Administration; Dewey J. Schmoll, real estate officer, Mercantile Commerce Bank and Trust Co.; Arthur A. Schneider, president, Frank J. Frick Real Estate Co., and John A. Wehmeyer, real estate officer, St. Louis Union Trust Co. The president is elected for one year and the directors for two years.

Cyrus Crane Willmore, president of the Cyrus Crane Willmore Organization, and a past president of the exchange, will act as toastmaster. The meeting will be a stag affair.

REALTY BOND PRICES SHOW SLIGHT CHANGE

Average Bid for 250 Issues Declines Only One Point in April.

Real estate bond prices held comparatively steady during the month of April according to the Burr Index of 250 Eastern realty bond issues, prepared by Burr & Co., Inc. of New York.

The average bid price for these 250 issues declined during the month from 38.9 on April 1, 1938 to 37.9 on April 30, an average loss of one point.

For the four months ended April 30, 1938 the total decline has amounted to 1.6 points from the average bid of 39.5 on Jan. 3, 1938. The percentage decline in these 250 realty bond issues for the four months has equalled 4.1 per cent.

Of the major types of properties covered by the Index, hotel issues have shown the smallest decline for 1938 to date, going off only one-tenth of one point and three-tenths of one per cent. Apartment house issues registered the next smallest loss, off 1 per cent in the four months' period, followed by apartment hotel issues, with a decline of 2.9 per cent, theater issues 3 per cent and office buildings with the largest decrease of 5.7 per cent.

Of the cities included in the Burr Index, Brooklyn is the only one to show a gain for the first four months of 1938, issues secured by properties located in Brooklyn having increased from 34.1 to 34.4 a gain of .8 per cent. Philadelphia issues are unchanged for the year to date, while New York City issues show a loss of 8.1 per cent or about twice the average for the entire list. Other losses are shown for Washington, D. C. off 1.5 per cent, Westchester County 2.1 per cent, Miami, Florida 2.4 per cent, Pittsburgh 7.7 per cent, Boston 9.1 per cent and Buffalo 17.7 per cent.

Lindell while the remainder of the Lindell frontage of the block is occupied by commodious residences, with a total frontage of 623 feet, more or less—exclusive of the site of the Cathedral, which has a Lindell frontage of 385 feet.

For 40 years only single family residences were permitted on the north side of Lindell in this block under the restrictions, drawn by the old Anderson & Wade Realty Co. The bars on the south side of the street, however, were let down to such structures in the pre-depression era, when the 16-story Pierre-Chouteau, recently purchased by the Pevely Building and Realty Co., of which Dan C. Kerckhoff is president, was erected, by professional operators with a $650,000 bond issue. Prices of ground on Lindell between Grand boulevard and Kingshighway during that period, ranged as high as $1000 a front foot.

The residence at 4451 Lindell was originally occupied by the late Festus J. Wade, who sold it to George W. Wilson, a director and formerly chairman of the board of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Co. Mr. Wade acquired a residence on the south side of the street in the 4500 block.

Owners in Block.

The plat of the Cathedral block shows the following owners: Edwin L. Wahl, 62 feet 6 inches; George W. Wilson, 67 feet 6 inches; Paula F. Hoffman, 60 feet; John L. Corley, 60 feet; Peggy Murphy Shelton, 50 feet; Mississippi Valley Trust Co., 85 feet; Edward F. Goltra, 138 feet 7⅝ inches, and Jane Adger Nicolaus, 100 feet. The lots have a uniform depth of 213 feet, which makes them especially desirable for apartments.

The modification to permit the construction of apartments on the north side was accomplished by the unanimous approval of the abovementioned property owners. No apartment shall cost less than $50,000 and occupy a frontage of less than 50 feet. The present building line is also to be observed.

With the exception of the Cathedral block, apartment buildings have been erected on both sides of Lindell between Newstead and Kingshighway.

The vacant lot at the southeast corner of Lindell boulevard and Kingshighway, which is now available, is pointed to as forming a capital site for a lofty apartment or hotel structure. This site is just west of the St. Regis apartments and directly opposite the Chase Hotel at the northeast corner of Kingshighway and Lindell. It has a frontage on Lindell of 214 feet, 11 inches, and on Kingshighway 237 feet and ¾ inch. It is owned by the Hugh Campbell estate and is listed with Cornet & Zeibig, Inc. Hotels and apartments may be erected in this block under the building restrictions which, however, prohibit business buildings.

RICHMOND, Va., May 7.—"Real estate, undervalued, as I believe it is at today's prices, is the best and safest investment in America today," Joseph W. Catharine, Brooklyn, N. Y., president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, said emphatically addressing the opening session of the Central Atlantic regional conference of the association, held here, which brought realtors together for a two-day session from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Delaware, Virginia and West Virginia.

"It has been my privilege during the first four months of this year to have traveled well over 16,000 miles in visits to real estate boards of many sections of the country and to have talked about conditions affecting the real estate outlook with leaders of thought from every section," Catharine said. "After this first-hand study and from every statistical picture available it is my earnest conviction that, despite the continuing recession in general business, every factor of today's real estate situation indicates a sound position for properly selected real estate investment and a sound foundation for long-term real estate advance.

"Real estate, of course, has not been unaffected by the unhappy interruption of the recovery movement, but it has demonstrated by its record for the last 12 months its remarkable holding power."

Some detail here, as shown by indices compiled for the association covering typical metropolitan centers over the country: Volume of voluntary transfers about on a level with that of the spring of 1936; rents for single family dwellings at approximately 85 per cent of the level prevailing in 1926, as against only 82 per cent at this time last year; apartment rents at about 64 per cent of the 1926 level, more than 4 points higher than at this time last year; private residential building advancing; volume of new mortgage financing a shade above that of this time last year; money beginning to be made available for industrial as well as residentials and commercial rebuilding.

SOUTHWEST BUILDING AND LOAN GROUP TO MEET HERE

The Southwestern Group Building & Loan Conference will be held May 13-14 at Hotel Statler in St. Louis. The group of which John C. McKee, of Springfield, Mo., is president, comprises members of the organization in Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Paul Smith, president of the St. Louis League of Incorporated Building and Loan Associations, announces that the following have been designated as chairmen of the various committees: Mrs. George S. Metcalf, ladies committee; A. G. Kuehner, entertainment; Sylvester Koster, registration, and A. F. Leonhardt, reception committee.

OPPOSED TO LOWER HOUSING STANDARDS

Architects Urge F H A to Resist Pressure to Modify Rules in Home Building.

Pressure is being brought to bear on the Federal Housing Administration to lower its standards in order to increase the volume of housing, the American Institute of Architects declares in a resolution forwarded to Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing Administrator. The Institute urges that this tendency "be strongly resisted" as contrary to public policy.

"The American Institute of Architects recognizes that the program of insured mortgages inaugurated by the Federal Housing Administration can be defended as sound only if it is based upon a set of reasonable minimum standards for the appraisal of architectural and other property values involved in each case," the resolution set forth.

"The impartial appraisal of these values by an insuring agency, independent of the lending agency, provides a check on over-appraisal and reduction of standards that is of vital importance to the whole structure of real estate mortgages. The practices prevalent during the 1930s are sufficient proof of the above statement.

"The American Institute of Architects fully realizes the tendency to lower the bars in times of emergency, and feels it is of extreme importance that this tendency be strongly resisted in the field of insured mortgages. The validity of the entire program will be imperilled if insurance is granted on the basis of sub-standard quality.

"It is clear that the carefully devised property and neighborhood standards developed by the F H A must not be permitted to be affected by temporary demands for action during times of economic stress such as the present."

The resolution was sent to McDonald by Charles T. Ingham of Pittsburgh, secretary of the Institute.

SOCONY VACUUM CO. LEASES CHOUTEAU AVENUE CORNER

The Socony Vacuum Oil Co. of New York has taken a long term lease on the southeast corner of Chouteau and Spring avenues, owned by the Pevely Dairy Co.

A super-gasoline and filling stations is to be installed on the site, which has a Chouteau avenue frontage of 125 feet. It is pointed out that a large number of trucks come into this area from a radius of 100 miles, while an unusual amount of traffic is diverted to Chouteau avenue, just west of the point where the new express highway terminates.

Harry Newman negotiated the lease.

COMPTON AVENUE BUILDING ACQUIRED

Two-Story Structure at Southeast Corner of Park Bought by Gordon Smith.

The southeast corner of Compton and Park avenue, formerly owned by the Boatmen's National Bank of St. Louis, has been purchased by Gordon Smith as an investment.

A two-story building, comprising six stores and three apartments, occupies the site which has 62½ feet on Park and 110 feet on Compton.

A. T. & Whitelaw Terry handled the negotiations on behalf of the Boatmen's Bank, which had acquired the property through a loan. Duke-Young, Inc., realtors, represented the purchaser.

The two-story business building at the southeast corner of Columbia and Clifton avenues, in Clifton Heights, St. Louis County, has been purchased by the Athlen Real Estate Co. It was owned by the Columbia-Clifton Corporation. The transaction was handled by Claude E. Melville, real estate dealer.

The first floor of the structure consists of two store rooms with the second comprising nine apartments. There are separate heating units. The lot fronts 56 feet on Clifton and 128 feet on Columbia.

GRAVOIS AVENUE CONCERN REPORTS RECENT DEALS

Adds to Sales Force.

C. J. Cartwright has been added to the sales department of the Bergen & Glick Realty Co. He is a specialist in city and county property.

BUILDING ON HADLEY STREET IS LEASED

The Scientific Tablet Co. has taken a 10-year lease on the two-story industrial building on the east side of Hadley street, just south of Mullanphy street, owned by the Ferguson estate represented in the negotiations by Cornet & Zeibig, Inc.

The building is a two-story structure, comprising approximately 20,000 square feet of usable floor space. It is served by the Illinois Terminal Railway (McKinley system) with spur tracks.

The concern, which was established in Belleville, Ill., manufactures salt tablets for the canning industry. Plant equipment has been installed in the building at a large outlay. The new location is just north of Cass avenue.

The Edward L. Glik Real Estate Co. represented the lessee in the negotiations which had been pending for several months. Comparatively few buildings of this type are available in this district, which includes various large industries.

RALPH KEENEY HEADS REALTY SALESMEN'S ORGANIZATION

Ralph Keeney, of the Keeney-Toelle Realty Co., was chosen president of the North St. Louis Real Estate Salesmen's Association at its annual meeting at the Northwestern Hotel last Wednesday evening.

Elmer Held of the Edward L. Kuhs Realty Co. was elected vice-president, Joseph F. Koehr of the Joseph F. Koehr, treasurer, and Elbert E. Schaeffer of the Albert E. Schaefer Realty Co., secretary. Directors chosen were John C. Gruelich, William Eichenser, Arnold J. Fleer, Adolph K. Feinberg, Fred H. Beck, Edward Klorer and Elmer W. Prange. Gruelich was made chairman of the board.

REPORTS APRIL SALES AGGREGATING $198,425

H. A. O'Rourke, Inc., reports through its salesmanager, L. M. Booker, that April transactions totaling $198,425, and involving 26 pieces of property. The following is a partial list of properties sold: 3415 Itaska street, brick bungalow, to Herman Winker; 3409 Montana street, cottage, to Bernard Hommeke; double flat at 4988-90 Mardel to Maurice Evans; 4753 Idaho avenue to Gustave Anthony; lot on Davis drive to Edgmund G. Ridgway; duplex bungalow at Andover and Glen Echo to Carl Schopp; brick bungalow at 5141 Eichelberger to George and Christine Eichelsbach; brick home situated in La Hacienda at No. 30 Rio Vista drive to Frand Mullivan. James D. Spencer with 12 years' experience in the real estate business and Norman Klein, formerly with the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., have been added to the concern's sales organization.

LAKE FOREST RESIDENCE SOLD TO SHOE MANUFACTURER

The residence recently completed at 123 Lake Forest, at the southwest corner of Clayton and Hanley road, has been acquired by Fred Barch, shoe manufacturer, from the Schiller Construction Co., which erected the building. The reported sale price was $24,000. The Glick Real Estate Co. handled the transaction.

Colonial in design, the house contains large living room overlooking garden, four extra bedrooms and three baths. The equipment includes an air-conditioning system.

MISS SELMA BREWER MADE ASSISTANT TO LOUIS F. YECKEL

Miss Selma Brewer, for many years with the legal department of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., has been appointed assistant to Louis F. Yeckel, president of Yeckel, Earickson & Co., Inc., and of the General Counsel of American Home Building and Loan Association.

RECESSION EMERGENCY LOAN PLAN

In keeping with the national program for extending credit, we offer a new Recession Emergency Loan Plan. Cash for everybody.

AUTO LOANS
Now you can make an emergency Auto Loan of $5 to $50 on any make car, paid for or not. If you owe on your car, you do not have to refinance and pay off the balance, we will make you a second loan. You save refinancing charges.
Other Auto Loans $5 to $300. Refinancing payments reduced and cash advanced.

SIGNATURE LOANS
$5 to $50 on your name only, regardless of the amount you owe. No embarrassing investigation, no red tape; no mortgages; no endorsers or co-makers. Your ability to make small monthly payments is all we require. Other loans up to $300. Phone one of our offices, tell us how much you want, the money will be waiting for you when you call.

The Fulfilment of Obligations

WERE it not our sincere desire to maintain the high standard of our establishment and services, the obligations of leadership would compel the responsibility. You will therefore find here at all times the highest type of environment and of considerate organization, available to everyone, irrespective of the cost of the funeral. An examination of our scale of prices will demonstrate affordable opportunities worthy of any circumstances.

IN MEMORIUM

BAITINGER, CATHERINE (nee Praechter)—In remembrance of our dear mother, who died April 30, 1935:

Till memories fade and life departs,
You'll live forever in our hearts.
Sadly missed by
SON AND DAUGHTER.

BLESCH, FRANK J.—In loving memory of our dad who passed away one year ago today, May 8, 1937.
Sadly missed by HIS FAMILY.

EHRHARDT, L. GEO.—In memory of, who passed away May 11, 1931.

His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away.
Sadly missed by
HIS MOTHER AND SISTERS.

HAYS, JOHN V.—In loving remembrance of our dearly beloved son and brother, who died May 10, 1937.

Just one year ago
Since our dear one passed away.
We saw him suffer, heard his sighs;
With aching hearts and weeping eyes
We saw him sinking hour by hour;
Yet could not stay death's awful power,
But now he calmly sleeps at last,
All pains, all aches, all suffering past.
Sadly missed by
HIS LOVING PARENTS AND SISTER.

HORNE, W. J.—1565 Valle, dear husband, departed March 24, 1927; Isbell, darling daughter, May 14, 1927:

BROKEN-HEARTED WIFE, MOTHER.
Requiem mass.

KULLMANN, THERESA—In loving memory of my dear mother who departed this life May 12, 1937.

I have lost my soul's companion,
A life linked with my own;
And day by day I miss her more,
As I walk through life alone.
Sadly missed by DAUGHTER EMILY.

MACHAJEWSKI, BERNICE—In loving memory of our darling daughter.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND FATHER, AND ALL WHO LOVER HER.

PUNTIKAN, ANNA—In loving memory of Anna Puntikan, who died May 12, 1925.
Sadly missed by HUSBAND, DAUGHTER, GRANDCHILDREN, AND ALL THOSE WHO LOVED HER.

SCHAEFER, THERESA—In sad but sweet memory of my darling wife and daughter, whom God called to her heavenly home, May 6, 1936:

Your heart was the truest in all the world,
Your love the best to recall,
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
Beautiful memories you left behind.
For none on earth can take your place,
You are still the dearest of all.
To live and love and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of our heart.
When we lost you, darling Theresa,
We lost our dearest pal,
We love you and we miss you,
And forever shall.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, MOTHER AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

SCHERF, ROSIE—In memory. Passed away May 6, 1934:

Gone but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by husband and daughters and all who loved her.

SCHILD (SCHIELDS), CHESTER F. — In loving memory of our dear husband and father who passed away May 5, 1937.

God in His wisdom called him home.
We bowed to His gracious will,
A precious one from us is gone,
But in memory is with us still.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND DAUGHTERS.

STAFFLER, CONST (FRANK)—Just a thought of sweet remembrance of our dear husband and father who left us May 8, 1938. Missed by
WIFE AND DAUGHTERS.
Masses every Sunday in May at St. George's Parish in honor of his soul.

WALKER, F. H.—In loving memory of my dear husband, who departed May 11, 1913. Sadly missed by HIS WIFE.

WUEST, ELIZABETH (nee DONOVAN)—In loving memory of my dear wife and our dear mother, who departed this life, May 6, 1937.

Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary troubles and trials are past,
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Sadly missed by HUSBAND, CHILDREN, AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

ZWICKEL, EMIL—In loving memory of our dear husband and father who died May 12, 1936. Till memories fade and life departs, you'll live forever in our hearts.
Sadly missed by,
WIFE AND DAUGHTER.

SALESMEN WANTED

ATTENTION—MEN WHO ARE UNEMPLOYED

In and around St. Louis are men that are complaining about work being very hard to find. Some of these men actually want work, others are not looking for work, or want something that is easy to do for a mere existence. To the men looking for a chance to prove their ability with possibilities of earning a good consistent living for themselves and their families we can present a splendid opportunity.

In our previous announcements we have repeatedly made the statement that we are not interested in men who are merely concerned with the limitations of a small income. However, we will go a long way in helping a man to a lucrative and permanent future if that man is big enough and willing enough to realize that he must pay the price and prove his worth to us by actual and conscientious hard work.

In order to assure that no man will remain in a rut because of a stipulated income used as a harness over him, we pay our men on a profit sharing basis, giving them a chance to receive in dollars and cents what they actually earn. This business is both modern and mutual. No investment is required from any man qualifying. We finance everything.

Our requirements are: Good references and neat appearance. To you who are reading this ad, is your future worth two hours' interview with our factory representative? Where he can outline what we consider a real opportunity to you?

This ad gives no honest, industrious man an excuse for being out of work. We are not interest in ad seekers or floaters. Apply in person Monday between 9:15 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. at Suite 512, Paul Brown Building, Ninth and Olive streets, St. Louis. This is a special interview and may mean the turning point of your life regardless of your present occupation.

PRINCIPIA WINS STATE CLASS 'B' TRACK MEET

LARET HURDLE VICTOR; MEDLEY TEAM SCORES

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 7. — A strong medley relay team and a hurdler gave Principa of St. Louis 15 points and its first Class B State high school track championship here today, to succeed Missouri Military Academy.

The medley relay team turned in a time of 1 minute and 59.8 seconds. Laret covered the 220-yard low hurdles in :23.4 and the 120-yard low hurdles in :15.7 for the remainder of Principia's points.

Harold Peacher, the only representative of Greenwood High of Springfield participating, carried off the Class C championship for his school, taking three firsts and one second. He placed first in the 100-yard dash, the 220-yard low hurdles and the 220-yard dash and broad jumped a second place for 18 points.

Only one record fell in both classes. Stockman of Malta Bend high-jumped 5 feet 10½ inches to break a Class C record held jointly by Hamilton, Harrisonville, Barnes of Newark, Brown of Union, and Cook of Brunswick. The old mark stood at 5 feet 10 inches.

Approximately 500 athletes from about 100 schools took part in the meet. Running events were hampered by a wet track.

FOUR ST. LOUIS SHOOTERS WIN SKEET TITLES

Four St. Louis shooters, Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace, Harold Siebens, Adolph H. Altvater and J. S. Quinn, captured the major titles in yesterday's events of the annual Missouri Eastern Zone skeet shoot at the St. Louis Skeet and Trap Club on Highway 66, one mile west of Sylvan Beach.

Altvater retained his championship in the .410 small gauge shoot when he broke 47 out of 50 targets during the early mornnig rain. He dropped three "birds" in his first 25 and one in the second 25. R. C. Prewitt of Columbia was second with 45, while Dr. Virgil Blakemore of Columbia and Charles Breeder of St. Louis tied for third with a 44 each.

The women's shoot brought out but two contestants.

Mrs. Wallace, Missouri State titleholder for the past three years, won the event with her scores of 19-24-19-22 for an 84. Mrs. Virgil A. Lewis, 1937 zone winner, shot a 60.

After breaking 50 straight targets Harold Siebens dropped three in the next two rounds to score 97 and capture the Class A title. R. Warren Ketchum proved a consistent shooter in scoring four 24's for a 96 to win second place. Ed Montgomery shot a 95, while Walter W. Bradbury and Ted Dahlke, State skeet champion, tied for fourth with a pair of 94s.

Quinn won in Class B after a shootoff with Altvater and Tyre M. Green of Columbia. Each had a 92 while in the shootoff Quinn broke a 25 straight, Altvater and Green missing a target each at the No. 4 post.

The Class C title high gun award went to R. C. Prewitt of Columbia, who shattered 92 of his 100 clay pigeons. Eleven-year-old Samuel L. Jewett Jr., of Boonville, who packs a shotgun taller than he, tied Dr. E. H. Watkins and C. H. Barker, both of Bonne Terre, for third place with an 85 each.

Siebens and Ketchum won the Class A two-man team competition with a total of 193. Dahlke and Montgomery were second with 189. Class B team honors went to Dr. Charles Magee and Charles Beeder, 180. Young Jewett and Prewitt won Class C with a score of 175.

The zone shoot ends today with competition in the five-man team, zone class and professional events, first event starting at 9 a. m.

Auto News and Notes

A. E. Barit.

THE REAL MAIN ISSUE TODAY is stimulation of business and buying by the ultimate consumer, A. E. Barit, president of the Hudson Motor Car Co., said in the course of an unexpected visit to St. Louis Monday and Tuesday when he and W. R. Tracy, vice-president and general sales manager, were guests of the Hudson and Terraplane Sales Corporation and local dealers at a luncheon at Hotel Chase and visited a number of the dealers. Constant effort to promote confidence, and less talk about depression and remedies for it, were equally important, he declared. He said that he had found a slight indication of increasing confidence in the general situation on the part of some persons.

"So far it has no assumed large proportions," he said, "but if it does, we will soon be on the upward trend." He asked the dealers and their salesmen to avoid discussing any depression on the ground that this tended to feed the fear complex in the minds of customers, and urge that they work hard to promote confidence in the soundness of the country and its future.

W. R. Tracy.

Barit held that the present depression originated in the state of mind of the buying public, and said that it would end when people again realized that the country was as sound as ever and saw that they should have unlimited confidence in it. He thought that the national mental attitude might be already becoming more optimistic, and declared that the important thing was to do everything possible to stimulate general buying. One of his principal objects on the trip, he said, was to try to make the sales force see that the job of building back out of the depression was up to them. "They are the ones best equipped to stimulate the confidence of the buying public," he said.

Tracy said that while he knew that business had been bad, yet traces of increasing business were beginning to appear in various parts of the country, and in the Middle Western region was better than in the East and the extreme West.

The meeting was in charge of W. S. Milton, manager in the St. Louis region. Barit and Tracy left St. Louis Tuesday night to attend similar meetings in Chicago, Milwaukee and other key cities.

THE P. W. WHITE MOTOR CO., 3116 Locust, has been appointed distributer of Bantam cars and commercial vehicles in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. Bantam models include a Playboy roadster, coupes in master and business types and light delivery trucks with pick-up and panel bodies.

P. W. White.

The cars, which are manufactured in a plant at Butler, Pa., are the lowest priced made in this country and are designed for exceptional economy, gasoline mileages up to 60 miles per gallon being claimed. The pick-up and panel trucks are built for loads up to 500 pounds and, as are the passenger cars, for unusual tire mileage.

The Bantam Playboy roadster is said to be the only one of its kind built in the United States. Its body is two-toned, and the windshield can be folded forward. The master coupe seats two persons, while the business coupe has a single armchair seat to provide extra package room. The Bantam engine gives car speed up to 60 miles per hour.

The cars have steel bodies, four-wheel brakes, safety glass all around, syncromesh transmission with silent second gear, shockproof steering, motor mounted in rubber, force feed lubrication and disc wheels with 5.00 by 15 tires.

P. W. White is president of the distributing firm. His son, T. A. White, is secretary and treasurer, and E. O. Stagg is general manager.

AGAIN A MAJORITY OF THE cars in the Indianapolis 500-mile race May 30 will roll on Firestone tires as in past years, information from the track indicates. Since the 1920 race, every winner of the Indianapolis classic has used Firestone tires. As there will be no fuel restrictions for this race, higher speeds than ever before are expected, with the prospect that tires will get a harder test, at qualifying speed perhaps faster than 120 m. p. h. and an average speed for the 500 miles as fast as 115 m. p. h.

GROUPS OF LEADING DEALers and salesmen from all of the 26 zones of the Oldsmobile retail organization will have ringside seats at the Louis-Schmeling fight in June as guests of D. E. Ralston, the general sales manager. Ralston's guests will be the winners of a contest which will be concluded May 31. On the evening of the fight, they will be entertained at a banquet given by Ralston and other Oldsmobile executives.

A. L. Viles.

NATIONAL TIRE WEEK, which is planned to begin next Saturday and continue through May 21, will be backed by the tire manufacturers and more than 125,000 employes and dealers, as well as by thousands in affiliated industries, according to A. L. Viles, who is active in the preparations.

"While the week's campaign will stress safety on the highways and streets, pointing out that continuing to drive with smooth, worn tires is to invite accidents, it also will be vitally important as a means of increasing consumption of raw materials, stepping up production, furthering employment and adding to the nation's payrolls," a statement in behalf of the tire manufacturers said.

"In 1937, employes in the tire industry received wages and salaries in excess of $100,000,000. Any increase in sales resulting from the nationwide observance of Tire Safety Week would assure not only a continuation, but an increase in employment in that industry.

"Tire men have estimated that 50 million tires will be due for replacement in 1938, and that replacing this number would result in sales aggregating approximately $500,000,000. Such an amount is 10 per cent of the $5,000,000,000 which President Roosevelt has asked Congress to appropriate for aiding recovery.

"No accurate estimate can be made of the number of persons that would benefit directly by a purchasing program involving close to a half-billion dollars, except that the number would be legion. It would embrace a multitude, ranging all the way from the picker on the cotton plantation to the service station attendant who finally sends a new tire out onto the highways. To the employes of the tire manufacturers and their families who will benefit by the increased business must be added those of the 50,000 distributors and dealers in all parts of the country, as well as those of the 41,500 gasoline filling stations where tires are sold.

"So it is obvious that many families in the country are affected by the state of the tire industry. This total, of course, is greatly increased when consideration is given to the cotton growers and their families, together with the workers in the various industries that furnish materials and service to the tire manufacturer.

"No consideration of an increased tire business can be made without taking into account what effect it would have on the consumption of raw materials, particularly cotton and crude rubber.

"Of cotton alone, the tire industry last year consumed 301,000,000 pounds, or 5 per cent of the entire production of the country. Consumption of crude rubber amounted to 721,827,000 pounds. Other industries supplying raw materials or services to the tire manufacturers, to mention only a few, are chemical, paper, wire, coal, oil, paint, lumber and transportation.

A. W. "AL" RICKENBACKER, driving a Hudson "112", was here Tuesday and Wednesday on a tour of key cities with advance news on the 500-mile race at Indianapolis May 30. Rickenbacker says that advance reservations indicate a record crowd for the race. More than the usual interest is displayed in this year's race" Rickenbacker said, "because of the adoption of international racing rules, which require a change in design of the cars. Instead of the 366-cubic-inch engines permitted last year, a maximum of 274 cubic inches, without superchargers, and 183 inches, with superchargers will be allowed. Furthermore, there will be no restriction on the type of fuel used. Last year, the drivers were required to use standard stock gasoline, and fuel consumption was restricted to as low as 37½ gallons for the entire race in 1936. This year, the spectators will see sleek streamlined racing jobs roaring around the two and one-half-mile course with only the driver, as it is not compulsory to carry a riding mechanic.

THE NUMBER OF NEWSPAPERS carrying Standard Oil Co. of Indiana advertising has been increased from 1596 to 1746, according to Wesley I. Nunn, advertising manager. So, a circulation of more than 14,000,000 is being used to the company's spring and summer gasoline, oil and clean restrooms and low cost per mile campaign, backed by more than 12,000 dealers in Standard Oil products in 13 Midwest states.

WILMER H. SCHUH, PRESIDENT of the National Association of Petroleum Retailers, will be in St. Louis Wednesday and Thursday to prepare for the association's national convention, which will be held here Sept. 27, 28 and 29. He will address the members of the St. Louis association Wednesday.

A 300,000-POUND TORSION testing machine in the Buick metallurgical control laboratories is said to be the largest of the kind in the country. Another powerful piece of apparatus in the laboratories is a 60,000-pound hydraulic tensile machine. In general, the laboratories are charged with responsibility for materials testing, development and specifications. But they also function in control activities providing a special inspection service covering incoming raw materials and all manufactured products in which heat treatment is involved.

NATIONAL TIRE WEEK, ich is planned to begin next urday and continue through y 21, will be backed by the tire nufacturers and more than 125,000 employes and dealers, as well as by thousands in affiliated industries, according to A. L. Viles, who is active in the preparations.

A. L. Viles.

"While the week's campaign will stress safety on the highways and streets, pointing out that continuing to drive with smooth, worn s is to invite accidents, it also be vitally important as a ns of increasing consumption of materials, stepping up produc-, furthering employment and ing to the nation's payrolls," a ement in behalf of the tire nufacturers said.

In 1937, employes in the tire intry received wages and salaries excess of $100,000,000. Any inse in sales resulting from the ionwide observance of Tire Safe-Week would assure not only a tinuation, but an increase in ployment in that industry.

Tire men have estimated that million tires will be due for reement in 1938, and that replacthis number would result in s aggregating approximately ,000,000. Such an amount is 10 cent of the $5,000,000,000 which sident Roosevelt has asked Cons to appropriate for aiding reery.

No accurate estimate can be le of the number of persons that ld benefit directly by a purchas program involving close to a -billion dollars, except that the ber would be legion. It would race a multitude, ranging all way from the picker on the on plantation to the service st attendant who finally sends a tire out onto the highways. To employes of the tire manufacrs and their families who will efit by the increased business t be added those of the 50,000 ributors and dealers in all parts he country, as well as those of 41,500 gasoline filling stations re tires are sold.

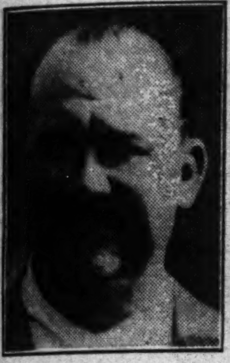
By LUCIUS BEEBE

NEW YORK, May 7.

ALMOST ALL CELEBRITIES who have occasion to visit Ft. Worth, and so, of course, come in contact with Amon G. Carter, who is practically proprietor of the place and probably the most hospitable man north of the Rio Grande, return with a hanker for the old frontier West and the trappings of the cattle range. Billy Rose, after the Texas Centennial, came back with a Sheriff's authority and a pair of steer horn-mounted Colt's frontier model 44's. Almost everyone who is anybody gets a wide white cowman's hat, of which Carter keeps a complete store in his office to fit all comers. Dick Maney, after a few weeks of exposure to the sunshine of the State Bar around the corner from the Texas Hotel, was invested with more Lone Star colloquialisms than Stanley Walker, and was reported to have had run up a genuine fringed buckskin dinner jacket. Hardest smitten of all, however, was Paul Whiteman, who, after a summer at the Casa Manana, came back to New York looking even more in the Buffalo Bill tradition than Jack Kriendler after a winter in Palm Springs. He brought with him a horse named Walkalong and more cowboy haberdashery than you'd see at a rodeo.



PAUL WHITEMAN

—o—o—

● WHITEMAN RIDES REGULARLY in Central Park, causing no end of excitement among the bowler-hatted and Tattersall-wainscotted folk along the bridle path, attired in a broad hat, a deep blue shirt, low-cut Mexican boots and steel spurs covered with his initials and bearing his likeness in gold on one side, and a belt encrusted with outsize gems and supporting a pair of handsomely tooled six-guns, with steer heads carved in the ivory stocks and diamonds for the eyes. His authority for carrying firearms derives from his official position as Deputy United States Marshal. Quite a number of people stare at Whiteman, especially on Sunday, when the park is filled with uninhibited citizens, and recently a pair of young things on horseback trotted up and asked if they might look at him. "Go ahead and look," said Whiteman. "You know," ventured one miss, after an admiring appraisal, "we've been out West and have seen a lot of cowboys, but we never before saw a cowboy quite like you!"

Astute executives of the New York Telephone Co., at the suggestion of this department, are planning to list the World's Fair number under "W," instead of under "N," as hitherto . . . Few think of it as New York World's Fair, 1939, Inc., and its classification as such to date has caused considerable confusion . . . The newest gag among fashionables with nothing more important to do is to see friends off on the Bermuda boats and then hurry around and fly down to the islands, so as to greet them at the pier when they land in Hamilton . . . It frightens people like anything and is approximately the modern equivalent of the wag who, in the class picture, used to run around the camera and appear at both ends of the group.

● FEW REALIZE how hard the glamour boys of Manhattan work at their profession or chosen form of expression, as the case may be. A large percentage of the handsome youths about town whose photographs, adorning the bar at the Stork with the debutante of the year or lunching at the Persian Room or illustrating the Florida beaches, make their living elsewhere, and being a lad of the boulevards is home-work or extra-curricular activity with them. A few, of course, make a career of it, but they must work fast, as their generation in the field is brief, and there are new recruits storming the town every year, stemming from Yale or Michigan or the gasoline stations of the California boulevards, panting to get to Music Box first nights and not at all unwilling to get a toe in the eye of some present exquisite and climb right over his face to accomplish it.

The generation, long since passed, that packed its store suit in a Gladstone bag and came to make good in a business or professional way had something of a chance, but the boys who imagine that a judicious distribution of charm will have them driving a supercharged Mercedes and getting a low bow from waiter captains at the Ritz within a twelvemonth will find the competition rather effectively brutal and ready to kick them downstairs with a minimum of hesitation. Furthermore, the established glitter boys have perfected an urbanity and competence of technique which nine times out of ten can make naivete seem positively goatish by comparison. It's a tough enough town for the hallroom boys as it is without having any fascinating Johnny Come Latelys around.

● MUSICAL CIRCLES are tittering happily over the most recent anecdote about Mischa Elman, the fiddler, and a celebrity reputed to be by no means disinclined to talk about himself. Throughout a long dinner in his honor Elman talked at some length about Elman. There was a discussion of his most recent appearance at Carnegie, a considered statement about a masterpiece he was in process of composing, a briefly patronizing reference to several critics who hadn't seen quite eye to eye with the great man on the subject of himself after recent concerts. The first person singular dominated soup, fish, entree and salad, until with the arrival of the dessert, Elman apparently rather abashed, stopped abruptly and apologized laughingly for having monopolized the conversation throughout dinner. "I'm sorry," he said. "I've been talking about no one but myself. Let's talk about you for a change," and he turned to the guest at his elbow. "And how did YOU like my last concert?"

Here's How to Rate Your Boy Friend

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D. An Outstanding Psychologist

"LOVE is blind," runs the old saying.

And Dan Cupid has been painted as the sightless god, shooting his arrows with entire disdain for reason and common sense.

For centuries mankind has passively submitted to these false beliefs. But today we live in a scientific age where we know it is wise to direct our emotional life intelligently.

The appalling divorce rate in America is partly a result of entering matrimony blindly.

It is high time we painted eyes in Cupid's head, and began picking our mates according to standard specifications.

So many unmarried couples have asked me to prepare a rating scale for sweethearts, much after the fashion of my recent tests for husbands and wives, that I finally decided to undertake the arduous task. It required nine months for me to gather the data and organize the results in a standardized set of tests.

These tests represent the composite likes and dislikes of 1187 unmarried girls and women ranging in ages from 16 to 42, as well as 1144 unmarried men whose ages varied from 17 to 46.

Each person was interviewed privately, and asked not his or her criticisms of the opposite sex in general, but of a specific member thereof.

For example, let's suppose we are questioning a young man named Bob.

"Bob, do you have a sweetheart or special girl friend?" we ask.

If Bob answers affirmatively, we proceed: "Would you mind telling me confidentially what you like best about her? What things please you most?"

Bob will mention various items, some of major importance and some which might be considered of slight significance.

After he has named all the specific virtues or characteristics which especially please him, we put the opposite question:

"Now would you mind telling me if there is anything about her which irritates you or displeases you? Anything which you'd like to see corrected or eliminated?"

If we were interviewing a woman, we asked similar questions. All of those interviewed were very co-operative, although some at the first contact with the question regarding faults, would gallantly reply:

"Why, she is perfect. There isn't anything about her which I dislike!"

To this I would casually respond: "Yes, she certainly sounds like a wonderful girl. But do you notice any little things or minor faults that you'd like to see changed?"

And then he would reply: "Well, since you've mentioned it, I do get a little angry when she flirts with other fellows, etc., etc."

One man who first denied any faults in his fiancee, later confessed to 19 traits or characteristics about her which irritated.

Men and women do notice the faults in their sweethearts, but often will refuse to face the facts or consciously analyze the situation before marriage.

After the honeymoon is over, however, they may then begin to quarrel and parade a long line of irritating things in their mates.

The proper time to analyze one's sweetheart as well as one's self is before marriage. By facing facts at that time, we can either correct the flaws in our appearance or behavior, or else realize that certain traits are so deeply intrenched in habit that we might as well accept our sweethearts along with their faults, and not be too hopeful of renovating their personalities afterwards.

These tests for sweethearts don't take any of the thrill or romance out of courtship, but they will protect young people from letting their emotions run away with their good sense.

Love is a matter of habit. If you are keeping company with a man or woman at present, then employ these tests before you become so enmeshed you can't think clearly.

If your sweetheart rates very low, you may try to correct him or else look for better prospects.

Rate your escorts or girl friends—the test for girls will appear next Sunday—before you fall deeply in love. Marriage should be a permanent affair, and you must not expect to build a stable home on a rotten foundation.

Some of you women readers may become indignant next Sunday about the red nail polish demerit or the high "weighting" regarding alcohol. Just remember, however, that these are the Late Spring Fashion Trend as Interpreted By St. Louis Women

By SYLVIA STILES

GAY hats that dominate the costume, youthful pastel shades competing with dark sheers and multicolored prints, boleros holding their leadership in spite of a flurry of longer jackets, accessories contributing crisp accents against neutral town costumes and flowers strewn with a lavish hand over millinery, coats and dresses—all are typical of the late spring fashion trend as interpreted by St. Louisans.

The abundance of flower trimmed millinery and of sheer or delicately toned costumes indicate that the women who plan their spring wardrobes well look toward the summer. There's no such predicament as being caught on a warm May day in a stuffy suit because wise planners of wardrobes are up to the tricks of St. Louis weather.

SMART COSTUMES seen about town on recent "summer" days were selected for the future. There's that dusty pink ensemble, for example, which Miss Marjorie Dixon of Washington University was wearing when seen by a Post-Dispatch camera. This is ideally suited to any casual daytime needs of May or later. Made of sheer flannel, the one-piece frock has a high scalloped neckline, short sleeves and a skirt that is generously gored. The clever bolero is trimmed with bands of tweed that march down the sleeves and edge the jacket. A poke-bonnet made of the same fabric as the costume has a heart-shaped brim. White suede pumps that are trimmed with brown calfskin, a bag of the same leathers and white doeskin gloves complete a well-chosen ensemble.

Other girls classed among the city's "best-dressed" have chosen their wardrobes equally as well for warm spring weather. Miss Kay Hampton, recently voted the best-dressed on the Hilltop campus, has a sheer black frock among her dressier daytime costumes. This follows the two-piece mode, the skirt pleated in clusters at the front and back, and the overblouse made with a square neckline outlined with lace, short sleeves that are shirred down the center and pockets placed at the edge of a little yoke. A sash attached to the side seams ties at the back. A white straw cartwheel, bound with black grosgrain also is banded with black ribbon on which are perched two white love birds. Miss Hampton's footwear combines patent and gabardine.

—o—o—

MISS BETTY CONZELMAN'S favorite late-spring frock is af navy blue sheer material figured in white and accented with a wide belt banded with white leather. The skirt is gored. A large navy blue hat serves as a becoming sunshade. A navy blue ribbed wool coat that is collarless and fitted is worn with this dress as with other daytime frocks carrying out the navy and white theme. A sheer gray wool dress worn with luggage tan brimmed hat and accessories is becoming to Miss Peggy Baker, another Washington University student, while Miss Marjorie Chapman looks exceedingly well in one of those new natural colored shantung-like fabric dresses that are classed as "packables" because they are difficult to crush. Hers has a padded shoulder line and short sleeves, and buttons down the front. Brown and white spectator sports footwear and a large natural colored straw hat are other forerunners of the summer season.

THERE'S NO MISTAKING the importance of millinery this season with the bright little hats topping simple costumes and the dashing Gainsborough models supplying the festive emphasis to dark sheer afternoon frocks. The flowered turban is fashion's darling and it looks its prettiest when created in typical floral tints. Two example that are distinctive: Mrs. Charles Rice's adorable lilac turban on a navy blue foundation, its navy blue veil tied at the back and the striking red flower turban of Mrs. Paul Jamison which has a lacquered bird posed on top.

One of those interesting Gainsborough hats that looks as though it might have been taken out of a famous painting is being worn by Mrs. Allen Wood. It is of navy rough straw and is caught up at the side with a bandeau. Pink and blue flowers hold up the brim on top while there is a flattering cluster of pink flowers next to the face. Add to these a navy veil tied with an enormous bow under the chin and you understand why everyone looks at the hat instead of at Mrs. Wood's attractive navy sheer frock so cleverly trimmed with shell pink embroidered batiste.

MISS EUNICE RAMEY has been wearing a black bolero jacket costume that is accented with white flower and white gloves, the only bright touch being the red zipper which fastens the little coat. A black felt hat designed as a poke bonnet is extremely wide of brim at the sides and has rows of little black bows to adorn it. Another good-looking costume that does without splashy colors because the emphasis is placed upon an extremely designed chapeau is that of Mrs. George Lutz. The costume is of black sheer material printed with a tiny white clover leaf design, the white motif brought out by the kettle edge of white grosgrain on a wide-brimmed black felt sailor and by white gloves and bag. An eagle feather which is stuck upright through the side of the hat next to the crown ends like a dagger beside the face and soars so high that a low doorway might be a menace.

THE VOGUE of the allover printed frock which has a matching hat is too important to be overlooked in this season of interesting fashions. Mrs. Fred S. Anheuser has been wearing a stunning example of this mode, her dress and high, draped turban being made of a paisley printed silk. One of those new knee-length reefer coats of nubby tweed in a chartreuse shade is an impressive addition to this costume while brown footwear and bag repeat the darkest tone of the printed fabric.

Noted among other arresting printed ensembles is the sheer jacket frock of Mrs. Norrie Passino. Deep tones of red and green are combined on a black background. The skirt is of the popular pleated type while the jacket has the new longer length and is fitted with cardigan precision at the waistline. A little hat with brim turned up sharply at the sides is adorned with dark red wings while the same tone of red is repeated in a carnation cluster on the coat lapel.

—o—o—

WHITE PIN DOTS on a navy crepe background create an ideal fabric for a spring costume of the jacket type, as evidenced by the version chosen by Mrs. O. A. Kelley. This consists of one-piece dress which has a many-gored skirt and a long-sleeved bolero. A bright green patent leather belt and a matching green 'kerchief tucked into the bolero pocket contribute gay accents. A navy saucer brimmed hat and navy ties are in accord with the tailored tone of the ensemble.

MY OPINION

by

Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

WE are two girls of 15 and want something to do. We live in the outer part of town and cannot go to town to see our friends or go to different clubs. There are a few girls in our neighborhood who are about our age, but they have beaux and we are not allowed to go out yet. We could have friends from the city to come and visit us, but they wouldn't want to. It's not that we haven't a nice home and parents; but we live a quarter of a mile past a poor neighborhood and they get the impression that we live in that neighborhood. We get tired of reading, sewing, etc. We want something to do. LONELY 15S.

If you try to make your home and lawn look as attractive as possible, no one will care who lives a quarter of a mile away. If you have a little piece of ground, why don't you make a flower garden? Grow vines over the house and fence, and have some place, either in the yard or near, where you can play games. This is the time of the year to get the most out of sunshine and fresh air. You can play ball, tennis, go on hikes, and organize a club to do all these things.

Invite some of the girls your age out to your house to organize a bunch for outdoor games, serve them some cake and some kind of soft drink. This will start the bunch.

You are too young to sit around and mope because you haven't anything to do. You can be busy as bees.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● I WANT TO THANK YOU from the bottom of my heart (which feels pretty swollen with happiness just now) for helping me.

I have just received a letter from Miss Madelyn Roussin of Chesterfield, Mo., and, after reading her kind advice to me, and the most welcome encouragement offered, I am overwhelmed with happiness—and this all came through you! I only wish I could do something grand for both of you to show my appreciation. I have written her.

I know it must be trying many times for you to answer letters when the day has been unusually hard, yet you never fail to give good advice to everyone. You are a real angel and I am proud to know you even through your letters and column. God bless you. Sincerly,

AGNES W.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● ABOUT TWO WEEKS AGO I addressed a letter to "Emily Post's Column" regarding the correct form to follow in my particular case concerning my engagement and wedding. To date, I haven't seen her answer in the paper and am now wondering if I should have written this letter to you instead; that is, I am not sure whether that column answers such questions as I requested information on.

I signed this letter "A Reader" and if I am not being too presumptious, I would certainly appreciate it if you could give me my information.

Thanking you in anticipation of your courtesy, I am, sincerely yours,

A READER.

Mrs. Post answers such questions, I feel sure (though you neglected to say just what these were) and probably you will hear from her if you included a stamped, self-addressed envelope. If you do not hear, or you care to submit the questions to me, I shall be glad to help you out if you will send me self-addressed, stamped envelope for my small brochure, "Guide for the Bride." I will also answer any questions not covered in the pamphlet.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM COMING TO YOU with a puzzle I have been trying to work for two years. My husband is 36 and a cripple; I am 29. He works for a shop in the county and goes out once or twice a week, leaving me at home. When I say I want to go with him, he tells me he is invited to one of the employer's homes and that I was not invited. When parties are given at the shop it is the same story.

I happen to know that others take their whole families to the parties at these shops. I beg him to take me, as I love a good time. Please advise me. L. C.

If you know some of the other employes or families who attend these parties, try to arrange to go with them. Say to your husband that you would prefer to go with him, but since he does not see it that way, you will just go with some of the neighbors. Perhaps if he sees you there having a good time and appearing pleasant and attractive he will be more willing to take you next time.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● WILL YOU PLEASE TELL ME what days of the week these dates were on? July 7, 1927, and July 18, 1922. V. ROE F.

July 7, 1927 came on Thursday; July 18, 1922 on Tuesday.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

SOME TIME AGO I met a young man whom I think very much of, although I haven't seen him very often. The last time we were together he didn't mention seeing me again, and I care enough for him so that I wouldn't want to lose track of him entirely. He's everything I admire in a man, but he doesn't seem to care a great deal for the opposite sex. How can I go about winning him over without seeming too forward? If you have any suggestions they will be greatly appreciated.

Thanks, LONELY.

You will have to "make haste slowly" in the matter of winning over the somewhat slow young man. If he has shown you some attention, you could very well have a little party and ask him to join it; either for an evening at home or a movie party you are giving or organizing.

How would you like to have my folder on "Popularity"? Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope if you wish it.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

WE ARE A GROUP of high school boys who are very much interested in baseball. We have played together for about three years and a few of us have had high school league baseball experience. We would like to know where we can get information pertaining to the entering of a team in the "Joe Medwick," "Frank Frisch" etc. leagues that operate in Forest Park. Any information would be greatly appreciated. A. E. G.

How Inferiority Complex Works In Individuals

"The 'Sufferer' Is Really a Selfish, Grasping, Battling Egotist."

By Elsie Robinson

I DOUBT if there has ever been such a perfect blanket alibi for general cussedness as this inferiority complex racket.

It's advocates do not, naturally, call it a racket. To them it is a sincere and scientific explanation of certain weakness and failures which are beyond their control.

Once upon a time, erring mortals were held responsible for such weaknesses . . . and cussed out or kicked out accordingly. Then along came psychology and explained that it wasn't really their fault at all. They couldn't help themselves. Because, once upon a time, something had happened to them. Something that chronically cramped their psychological style, as it were, and made them feel like a dented dime instead of a million dollars.

So of course, with such a handicap, they couldn't be expected to be up to a two-fisted fight, like other guys, but were forced to flop and take the count in the third round. For instance—

Suppose you feel embarrassed when you meet strangers?

Then that's the result of your folks making you feel so dumb when you were a kid. And it's perfectly useless for anyone to tell you to give yourself a good kick in the shins and snap out of it. For you just can't. You've got an inferiority complex.

—o-o—

OR SUPPOSE you fail at the office and can't take it when the boss bawls you out . . . or fight with the wife . . . or are too sensitive to look for a new job . . . or get blue spells . . . or think people have it in for you?

Then that's also because somebody picked on you once . . . or laughed at you . . . or didn't give you a fair deal. And so you acquired an inferiority complex—and there's no use expecting you to perk up like other people.

In fact, there's practically no error which you may commit, from chewing your nails to mass murder, which isn't, psychologically speaking, the result of some bad break when you were a poor helpless little child and couldn't defend yourself.

So, ever since, you've had to be a sad, timid, modest, retiring sort of person who never gets nothing from nobody, nohow, nowhere.

All of which sounds pretty impressive. Also familiar. For there are at least three in every office or large family who are working the theory overtime. And, I confess, I've fallen for the line myself countless times. And would probably still be falling if it were not for one flaw in the picture. . . .

According to the theory, these inferiority complex victims are invariably broken blossoms who squirm along through life without even a friendly look from the grandstand.

—o-o—

A TRULY pathetic picture, which should wring tears from a cobblestone . . . save for one fact—

Did you ever actually see one of these inferiority complex guys who was either modest or retiring when it came to getting anything he or she wanted?

Did you ever see on of 'em who wouldn't talk an ear off an elephant recounting his or her symptoms . . . or who wouldn't bite the proverbial bulldog and spit in the proverbial cop's eye if you tried to shoo him off?

In short, did you ever meet one who wasn't the most selfish, grasping, hard-boiled, battling egotist that ever took a soft-hearted sucker for a ride?

No, you never did.

And you never will.

And that's why I put my tongue in my cheek—and padlock on my pocktbook—when I hear an inferiority complexer coming my way.

Tomorrow You'll Wear

OMBRE stockings. One of the newest developments in smart hosiery is the shading of the stockings in ombre effect. The darker tone of the color is apparent from the back, and this graduates to a light tone in front. The effect is slenderizing and smart.

—Raincoats and capes in patterns of country plaids, checks, Scotch plaids and novel fabrics effects.

—Accessories of crocodile skins in rich shades of blue, rose, green, tan and biscuit.

—Suede gloves to match the color of the crocodile bags, with cuffs of the same crocodile. Crocodile belts also to match.

—Perforations in patent leather shoes have grown to eyelet size, and you match them with a bag.

VENUS DE MILO in MODERN DRESS

Her Proportions Would Make Her a Bit Too Heavy for Present-Day Fashions

By

Alice Wade Robinson

JOHN POWERS, who, more than any other one person in America, has initiated careers in beauty for American girls, claims that the prettiest ones come from Texas and Virginia. The Middle West, though, so he says, yearly produces a bumper crop of lovely girls. In so far as racial background goes. Powers is enthusiastic over the photographic success of girls with Swedish, Norwegian or Hungarian blood. They're tops to the camera's eye. Their lithe grace in movement, their sculpturally beautiful bone-structure and their finely-textured skin and hair make for a combination hard to better.

Yet not one of those beauties would measure up exactly to Venus de Milo's classic dimensions. Nor do they wish to. For in so far as modern dress and modern esthetic demands go, that idol of the ancient world is passe. Our clothes nowadays emphasize slenderness. We want a long, smooth-flowing line from bust to hip-top. It makes us seem slimmer.

Not that Venus de Milo is dumpy. Her height precludes that. But her specific proportions make her a bit too heavy and girthy for modern dress. Because of that we must look elsewhere for the ideal American beauty standard: the type which will meet every rigorous aesthetic proportional demand and yet wear modern clothes with graceful ease.

So I gave you Betty Williams. This Louisiana girl has the ideal American figure—so say painters, sculptors, photographers and dress designers. So, too, say Powers, whose life work it is yearly to pass upon the aesthetic qualifications of thousands of photographic models.

Let's compare Betty Williams' physical proportions with those of the antique Venus. That way we can more graphically note what's been happening—as to figure measurements—since 1820. It was in that year that the Venus we still revere as the most beautiful statue of the ancient world was discovered on Greece's island, Melos.

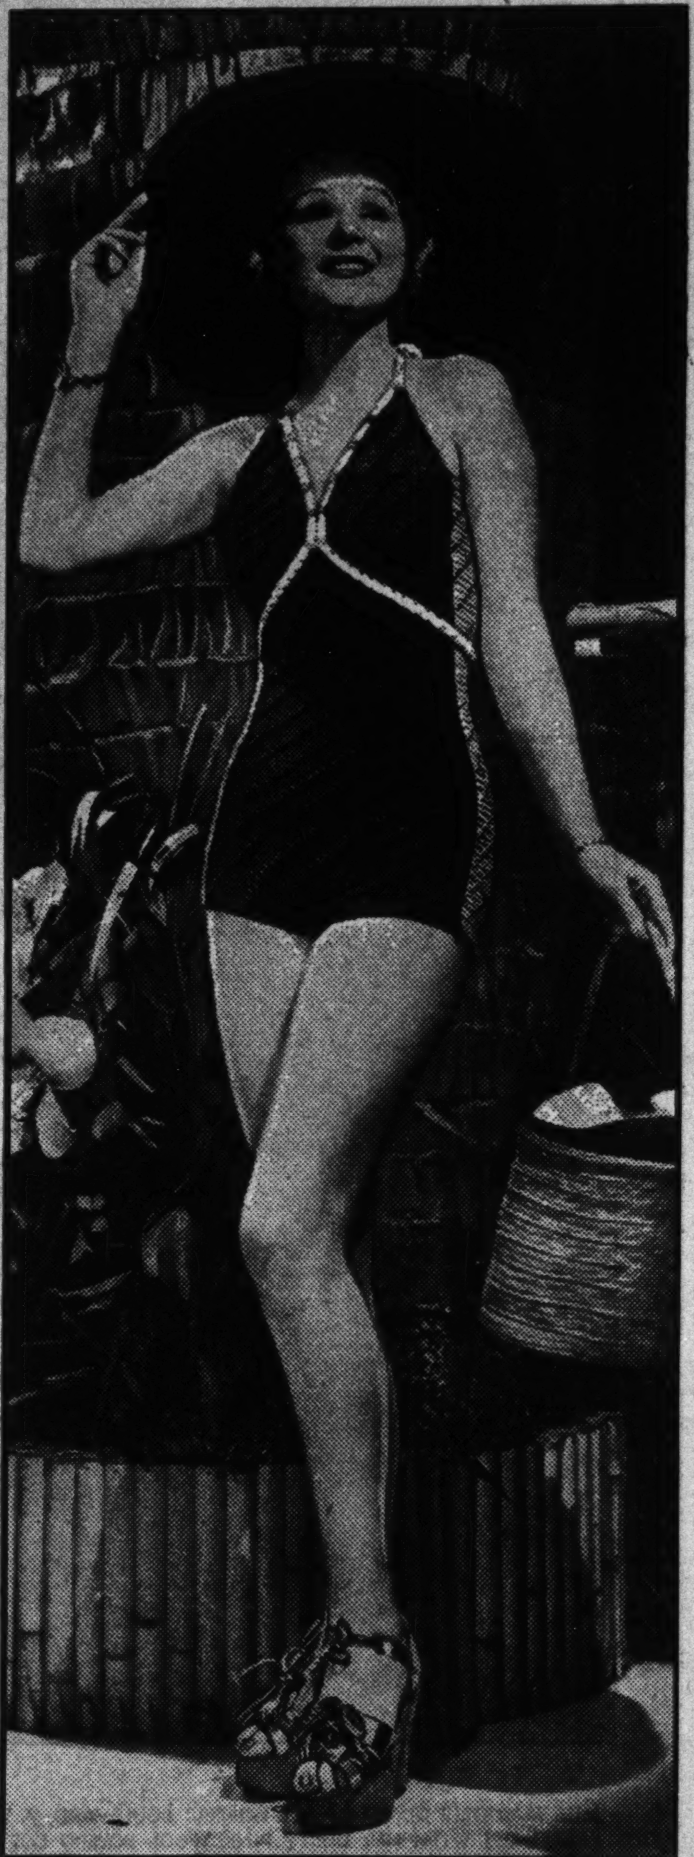
VENUS DE MILO (Classic Ideal)		BETTY WILLIAMS (American Ideal)
5 ft. 4 in.	height	5 ft. 6 in.
12⅛ in	neck	12 in.
34¾ in.	bust	34 in.
28½ in.	waist	24 in.
36 in.	hips	34 in.
6½ in.	wrist	6 in.
10½ in.	forearm	8¼ in.
12 in.	upper arm	9½ in.
8½ in.	ankle	8 in.
13½ in.	calf	13 in.
13½ in.	knee	13½ in.
19½ in.	thigh	19 in.

You will see that we like our girls taller nowadays, smaller though as to every other measurement with the single exception of the knee. That happens to tally. Miss Williams weighs 116 pounds—but she's still far from 30 years of age, at which period (so nutrition experts say) for her height she should get her weight up to 138 pounds. Quite a jump, but a feat not too hard if combined with intelligent knowledge on how to do it and the will to stick to a health regime.

Due to our national fondness for participation in outdoor sports, shoe manufacturers tell us that feet are getting longer and narrower. The average American college girl wears 6AA. So does Betty Williams. As to accessories, both she and the college girls again match: Gloves, size 6; hat, 12½; stockings, 9½. So much for physical dimensions. Perfect as Betty's are, fortunately—after all, her job revolves around figure symmetry—she could, we are sure, make her living at many another job requiring intelligence, poise and tact.

For she's a thoroughly representative American girl of the highest type—well-bred, ambitious, unassuming, adaptable, hard-working. "Every year," to quote Powers, "more and more girls of Betty Williams' sort come to the office for jobs or send in snapshots. Expensive, retouched photographs are grand for the family archives, but these youngsters are thrifty and clear-headed. They know that a snapshot will tell whether or not they're photogenic. Since that's what they want to know, they're not going to waste money on a trip to New York without being pretty sure of the outcome.

"They're not temperamental, either. This new generation is analytical, responsible, conscientious, good workmen at their craft. Modern American girls have excellent heads at their jobs—and they use them." Use yours, too, fair readers. Now's the era of Beauty plus Brains, good humor and charm.



BETTY WILLIAMS . . . "HAS THE IDEAL AMERICAN FIGURE."

Veils for Brides

Spring brides in search of new costume ideas will find that the most novelty appears in veils. Tulle turbans that wrap the coiffure but leave the top of the head uncovered, peaked caps of organza and unique flower arrangements made of tulle and marquisette are suggested as variations of more conventional headdresses. Muffs and parasols made of flowers are among the new accents that add interest to bridesmaids' costumes and introduce attractive color motifs.

Pink Coats

After a flurry of pink hats, blouses and accessories, the designers are stressing pink coats. Their latest versions are designed for town wear with dark or printed dresses. The pastel and dusty pink tones look best but it doesn't matter whether the coats are boxy or fitted. When worn with a printed frock, it isn't necessary that the pink shade be repeated in the dress material because this is a season of striking contrasts.

Dramatic Designs

Dramatic flower designs on white or black backgrounds contribute glamour to evening gowns. The extremely large patterns are shown extensively in a collection of new frocks that recently arrived in St. Louis. Chiffon and crepe are the two materials which display these motifs to best advantage, the silhouettes stressing the skirt with wide hemline and the low-cut bodice which has inconspicuous shoulder straps.

Beauty Editor's Modern Memo

REMEMBER Scarlett O'Hara's struggle for a 17-inch waist? Mae West's is almost identical with that of the Venus de Milo.

—o-o—

THE modern ideal waist is 10 inches less than the hips.

—o-o—

WHEN is your figure at its best? Artists say American girls have the best figure symmetry between the ages of 17 and 24.

—o-o—

THE arms should be three times the length of the head. Legs—four times the head-length.

—o-o—

ASIDE from chapeaux, modern styles are more sensible than they've been for centuries. But they require good figures. That's a spur.

—o-o—

THE shoulders should be twice the width of the head.

—o-o—

THE face should be as long as it is wide from temple to temple.

—o-o—

THE ideal height for your figure is six times the length of your foot.

—o-o—

JOHN POWERS says that few models walk well. Takes time to rid many of them of the "football slouch."

—o-o—

HE advises such bad promenaders to "take the head out of the shoulders, the shoulders out of the hips. Lift the feet. See yourself as a walking, talking or sitting picture. Then be one."

—o-o—

REMEMBER that shoes and high heels add height. They frequently increase it three inches.

—o-o—

PROFESSIONAL photographic models usually require four years of intensive experience before reaching top rank. That's "usually." A few, of course, are "naturals."

—o-o—

KEEP your chin straight, your head high, out of the shoulders. Don't let your head propel your body. Let it be propelled—but with lithe ease.

—o-o—

STRIVE for a gracefully proportioned figure. It should gently taper between underarm and waistline. The back should appear narrow above the waist, the shoulders straight, the spine a vertical line.

—o-o—

TODAY'S "proportionate" figure is necessary if you are to wear the modern clothes with graceful ease.

—o-o—

New Ways of Wearing Kalap

PERHAPS you won't care whether its' a kalap or a babushka, the little bonnet we are all familiar with by now, but you may like to know the babushka is worn by the Russian peasants and the kalap is Hungarian. What you will particularly like, however, is that designers have improved the style, so that it is possible to wear the kalap in numerous ways for different effects.

First of all, it is always possible to wear it the familiar way, which is tied around the head like a bonnet. Many think, however, that the new way of tying it would be most appropriate and becoming for summer sports—on the beach, driving a car in the country, or out for a sail. You may turn up the points like a Dutch cap. This is possible because of a new trick in the way the straps are attached. Of course, there are several other equally smart ways to tie the kalap.

The new cotton printed squares are so attractive in color and design that we have sketched one of these also as a hatkerchief, in the way you'll see lots of them worn this summer. The kalaps are made in smart prints, too, as well as stripes and reversible fabrics.

Blue Denim Popular

Blue denim is back in the fashion limelight for active sports costumes, and the more faded it looks the swankier it is considered. Slacks, skirts, blouses, shorts and playsuits for the children are among the items of apparel that are made of this countrified fabric.

Quilted Bags

Quilted bags of delicately tinted leather or of equally appealing pastel satin are correct for summer evenings. They follow the vogue of quilted daytime bags, which is continuing from spring to summer. Jewel-toned beads are used to hold the quilted design of one unusual satin bag while multicolored threads are the striking feature of several leather models.

TRIALS OF an Activity Girl's HUSBAND

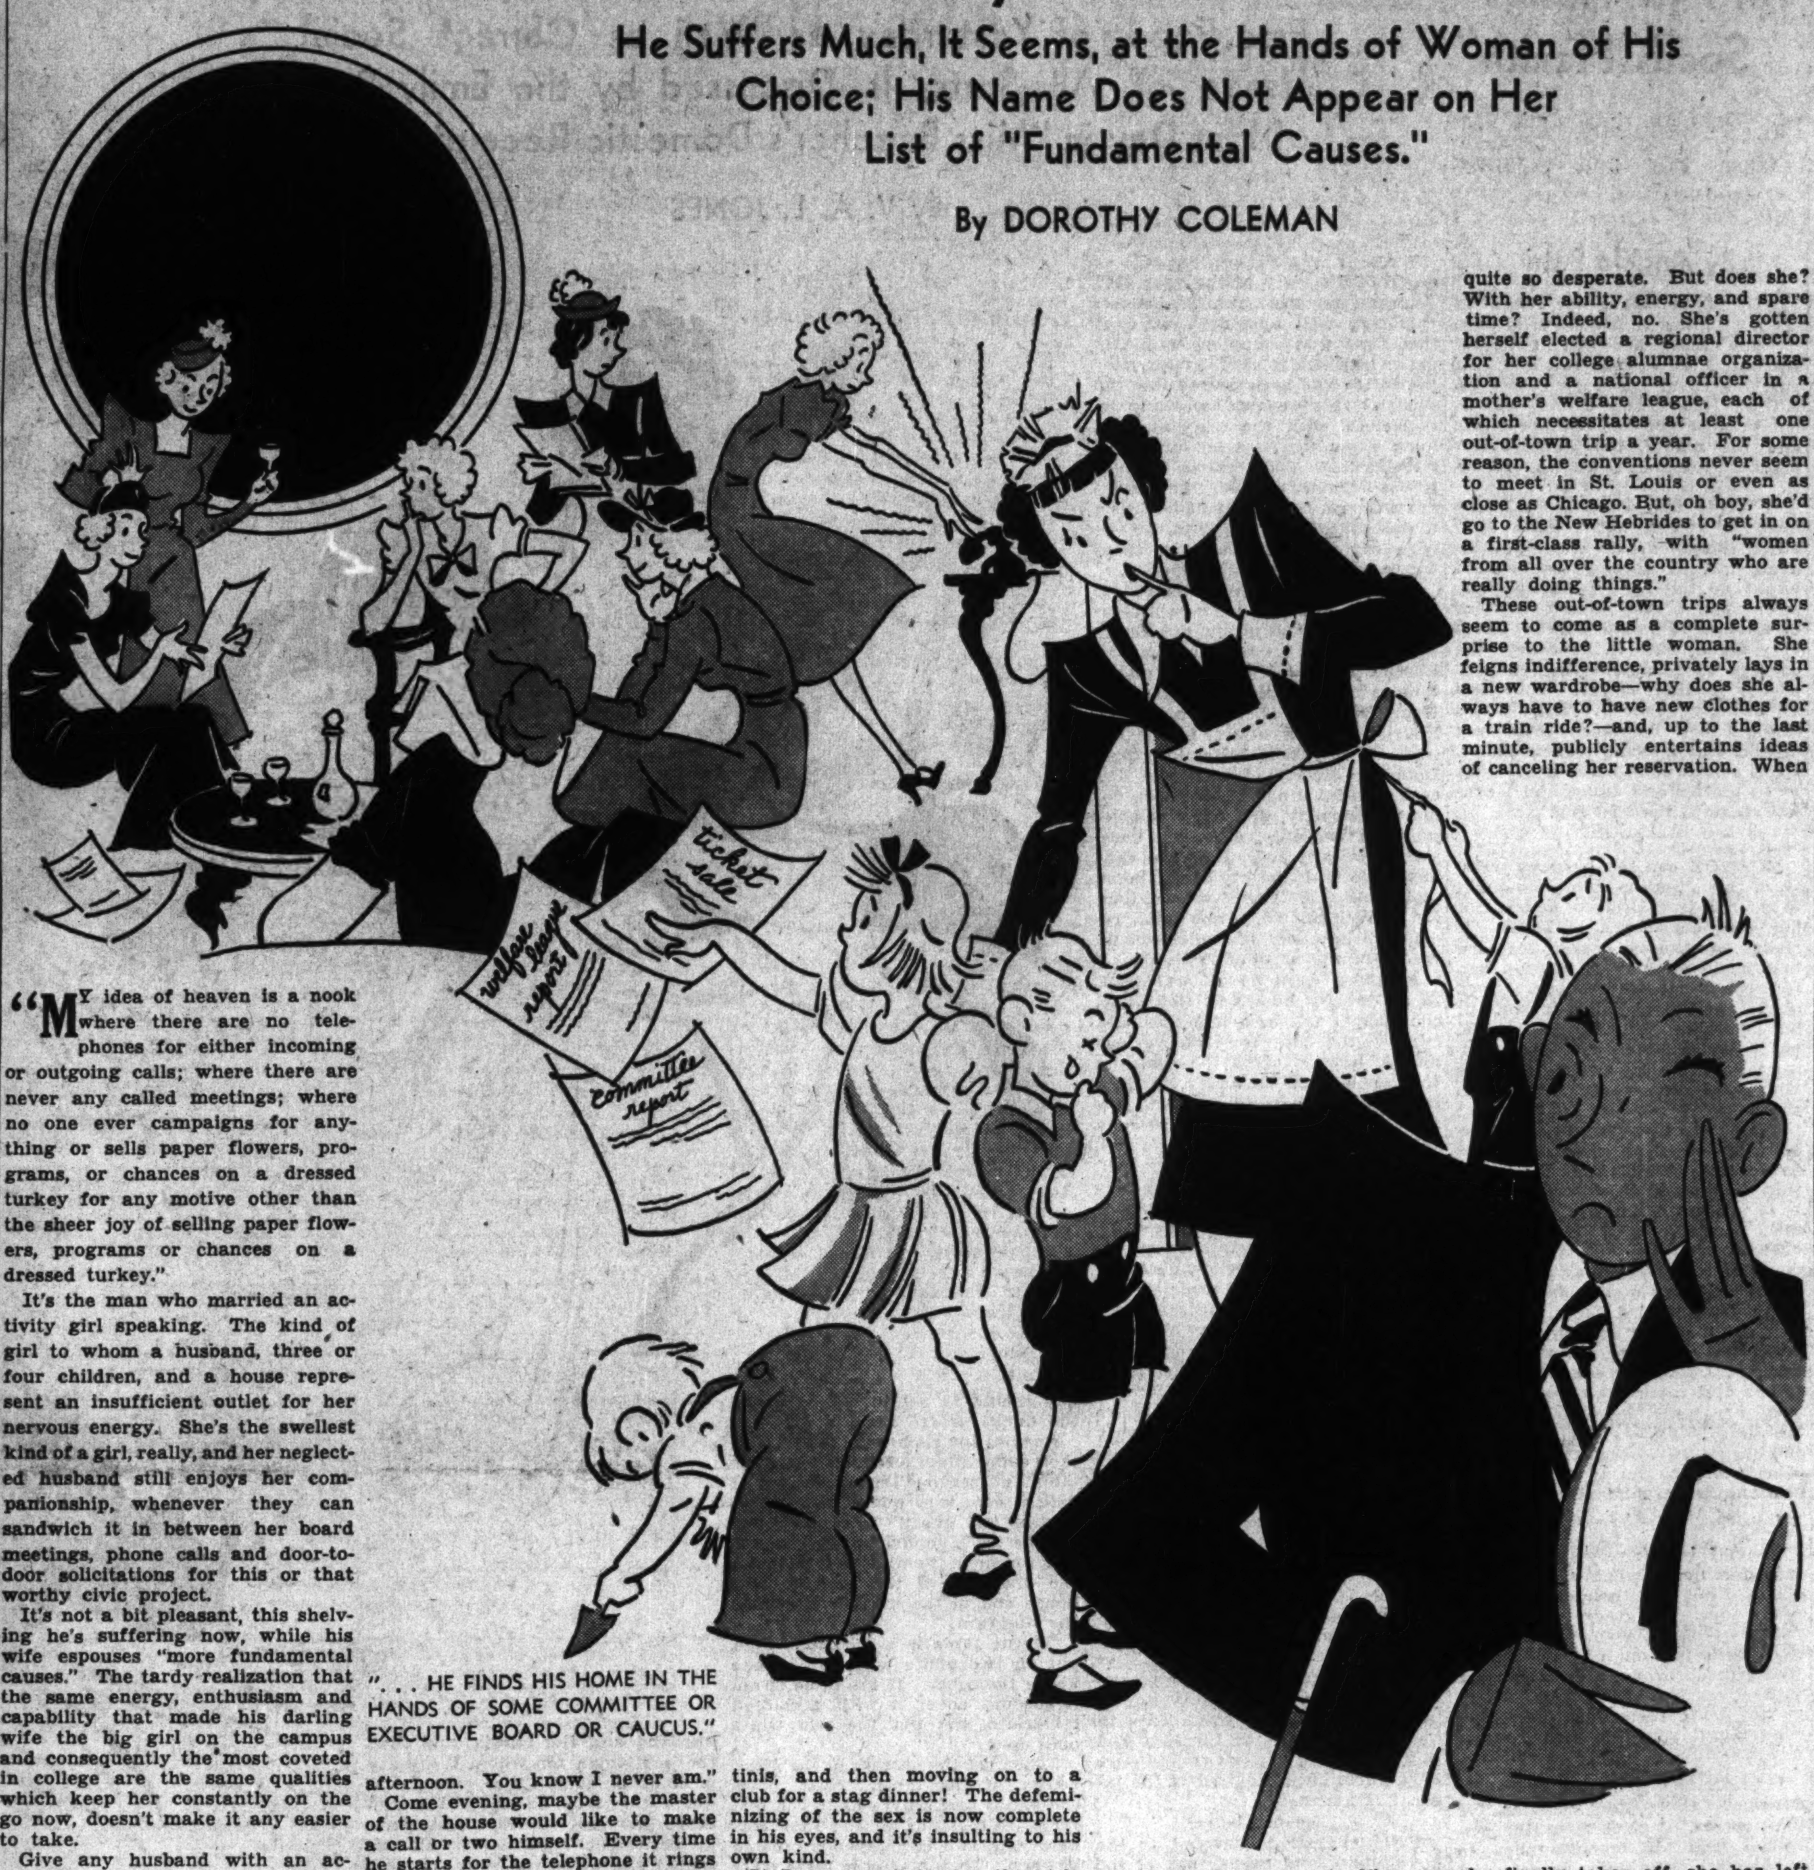
By DOROTHY COLEMAN



"... HE FINDS HIS HOME IN THE HANDS OF SOME COMMITTEE OR EXECUTIVE BOARD OR CAUCUS."

"MY idea of heaven is a nook where there are no telephones for either incoming or outgoing calls; where there are never any called meetings; where no one ever campaigns for anything or sells paper flowers, programs, or chances on a dressed turkey for any motive other than the sheer joy of selling paper flowers, programs or chances on a dressed turkey."

It's the man who married an activity girl speaking. The kind of girl to whom a husband, three or four children, and a house represent an insufficient outlet for her nervous energy. She's the swellest kind of a girl, really, and her neglected husband still enjoys her companionship, whenever they can sandwich it in between her board meetings, phone calls and door-to-door solicitations for this or that worthy civic project.

It's not a bit pleasant, this shelving he's suffering now, while his wife espouses "more fundamental causes." The tardy realization that the same energy, enthusiasm and capability that made his darling wife the big girl on the campus and consequently the most coveted in college are the same qualities which keep her constantly on the go now, doesn't make it any easier to take.

Give any husband with an activity girl for a wife a chance to talk and he'll cite instances to prove he's the most beautifully ignored man in Christendom. The wives know all the complaints by heart and go right on ignoring them—and him—being too busy with their important affairs to see the storm clouds gathering. Wasn't one heard to laugh just recently at her husband's threats to divorce her if she didn't stop telephoning so much when he was in the house?

That's only one of the grievances, that constant telephoning, but a serious one. Suppose a fellow is downtown, where he belongs, and meets an old friend whom he wants to invite out for dinner on the spot. Having been warned before, he tries to telephone home. All he gets is the busy signal for 20 minutes. Or suppose he is expecting a long distance call which fails to come in before he leaves the office for the day. He instructs the operator to transfer it to his home. But can anybody else get into the house when Wee Wifie has a list of 25 prospects to telephone that evening about season tickets to this or that series? Not if a life depended on the call. He ventures to ask why she can't make her calls during the day. "Why, don't be foolish! No one's home in the morning or afternoon. You know I never am."

Come evening, maybe the master of the house would like to make a call or two himself. Every time he starts for the telephone it rings —for his wife, of course. Not only is he denied the use of the telephone, but he is deprived of his wife's company and conversation for the better part of the evening.

It isn't only the telephone that the activity wife pre-empts. It is the downstairs sitting room as well. Many an evening the wage-earner hurries home—he hopes to his fireside—only to find it in the hands of some committee or executive board or caucus. Great guns, haven't the women homes of their own, and if so why don't they go to them at sundown, he mutters, as he ducks through the service hall to the back stairs. Not, however, too quickly to observe that a bottle of his rare Spanish sherry stands opened on the parlor table within easy reach of the girls.

That's another thing; this tippling that goes on at hen parties, mild as it may be. Time was when a ginger beer would hold the girls all afternoon. Now they need something stronger to buck them up in the face of this or that tremendous problem with which their organization is grappling. Isn't one of them actually giving a stag cocktail party next week for a visiting potentate? Think of it—a bunch of women standing around toasting each other with dry Martinis, and then moving on to a club for a stag dinner! The defeminizing of the sex is now complete in his eyes, and it's insulting to his own kind.

If Jane weren't having the girls at her house, she'd be elsewhere at a meeting, and an hour with her and the kids before dinner would still be out of the question. Like as not about the time he resigned himself to solitude and a pipe, she'd telephone him to come get her way out just this side of Kansas City.

—o-o—

SOME of these grievances the neglected spouse might write off as marital sacrifices, since they involve his own well-being only slightly. But he'll be darned if he'll have his wife trading on his name she goes out soliciting funds. It's embarrassing to have the fellows at the club kid him about his wife's visit to their office that morning. Besides, it puts them on the spot to have a woman they know ask them for donations. (That's exactly what she has in mind, of course). He knows how he feels when somebody else's wife comes to see him on that kind of business, especially if he had dinner at that home only the week before.

When his wife high-handedly commandeers one of his delivery trucks to haul chairs from an undertaker who lends them free to a country home for a benefit lecture, that IS serious. Did she ask him about it first? Certainly not. She dealt with the company traffic man, who was afraid to say "no" to an executive's wife. Jim won't be used that way. Furthermore, he won't put in a good word for her with the powers-that-be, when her little league for a communistic brand of democracy wants to get a hall free for some kind of radical meeting. He's a dyed-in-the-wool capitalist, and proud of it, and she ought to be one, too, if she has enough gumption to realize that if he weren't she couldn't live in an exclusive subdivision and have a nursemaid for her brood. Probably be a good thing if she had to do without the nurse. Maybe that would keep her home a few days out of the week. Maybe if she stayed home and stopped getting mixed up in this or that cause—the least she might do is stay off the picket lines—her name wouldn't appear quite so often in the public press and his wouldn't turn up on so many sucker lists. Perhaps, too, he wouldn't be asked to put up quite so much money for her to be a patroness for one banquet after another. Her arguments that her activities are all good publicity for him leaves him cold. It comes too high for what it's worth to his business.

If she confined her activities to this city, the situation wouldn't be quite so desperate. But does she? With her ability, energy, and spare time? Indeed, no. She's gotten herself elected a regional director for her college alumnae organization and a national officer in a mother's welfare league, each of which necessitates at least one out-of-town trip a year. For some reason, the conventions never seem to meet in St. Louis or even as close as Chicago. But, oh boy, she'd go to the New Hebrides to get in on a first-class rally, with "women from all over the country who are really doing things."

These out-of-town trips always seem to come as a complete surprise to the little woman. She feigns indifference, privately lays in a new wardrobe—why does she always have to have new clothes for a train ride?—and, up to the last minute, publicly entertains ideas of canceling her reservation. When she finally takes off, she has left dozens of urgent duties undone.

Her satellites continue to keep the lines to her house hot, and in desperation call her husband downtown. Has he any idea where to find her list of people who have already signed up for such-and-such a drive? Does he by any chance have the check book for this organization? And could Jim be a lamb and arrange with the bank for someone else to sign the checks while his wife, who is treasurer, is out of town? Would he mind awfully meeting the 5 o'clock train from New York Saturday afternoon? His wife had agreed to put up for the week-end a field secretary who was stopping off between business engagements in Chicago and Louisville. Would he mind?

Would he mind! A Saturday afternoon, in such golf weather. Doggone it, he never demanded such "marital sacrifices" from his wife. The worse he ever asked was that she attend divine service with out-of-town customers who had tastes a little out of his line. When she gets back from this trip, he'll fix her. He'll fight her with her own weapons. Irons in the fire. Plenty of them, all his own, and all red-hot.

Pet Problem Invades Home In New York

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, May 7.

WE citizens here are pretty rough, tough and ready. We have to be, for we're packed into a small island, and hurled into a life that is fiercely competitive. Case-hardened and copper-bottomed, few arrows can pierce our hides, and few bronchos throw us. Yet a few of the very simplest things very easily toss us behind the line of scrimmage, and one of these is the big-hearted gift of a live pet from a pal.

Many of us can take a dog, kitten or canary in stride, but let someone plant some other sort of fauna on the doormat and run, and we are took pretty far aback. Margaret Fishback, ad genius and poet, spends her off hours catching flies for a small turtle that was wished on her little home. Thyra Samter Winslow, the fictioneer, found her domestic economy upset by a brace of small yellow chicks left at her Park Avenue tenement by the Easter bunny.

My own pueblo, already comfortably filled with so-called humans, has been further complicated by the Easter arrival of "Pansy," the small white rabbit given my decrepit spouse as a companion for his declining years. I dread all four-legged little critters since the Persian kitten gave young Martin an eight-month case of ringworm on the scalp, and "Pansy" was about as welcome as "Typhoid Mary" to me. I thought of the beastie as a possible carrier of leprosy or the black death, and preached its prompt exile.

But the old gentleman fought for his bunny with all his waning strength. Within 10 days he had it answering to its name, chasing him in hope of a carrot. The other day I was astounded and appalled to see him giving it a bath in the kitchen sink! Love has evidently burgeoned in his senile heart.

And so the terrible New York pet problem has come to my little home. I am further worried because raddled "Lennie" in "Of Mice and Men" toys with rabbits—and my helpmate's nickname is "Lennie." Ah, well, just another cross on my bowed shoulders!

IT MUST BE that we Murray Hillbillies are more stuffed-shirty than we realize, for many of us have been looking down our long patrician noses at the people drawn to the Sculptors' Guild open-air sculping show in the vacant lot at Thirty-ninth and Park. Most of them are boys and girls on the unkempt side who look decidedly Greenwich Villagey, and then there are the men with whiskers. They are the sculptors themselves, who hang around the show to take an occasional bow and see that no vandal nicks their masterpieces. I note that all those spinach-faced geniuses smoke long pipes. If they smoked coffin-nails the'd surely set fire to their shrubbery. I hope we on the Hill are broad-minded art-lovers, but many will be glad when the lot is vacant again, and they can be left to their own dull devices, such as coupon-clipping and damning the administration.

—o-o—

I NOTE LIZ HAWES' iconoclastic book, "Fashions in Spinach," on several best-seller lists around the nation, including here. Good reading, even if few in the business can go all the way with the designer in denouncing the whole style racket as the last word in phonus-bolonus.

Dinner Suit Adapted For Women's Fashions

THE masculine midnight blue dinner suit has been adapted by Creed for women's fashions, one of the newest being a classic, single-breasted model of the same wool used for men's suits. It is being advocated for wear by women who always prefer black, but who want to alternate in their spring attire.

Other recent developments in women's suits also show the influense of men's styles. There is a natural colored shantung suit, for example, which is strictly tailored and follows the summer masculine trend. It is worn with a checked blue, white and green silk foulard blouse. Another suit of lightweight gray woolen has a one-button jacket and a straightline skirt.

VOGUE OF SEPARATE SKIRTS AND BLOUSES

IF you are undecided as to the type of active sports costume to assemble for early summer wear, get yourself a collection of blouses and skirts. There are so many different styles on display in the St. Louis shops that it is surprising to discover how many and how varied are the ensembles that may be created by the purchase of two or three items.

This vogue of separate skirts and blouses has become so popular that many of the better sports shops now sell two-piece frocks in separate pieces so that the purchaser may do as she pleases about the mixing of her colors and her fabrics. This trend is apparent in the featuring of printed silk and synthetic dresses of the shirt waist type as well as in the disposal of cottons and woolens.

With pleated skirts being so generally accepted as favorites for summer sportswear, there is a greater variety of pleated modes than has been seen for many years. These are made of lightweight woolens, such as flannels, as well as of non-crushable cottons, flower-printed crepes and gaily hued peasant linens. Of next importance are the many-gored skirts which supply the trim waistline that is so much in vogue this season and the hemline fullness that is required of active sports skirts. A few skirts which have unpressed pleats arranged in groups at the front and back offer a distinct diversion.

Alpaca is a fabric that is being used extensively for skirts for summer wear and looks as attractive when pleated as when cut into numerous gores. It also is successful for complete suits, so we may expect to see many alpaca tailleurs in distinctive pastel shades before many weeks. The suit jackets are designed so that they may be worn as successfully over dresses or with contrasting skirts as with the matching skirts for which they were intended.

The blouse field is a varied one with interest divided between the overblouse which is cut similar to a jacket and the shirtwaist model. One of the most interesting blouses is made of a novelty tie silk, has wide pleats below a yoke and ties over the top of the skirt at the waistline. Cotton blouses of gay prints, and hand-blocked linen blouses are similarly designed although the majority of them have the drawstring feature rather than the tie fastening at the waistline.

Those bright cotton shirts which are variously named and which are worn with the tails over the top of the skirt are exceedingly popular for strenuous sports wear.

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

I HAVE always had a horror of becoming a person with a "pigeonhole" mind—you know, the type of person that plans roast-beef for Tuesday and pickled pigs feet for Saturday and never deviates from that menu. And yet, to my shocked surprise, I discovered myself thinking the other day, "Heavens, here it is May and I haven't said anything about summer slip-covers yet." But even at the risk of becoming "sot" in my ways, I think it high time that something be said on this perennial spring subject.

Of course, today, slip-covers are such charming as well as practical adjuncts to the summer season that most people are delighted when it is time for the furniture to don them rather than dread them as they used to do when they were the shapeless, ill-fitting affairs of mother's day. And this is due in large part to the many improvements that have been made in slip-cover materials as well as the way they are fastened.

—o-o—

● AT PRESENT, there is such a tremendous range of materials available which are thoroughly washable that it is really almost foolish to select any other type. Even chintzes now may be stuck into the tub in the same manner as cottons and linens, and as a result, you may have all the charm of a gaily patterned fabric without worrying unduly when the children hoist their muddy feet on a slip-covered chair. Many other materials have been sanforized-shrunk which means that you may wash them over and over again without fear of having them shrink and give your chairs the appearance of "high-water trousers."

The other big news in slip-covering is the zipper, now replacing the old snappers, which were apt to give at such crucial moments as when rich Uncle Horace dropped his 200 pounds into a chair. The combination of a truly washable fabric with zipper fastenings permits a slip-cover to be fitted as tight as the proverbial glove and better still, to remain that way through many seasons of hard wear.

—o-o—

It has become the fashion, in the last few years, to limit yourself much more in the selection of slip-covered materials than you do in your upholstery fabrics. .By that I mean that not more than two or at the most three different materials are used in one room for summer coverings. This is likely to make a room more restful to the eye. This alone gives a certain feeling of relxation and coolness. And, in addition, all the materials and trimmings are carefully blended into a unified color scheme which will go far toward giving any room a spirit of tranquility.

● MANY MANUFACTURERS have taken cognizance of this vogue by creating ensembled fabrics for summer slip-covers. In this way it is possible to select a floral pattern with the assurance that you will be able to find a plain material that matches perfectly one of the colors in the pattern, or even a stripe that repeats several of its tones.

Regarding the materials themselves, the linens, piques and cottons are always popular and come in a wider range of tones than ever before. Chintz, as I have said before, has now been so treated that it washes perfectly, while the pet of the decorators right now is quilted or embroidered chintz. Gabardine, of the same type that is used for women's shoes, is now available by the yard and makes an extremely practical as well as attractive slip-cover material. For those who want to try something completely out of the ordinary, there are lucious tones available in felt, which is being much touted as an ideal material for this purpose. Personally, I am toying with the idea of using that same faded blue denim that fashions some of my young son's overalls. When I see the punishment that material can take and still look good, I am inclined to believe it might be the answer to my summer problem.

As to the way in which the slip-covers should be made, the only hard and fast rule is that they should fit like the wallpaper on the wall. Most people prefer them to be made entirely of one material, aside from the trimming, but I have seen many attractive covers that combine a plain and patterned fabric, the plain usually being used for the body of the piece and the patterned part placed on the cushions, or as a ruffle around the bottom.

—o-o—

● RUFFLED OR PLEATED valances are always attractive in effect and yet the newer straight-lined types are interesting. Most effective, especially in a quilted chintz fabric, are the tight valances which are slit at the corners to give a slightly flared effect to the skirt. And interesting, too, are the chairs done in striped fabrics with the valance having the stripes run in the opposite direction to those on the body of the chair.

The brush edgings for trimmings may no longer be news but they are always pleasing in giving a finishing touch to a slip-cover. They have the added virtue of helping to tie a color scheme together.

"Moderation In All Things Spells Health"

Patri's Summing Up of Case For and Against Dancing.

By Angelo Patri

ADELE, college senior, reared in a religious atmosphere, is happily going her way, mingling with students of her own age, and enjoying them and their activities. All but one. She cannot dance, not because she has not the desire and the ability, but because her parents' religious scruples forbid it. What is Adele to do?

"I know that dancing can be done to excess, but I know that other things we do can be overdone, too. I do not fear that I might go too far in dancing any more than I fear excess in other directions. I would like to dance very much, but I have not the courage to go against my parents' wishes in this matter. They feel so strongly about it. They would think I had disgraced them and myself. But I would love to dance. I feel so out of it when my friends go to parties and dance and I cannot share in the best fun.

NOBODY can tell a young woman in this situation, what she ought to do. It is entirely a matter for her own conscience to settle. It looks as though early teaching had made dancing a sin for her, something not to be done. Even if she decided to dance in spite of her parents' attitude she would not enjoy it because of her feeling of guilt. In order to dance with any degree of satisfaction she would have first to overcome the mental attitude that is now blocking her. She must determine to do this at all costs, this thing that her parents deeply deplore. Is it worth what it will cost? She must decide that.

From my point of view dancing is no sin. I danced as soon as I found feet under me and heard music that tickled them. I loved it and still enjoy watching it, and when the orchestra plays a dance I know, I like to dance it. My father and mother always danced. And they were good people. My friends all danced, and they were decent, sturdy, honorable young people for the most; and if they failed in any particular of goodness it was not because they danced.

Then, I knew very well, there were families to whom dancing was a sin. They and their children did not dance, and they were good folk, too. So it seems to me that dancing is just one of those things that you do or don't do according to how you feel about them. Doing or not doing them does not affect your moral salvation either way.

—o-o—

I LIKE TO SEE young people dancing. It is fine exercise for their bodies. It gives them fine control of them. It teaches them to move with rhythmic grace and ease, and that is no little accomplishment. It means, too, a release from nervous tension that creates plenty of trouble unless it is released. I believe that dancing is one of the best exercises for college students that can be found in a day's program. Leaving the fun out of the question, which we really never would do for it is the heart of the whole matter, dancing is good for the mental and physical health of Youth.

But it is not, in my experience, a burning question of morality. Unless training makes it so. Moderation in all things spells health.

French Cheese Roll

CRUST.

Two cups sifted flour.
Three teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One tablespoon sugar.
One-third cup shortening.
One-half cup milk.
One egg, slightly beaten.

FILLING.

One-half pound cottage cheese.
One-half pound American cheese, grated.
Two eggs, slightly beaten.
One-fourth cup confectioners' sugar.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt together three times. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse corn meal. Add combined milk and egg, stirring quickly to form a soft dough. Turn onto lightly floured board, knead slightly and roll one-fourth inch thick. Combine filling ingredients and beat until smooth. Spread on dough and roll as for jelly roll. Turn into greased loaf pan and bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) 30 minutes. Approximate yield, one loaf.

Matching Accessories

Matching velvet collar bands and sashes are among the newest evening accessories. Black is featured most extensively but deep red or vivid blue is employed to bring out a shade that is prominent in the print of a frock. Most of the collar bands are wide and are tied with a careless knot at the back. The loose velvet band which has a pendant suspended from it is an exception to this rule.

GLANCE Into HOUSEHOLDS of 1846

Fine Foods of Yesterday, as Well as Correct Social Usage of All Sorts, Is Discussed by the Emily Post of Her Day in "Miss Beecher's Domestic Receipt Book."

By V. A. L. JONES

POLITE society of the year 1846 drank its coffee from the saucer. Every well appointed table of that time was supplied with cup plates in which to set the cups after the coffee had been poured into the saucer. This prevented marking the tablecloth with the dripping cup. Such a practice was not only permitted; it was advocated, because it was believed that very hot beverage was bad for the stomach. Also, it was considered proper to use the edge of the tablecloth in cases where napkins were not supplied.

Manners such as these, and others as quaint, are laid down in a treatise on social usage by the Emily Post of that time—Catherine E. Beecher, who was a member of the famous family which gave the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher and his sister, Harriet Beecher Stowe, to the nation. In her book, "Miss Beecher's Domestic Receipt Book," she discusses social usage of all sorts, domestic economy, dietetics, management of servants, sickroom care, and practically everything else that has to do with the life of the home and family, and ends with a long list of recipes (which she calls "receipts") any one of which would feed a family of 18 or 20 people.

As there were no stoves except in a few city homes at that time, the recipes tell how to build and "draw" the fire for the various dishes, how to place the coals on the top as well as under the pots for making or roasting, how to prepare and turn the spits when a fowl or large piece of meat, such as a quarter of beef, is to be cooked; how to hold the dripping pan when basting, so that the drippings are saved for the gravies, and many other methods which are almost unbelievable to the modern cook. She also explains that "corning," or salting, is necessary for both meat and fish if they are to be kept for a day or two before being cooked. There were no refrigerators then and, apparently, no ice, for she speaks of using snow to freeze ice cream, and says that if properly managed, the freezing process should not require more than an hour and a quarter.

According to her direction for kitchen equipment, scales, trivets, heavy iron pots and kettles, the former with legs three inches long, "so that the coals can be placed under, "but not too close," a flat shovel-like instrument for baking the "ash cake," and a "warmer," or tin three-sided box with two compartments, were the most important. The "warmer" was used with its open side towards the first and in it plates and various viands were kept warm until required at the table.

ONE chapter is devoted to the building and proper use of the oven. This she says is made of an arch of brick, over which "spread four or five bushels of ashes, and then a covering of charcoal then another layer of bricks over all." It was to be heated at least half a day previous to the first using and the oven lid be kept up until time to heat it for baking. The heating was done by building a fire inside. After it has become hot enough the fire was raked out and the bread, cakes and pies put inside. Great skill was required to know just how hot it should be for the various foods, since cooking thermometers were then unknown, and apparently it was a matter of experience alone. And having enumerated the utensils and told how to use them, she goes into a long list of recipes, all of huge proportions, and all equally regardless of their fattening qualities, including everything from soup to dessert, after the approved styles, then launches into entertainment and her other subjects, and ends with a chapter on personal conduct, in which she advocates early rising and early retiring—such an expression as "going to bed" is quite too inelegant for her—and "symmetry in your dress, furniture, style of living and charities."

In the chapters on entertaining she gives directions for dinners and evening parties. A "modest" dinner for the housekeeper in moderate circumstances who can afford only two servants, a dinner to be served to a small party of 12 should have the following menu, she says: Soup, fish, a boiled ham, a boiled turkey, three roasted ducks, scalloped oysters, potatoes, parsnips, turnips and celery, and for dessert pudding, pastry, fruit and coffee. Here are the directions to be followed in preparing and serving this colossal meal:

"The pastry (three kinds) should be baked the day before and the soup boiled down. Early the day of the dinner, the turkey and ducks should be stuffed and trussed, the ham washed and set to boil, and the vegetables prepared for cooking at the proper time. The pudding should be one of the rich ones and set to boil so it will be ready when the time comes for serving it. Then prepare the oysters for scalloping and for stuffing the turkey.

"Since dinner is to be served at 3 o'clock (the proper hour), the turkey should be set to boil at 1 and the ducks set to roast at 2."

Recipes for each item follow, and then come directions for setting the table and serving the dinner, all of which seem very quaint to the 1938 hostess and guest. Here they are:

"The table should be set early in the forenoon by the waiter under the direction of the lady of the house and in the manner shown in the diagram.

"If the table is a handsome one, put on two white tablecloths, one above the other. If the table is not handsome, cover it with a colored tablecloth and put the two white ones over.

"Then set the castors in the exact center of the table. Next, place the plates and knives as in the diagram, salt stands at the four corners with two large spoons crossed by each. Then place the table mats in the places where the dishes are to be set. At the places of the host and hostess put two knives and two forks, and put a carving knife and fork and a carving stand at each place where a dish is to be carved. Just before dinner is to be served, a bit of bread, cut thick, is to be laid with a fork on each napkin."

Guests as well as host and hostess were expected to carve, and relays of knives, forks and spoons were placed around the table from a side table as each course was served. The writer's instructions for serving the dinner are—

"When the hour for dinner arrives, let the cook first take up the soup and fish. The soup and soup plates are to be set by the hostess, and the spoons laid near. Potatoes and drawn butter, or fish sauce, are to be served with the fish, which is set before the host. Then the waiter is to inform the lady of the house that dinner it ready. She rises and informs her husband and the guests, and then the gentleman for whom the party is made or some other guest, conducts the lady to the table and takes his seat at the first plate at her right hand. After all are seated she helps the soup, passing it around in order without asking whether each one wishes it. If anyone prefers fish he passes the soup to the next. Meantime the host either helps the fish to all who wish it, or leaves it covered till the soup is removed and the plates changed. In laying the table originally the plates for the fish have been set around the table and the soup plates are set on them while soup is being served.

"AFTER soup and fish are removed by the waiter and clean plates put around, wine or conversation fill up the time while the meats are brought on. These are placed on the table, covered. When all are prepared the host gives a sign to the waiter and all the covers are removed so adroitly that no steam be spilt on the table-cloth or guests.

"The host carves the dish before him. The hostess helps the dish opposite her, and the gentlemen guests carve the dishes opposite them. As all are ready to help the lady asks the guest on her right to what he will be helped, and never makes excuses for, or praises, any particular dish. The host commences at his right hand and does the same, till all are helped. The hostess should be at ease so as to converse, and if she has occasion to direct the waiter she should do so as quietly and easily as possible. After all the guests are helped the host helps the hostess, then himself.

"If wine is used it is served by the host immediately after the soup and fish, and at any other time during the dinner he chooses. If the lady of the house is asked to drink wine she is expected to have a little poured into her glass and raise it to her lips, looking at, and slightly bowing to, the guest who makes the request. If any other guest makes a similar request a very little wine again is poured into her glass, and the same ceremony is observed, but the hostess must never more than taste the wine.

"After any guest has finished eating the waiter is to change his plate, knife and fork, and the host or hostess is to ask to what he will be helped. As soon as all the guests have done eating meats and vegetables, the hostess directs the waiter and every article is removed from the table and the upper tablecloth is taken off. Then the dessert knives, forks and plates are set around and the dessert is placed on the table. The pudding is to be set on a mat before the hostess, the dish of cheese before the host, and the pastry arranged in some regular order around the table, with knives and forks to help.

"When these are finished everything is removed again and the other white tablecloth taken off, leaving the bare table or the colored cloth. Then the fruit is set on, the coffe is brought to the table, but if the guests prefer it is served in the drawing-room."

In 1846 there was no manufactured yeast, no packing-house cured meat and no butter other than that made by hand on farms or small places. Directions for all these processes are given in Miss Beecher's book. Coffee then was bought by the sack, green, and roasted and ground as needed for use. The cook is cautioned especially not to let the coffee beans burn while roasting, and to stir them frequently with a large spoon dipped in olive oil. Instructions for drying fruits and vegetables, and refreshing them for use, also are given in detail, for in those days there were no fruits or vegetables in the winter in the temperate zone because fast freights and refrigerator cars were many years yet to come.

MISS BEECHER'S advice on the selection of meats and poultry is just as good today as it was in 1846, and many of her recipes are so good that any housewife would be glad to serve them. Of course, for present day use, they would have to be adapted to modern measurement as to quantity and modern methods of cooking, but having done that they offer genuinely new catering fields for the housekeeper. It is hard to imagine the modern homemaker using an entire foreleg of beef in preparing soup stock, but that is one of foundation instructions in the chapter on soups. Also, only farmers kill hogs, make sausage, cure their own hams and bacon and try out their own lard, and certainly nobody today outside a cannery makes curry pouder. All fat not used in cooking was saved for soap, both hard and soft, which was made in barrel-sized quantities. Ashes, sand and brickdust formed the scouring preparations of that day. It was a step past tallow candles, but coal-oil lamps were universal, and many housekeepers followed the advice of this same Miss Beecher in using bergomot and other fragrant oils to perfume the ordinary kerosene.

Flavoring extracts also were manufactured at home in Miss Beecher's time, and a favorite of that day was rosewater, which was used for cakes and icings. Brandy was poured over the fresh rose leaves, or lemon peel, or a vanilla bean, according to the kind of extract being made. The kernel of peach stones soaked in brandy made the almond flavoring of the day. The vanilla beans, lemon peel, and peach kernels were pounded in a mortar before having the brandy poured over them.

Gems From Miss Beecher's Book

ALWAYS provide cup mats or cup plates on which to set the tea or coffee cup after the beverage is poured into the saucer. Otherwise there will be an ugly stain on the tablecloth.

—o-o—

If napkins are used be sure each person always gets his own. Use napkin rings or a special fold for each person. If napkins are not provided the fingers should be wiped delicately on the edge of the tablecloth.

—o-o—

When making cake tie up your hair so that none can fall.

—o-o—

A husband should not invite a large party of friends to dinner or tea without first arranging with his wife for their entertainment.

—o-o—

It is unhealthful to sleep with a sick person, as the breath and effluvia from the skin sometimes communicates disease, even in complaints not contagious.

—o-o—

It would be a happy thing for the sick if the young ladies of the place should practice cooking the various articles for the sick.

—o-o—

In using alkalies with acids to raise mixtures, the poorest is pearlash, the next best in saleratus, bicarbonate of soda is still better, and sal volatile is best of all.

—o-o—

Milk from cows fed on distillery slops is unhealthful.

—o-o—

Green tea does not, in any case, form a salubrious drink for people in health, and should never be given to the sick. Water drawn through lead pipe gives rise to lead, or painter's colic. If continued, palsy results.

George Rector Gives Recipes For Cocktails

Also Tells of 1902 Trip Through Wine-Making Country in France.

By George Rector

BACK in 1902, after I finished serving my apprenticeship in the kitchens of several famous restaurants in Paris, I headed south to the Bordeaux section, where those fine French wines are made.

I arrived there just at the start of the vintage season, which means the pressing of the grapes. The scene of action was in a small town called Fronsac. My host, Mons. Lacaze, was the proprietor of the vineyards, consisting of many acres on which was located his beautiful home—Chateau Pardillan. This chateau is more than 400 years old and has plenty of background and color, besides the vineyards surrounding it.

At this particular time the grape pickers were at work bringing the grapes to the pressoir. And in case you don't know what method they use, I'll tell you. They press the grapes with their bare feet. Now please don't let that shock you. The juices from the grapes are pumped into a mammoth vat, which is known as a cuvee. The pulp and stems also go into this huge vat. Soon the fermentation sets in, and gradually the pulp rises to the surface and forms a crust, so solid that one could walk across it. After the fermentation, the wine is sampled and now is ready for purchase and then aged in barrels.

I must not fail to tell you I, too, jumped on the grapes. Making wine as was explained to me is not difficult and that reminds me of the company in California which, during the prohibition era, sold small bricks of compressed grapes with directions as follows: "Do not put these grapes in a gallon of cider because it will make wine." And I was told the firm did a nice business.

THE SERVING of aperitifs is more popular today than ever. Cocktails which come under the heading are really an old American custom. In Rector's we had such fastidious patrons that a few drops more or less of gin or Vermouth in their cocktails would be detected. Perhaps you might be interested in knowing a formula for making a perfect Martini cocktail. Here it is and with best wishes:

Measure out the gin and Vermouth with great accuracy, as this is the only way to get a perfect tasting cocktail. Also, only make the quantity that is to be served. If a second cocktail is served then you must start all over again to measure out the ingredients. Since a Martini cocktail is stirred and never frapped, the ideal receptacle for mixing is a pitcher or cocktail bucket which has a spout for pouring.

Now the first procedure is to get the cocktail glasses thoroughly chilled and into each glass pour three or four drops of Grand Marnier. (This is a liqueur with a delightful orange flavor.) Twirl the glasses until they are coated with the liqueur. Now for the mixing. A perfect Martini is made by measuring sixths—so we will take four-sixths dry gin, one-sixth Italian Vermouth and one-sixth French Vermouth. Put the gin and Vermouth into the pitcher with large cubes of ice and with a long handled spoon stir until the cocktail is thoroughly chilled. Pour into the glasses you have prepared and squeeze a small piece of lemon rind over the top of each cocktail to impart the zest of the lemon. Do not drop the lemon rind into the cocktail, but if you do relish a tidbit of some sort in your Martini, drop in a well drained pitless olive or a tiny white pickled onion, also well drained.

WHEN YOU ARE having guests and would like to serve coffee with a dash of showmanship then proceed with "Cafe Diable." Make a quantity of strong coffee, enough for eight or ten small cups, and keep the coffee hot. Put in a chafing dish that has direct heat two sticks of cinnamon, one teaspoon of whole cloves, one teaspoon of coriander seeds, eight or ten lumps of sugar, one tablespoon of whole coffee beans, a small piece of lemon and orange rind. Let these spices get thoroughly heated and then add about four tablespoons of brandy.

When the brandy has become thoroughly heated, ignite it from the flame of a match. Spoon or ladle constantly while the brandy is burning. When the flame has died out, pour in the hot black coffee and one tablespoon of Curacao. (Curacao is a liqueur, also delightful, with a decided orange flavor.) Now pour into the ladle four tablespoons of brandy and drop in three or four lumps of sugar and again ignite and let sugar and brandy brown in the ladle until sugar is melted and brandy is burned out. Ladle all together and serve in after-dinner coffee cups. During all this preparation the heat must be under the chafing dish from start to finish.

ON THE FLICKER FRONT

By H. H. Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, May 7.

WE DON'T remember who it was introduced the old song, "Alexander's Ragtime Band," to St. Louis. It might have been Dewey Hickey or Buck Pittman or some of the other black face soloists with the Hot Time Minstrels, the famous amateur organization which used to cavort at the Odeon. It was a long time ago anyway because when a young man named Isador Baline wrote it he was just beginning to attain something like musical fame under the better sounding title of Irving Berlin.

And now, after all these years, you are about to hear it again, for Berlin has re-written it, polishing it up here and there and added a lot of variations and fancy work to make it the theme song of the musical picture "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Berlin has turned out his new film opera, which includes a lot more songs, on the same old tin-panny piano which aided in the birth of the original Alexander number. He'd be lost, musically, without that instrument, or one exactly like it and we'll tell you why directly. First we might explain why he's been doing Alexander all over again, or, rather, why he's done it for the Twentieth-Century-Fox studio where Joseph M. Schenck is chairman of the board, or something, and has a suit of palatial offices, with marble shower baths and the things like that which fall to the makers of $2,000,000 motion pictures such as "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

Berlin's music room is immediately over the Schenck suite, but is not so vast or ornate. Irving simply doesn't go in for such things. All he wants, in the way of work room, is space for his old piano.

—o-o—

Some 28 years ago Berlin was a singing waiter at "Nigger Mike" Salter's place in the Bowery, No. 12 Pell street. He struck up a friendship with a drug clerk in the store at No. 6 which has lasted down through the years. That drug clerk was Joe Schenck, who also was one of Berlin's first song purchasers — on a modest scale. Berlin composed his first song, "Marie From Sunny Italy," with the piano player in "Nigger Mike's," Michael Nicholson. The two got 66 cents in royalty from the song, which would have been cut considerably if Schenck hadn't boosted the song and bought a copy himself.

● BERLIN though, kept pecking patiently away at the piano, and finally turned out a melody he called "Alexander and His Clarinet." The fellows at the music house didn't think the music would go because it was only done instrumentally and had a 32-bar chorus, when everything else only had 16 bars. The piece was put on the shelf.

A year later Berlin got the piece down, reworked it, but kept the long chorus, and wrote lyrics for it and retitled it "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Emma Carus, vaudeville singer, introduced the melody in Chicago. Berlin sang it later that year, 1911, at the Friar's Frolic in New York. The number caught on and swept the world.

While he was writing at Nigger Mike's and shortly before he wrote "Alexander and His Clarinet," Berlin had saved up $100 with which he purchased the piano that since has become famous. It has been with him in most parts of the world, and is the one that's in his office now.

—o-o—

The piano deserves the special mention we promised. It's a red mahogany upright, but called an "upright grand." It was made by Calvin Weser in New York, but when Berlin bought it, the piano was secondhand. He had to have it changed some since he can only play in F sharp (the black keys). Berlin had a shift lever installed just beneath the keyboard on the righthand side so he can shift the keys to any he wants.

He has had the piano in Europe, Capri, Bermuda, Florida and from New York to California and back several times. And it's now on the third floor of the modern, swanky studio building—not only a symbol of old times when he and Joe Schenck were Bowery buddies, but still a serviceable piano.

—o-o—

● THERE'S ONLY one other piano now that Berlin ever uses. It's a duplicate of the "upright grand," replete with shift lever and all, which Berlin had made by the Weser people several years ago "at considerably more than $100." This piano is in the Beverly Wilshire Hotel suite, on the top floor, that musicians always occupy when they put up in Hollywood, or rather Beverly Hills.

There is a third piano, too, built in the same way, by another firm though, which Berlin has in storage in Chicago. It probably will remain there indefinitely. The shift lever never worked very well and the tone never pleased Berlin's F sharp ear—the range of his voice.

Berlin works slowly but unceasingly. He knows next to nothing about music—he cannot even read notes—but his ear is perfect and his imagination forms the necessary patterns. An arranger does the mechanical part of putting down the notes which Berlin picks out.

Test for Rating Boy Friend

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D. of Northwestern University

This test represents the composite likes and dislikes of 1187 unmarried girls and women, ranging in ages from 16 to 42. They were asked privately to list the chief merits or demerits regarding their boy friends. They talked frankly. I have compressed and summarized the most frequently mentioned flaws and virtues, weighing those items which were most common or most fundamental.

In computing a man's score, check the various items under DEMERITS which apply to him, and add the total. Each item counts as one point unless specifically weighted, as in the parentheses. Then check off the items under MERITS which apply to him. Now subtract the DEMERIT score from the MERIT score. The result is his raw score. Interpret it according to this table:

Interpretation:	Very Poor	Poor	Average	Superior	Very Superior
Raw Scores:	0—29	30—47	48—69	70—88	89 and up

DEMERITS	MERITS
1. Criticizes his girl friend in public.	1. Remembers birthdays, holidays, etc.
2. Tries to flirt with other girls while on a date.	2. Frequently compliments girl friend on her looks, clothes, cooking, etc. (10)
3. Fails to bathe or change socks often enough.	3. Polite and courteous to girl's parents and friends.
4. Belches without apology, picks nose or teeth in public, etc. Ill mannered.	4. Neat in appearance—shoes shined, hair cut, suit pressed, shaved, etc.
5. Uses profanity or tells vulgar stories.	5. Healthy and athletic—likes sports.
6. Is very suspicious and jealous.	6. Is fond of children. (5)
7. Uses alcohol. (5) If ever drunk. (10)	7. Is a careful automobile driver.
8. Tells lies—unreliable, unfaithful.	8. A steady worker or good student.
9. Too possessive. Dislikes for girl to go out with anybody else, even her girl friends.	9. Ambitious—works or studies on his own time to gain promotion. (5)
10. A "mamma's boy" or an "only" child. (10)	10. Surprises girl occasionally with candy, flowers and other gifts.
11. Stubborn—rarely admits that he is wrong. Seldom apologizes.	11. Attends church or encourages girl friend if she is an active member. (10)
12. Tells embarrassing things about his girl when they are out in public.	12. Has a good sense of humor, and can take a joke on himself.
13. Is guilty of halitosis, dandruff, dirty teeth, etc. (one point for each)	13. Generous with his money but not a "show off" or "splurger."
14. Frequently borrows money from girl friend, or "sponges" on others. (5)	14. Self-confident and positive in his personality. Assured and poised.
15. Too fresh. Tries to "paw" a girl. Has "Roman" hands.	15. Considerate and artistic in his love making. Not a glutton for kisses.
16. Expects girl to be at his beck and call even if he fails to ask for a date till 7 p. m. of that night.	16. Always knows where he is going on a date. Rarely asks, "Where'll we go tonight?"
17. Pouts or sulks if he cannot have his own way in everything.	17. Uses good English with a minimum of slang.
18. No time sense. Stays too late even when he knows girl must be up early to get to work.	18. Writes interesting and jolly letters. Has originality and cleverness.
19. Uses tobacco.	19. Interested in cultural things as good books, music and art.
20. Cynical. Believes everybody is bad until proved otherwise.	20. Has high ideals and firm convictions about right and wrong. (10)
21. Argues with waiters, taxi drivers, other motorists, sales clerks, etc.	21. Looks directly at a person when conversing. Frank, not shifty in gaze.
22. Too introvertive. Dislikes double dates, parties, dances, and such social affairs.	22. Never goes home angry. Willing to talk things over fairly and concede a point if he is wrong. (5)
23. Has rarely earned any money of his own. Lives on a "dole" from indulgent parents, sister, brother, etc. (5)	23. Has respect and consideration for other women besides his girl friend.
24. Tactless and blunt. Doesn't make friends easily. Gets on people's nerves. (5)	24. Is respectful and considerate concerning his parents and sisters or brothers. (5)
25. Has poor table manners. Licks his fingers, gargles his soup, eats with knife instead of fork, etc.	25. A good sport. Willing to adapt himself to altered plans without getting angry, grouchy or pouting.
26. Wears flashy clothes, as pink or purple shirts, loud ties, race track plaids, etc.	26. Is romantic and when he kisses, bestows real movie kisses instead of timid pecks on the cheek.
27. Accepts defeat too easily. Lacks persistency and spunk.	27. Lets girl drive his car or teaches her how, if she lacks ability.
28. Indecisive. Can't make up his own mind. Vacillates.	28. Sympathetic and tender hearted. May even show a tear at pathetic climax of movie.
29. Too superstitious. Believes in luck, fortune telling, etc. (5)	29. Even tempered and has good self control. Doesn't fly off the handle easily. (5)
30. A chronic "projector" or buck-passer. Always blames others for his own faults and mistakes.	30. Mixes well with people. Gets along well with girl's mother. Will go out into kitchen and help with dishes. (5)
31. Comes from divorced parents.	31. Usually good humored and jolly.
32. Fails to stand when a girl leaves their table; fails to hold coat for girl or open doors for her, etc.	32. Prompt for appointments, or if detained, will telephone to inform the girl.
33. It's very obvious when he is bored. He doesn't try to conceal his irritation.	33. Asks definitely for a date instead of leaving the girl in uncertainty, and asks far enough in advance to let her make her plans.
34. Teases girl too much.	34. Is a good dancer.
35. Sings or whistles while dancing.	35. Is courageous and manly. Well liked by men.
36. An egotist. Talks about himself most of the time.	36. Tells girl his secrets. Confides in her and asks for her opinion.
37. Lets girl have her own way too much, till he appears spineless or sissy, and she loses respect for him.	37. True to one girl if engaged or going steadily. Doesn't try to "two-time" her. (5)
38. Boasts about his sex conquests or affairs with other women. (5)	38. Always speaks well of everybody. Not prejudiced or narrow minded.
39. Toots horn in front of girl's home instead of coming to door.	39. Comes from a good family—gracious, kindly and democratic.
40. Not forceful or masculine enough. Has weak handshake, nervous giggle, and excessive timidity. (5)	40. Encourages a girl to maintain her ideals instead of trying to break them down. (5)
41. Always trying to say things that will shock people. A grandstander, or show-off type.	41. Industrious and can hold a job, so a girl feels she can lean upon him. Gives her a sense of security. (10)
42. Dreams too much and flees from reality. Then tries to bolster his ego by tall tales and bragging. (10)	42. An interesting entertainer. Takes girl to various places of amusement and tries to make her evening happy.
43. A gambler. Thinks he can "win" success instead of "earning" it. (5)	43. Is well read. Can discuss current events in addition to athletics.
44. Dishonest. Cheats at cards or thinks it smart to "gyp" or short change people (20)	44. Has musical ability, as singing, playing piano, etc.
45. Too serious minded, and bookish. Tries to show off his intelligence or superior education.	45. Brave and strong, but gentle and courteous.
46. Tries to put on airs. Is a snob. Has affected speech.	46. Likes wide range of foods. Not a finicky eater.
47. No business ability, and can't hold on to his money. Usually broke. (10)	47. Enthusiastic and vital. Not a sluggish or anemic type.
48. Too attentive and gallant to the point of effeminacy. A "yes" man.	48. Gives her presents which are appropriate or useful.
49. Embarrasses girl by cleaning or filing nails in public; talking with food in his mouth; spitting or dropping ashes on floor, talking loudly, etc.	49. Shows some executive ability. Can make a speech or lead the singing, or get people to work for him. Inspires confidence in himself.
50. Ashamed of his parents or home, and will not introduce girl to them. (5)	50. Is morally and physically clean. Free from venereal disease. (10)

Patient Does Not Die If His Shingles Meet

Physician Corrects an Old Superstition Regarding This Disease.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

MANY people believe that if shingles meet around the center of the body, it is fatal.

I once had a frantic midnight call from a woman who had what she termed "double shingles," and she had suddenly found out that the two eruptions, coming around the sides of her chest, had met in the skin in the center of her body and she was sure she was going to die. I would like to record for the benefit of everyone who is interested that she did not, and still is alive and hearty.

Heaven knows where this superstition got started, although it is rather a natural one. Shingles, or herpes zoster, is a condition in which there is an inflammation in the sensory branch of the nerves, especially those that go around the trunk of the body. These nerves have a segmental arrangement, entering the spinal cord at intervals of about an inch, and are distributed to successive layers of skin about a hand's breadth in width clear around one side of the body.

WHEN THIS INFLAMMATION occurs there is a very painful neuralgia of the skin area for a few days, followed by a blistery eruption. It is almost always one sided and encircles the body from the spine to the midriff, just like half a belt. Sometimes it occurs on both sides in the same segment and the superstition always has been that if it goes clear around the body and meets in the middle, it will be fatal.

This, as I say, is not necessarily true. In fact, I never heard of a case in which death occurred from shingles of any kind. The eruption is entirely on the surface, and there is no involvement of the internal organs or the blood supply so there is no real reason why a fatality should occur, even though it looks as if nature were sawing a woman in half.

Whenever a patient has shingles, however, some kind friend invariably "lets them in" on the fact that if it occurs on the other side, too, and meets in the middle, it will be the end. This is the same kind of person who tells a patient after a doctor has done a spinal puncture that those things are invariably followed by paralysis, although it may take six months for the paralysis to develop. Then the patient sits down and makes plans for the oncoming paralysis. Which never arrives, although it causes plenty of mental anguish.

How to Rate Your Boy Friend

exact data from a large survey, and not my opinions.

Remember, too, that men may not object to women's drinking, as a class, but they seem to be almost unanimously opposed to it in their own sweethearts.

In computing your sweetheart's score, check the various items under DEMERITS which apply to him or her, and add the total. Each item counts as one point unless specifically "weighted" as in the parentheses.

Next, check off the items under MERITS which apply. Now subtract the DEMERIT total from the MERIT score. The result is the raw score, which can then be interpreted according to this table of norms: 0—9, very poor; 30—47, poor; 48—69, average; 70—88, superior; 89 and up, very superior.

I commend these tests to all intelligent young people who wish to be happy in marriage. So many church organizations, Y. M. C. A.'s and Y. W. C. A.'s, fraternities and sororities, college professors, high school principals and parent-teachers' groups have asked for my previous tests, that I advise you readers to file these copies away for future reference.

GENERAL INTEREST IN COTTONS FOR SUMMER

PICKERS of the early crop of cotton dresses are finding their annual task an unusually interesting if not such an easy one because of the general fashion interest in cottons for summer wear.

There is a tendency this year to handle cottons in a grand manner as well as to delegate the casual summer style needs to these cool fabrics. Many expensive evening dresses that have an elegant emphasis are created of sheer cottons, while there are party frocks for summer teas and garden festivals, tailored models and countless sports styles.

—o-o—

ONE OF THE most impressive uses of cotton materials is in the development of an evening frock which is made of black net, but has appliques of white embroidered organdie dotted over it in the form of flower petals. Underneath the net is a black taffeta slip which is flounced with the organdie. It gives a very lacy effect to the costume. Another striking dress using cotton materials combines wide bands of pale blue and violet eyelet embroidery. She skirt is flounced entirely with these alternating colors as is the off-the-shoulder bodice.

Noted among the attractive cotton dresses created for afternoon wear is a coat dress made of navy blue cotton shantung, over which is a reefer coat of pale beige embroidered batiste. The coat is bound with the navy fabric and has short sleeves. A square neckline outlined with the batiste and a tricky insertion of the batiste above the skirt hem serve to give the dress a more formal appearance.

Old-fashioned cotton prints are being employed for the dainty type of afternoon frock. In keeping with the quaint emphasis of the fabrics these dresses employ embroidered beading, Irish crochet insertion, clusters of hand tucks and black velvet ribbon sashes as their decorative features. It is interesting to note, also, that the dainty flower designs in pastel tints on white backgrounds are the favorites for the development of this style idea.

—o-o—

MANY NOVELTY cotton materials resembling silks or woolens are seen this year and are used extensively in the creation of the more casual type of frocks. There are fuzzy-surfaced fabrics, for example, heavily ribbed ones, crepe effects that have a subtle sheen and chambrays with a finish that looks exactly like silk. Polka-dotted themes, the dots raised above the surface, are popular for shirtwaist frocks and for jackets which are being worn with every type of dress from a hopsacking beach dress to a chiffon evening gown.

Apron Returning

ADD to the list of revivals that are highlighted among the important fashions of the year, the once humble apron! Style authorities credit it to Sweden and say it is here because of a Swedish influence on fashion, but some of the aprons look surprisingly like the old-fashioned American kitchen variety. They are worn over peasant frocks for country sports, over frilly afternoon dresses that have a picturesque quality and also are worn backward to serve as brief skirts over shorts or bathing suits. The most striking apron displays wide vertical stripes and is gathered very full to a wide girdle that ties at the back.

Dirndl Frocks Established in Style Picture

Have Appeal to Slender, Youthful Figures for Formal or Informal Wear.

THE dirndl type of frock which started its career a few years ago as an eccentric fashion to be worn for the beach, the country and for semi-fancy dress, now has become an established style with an appeal to slender, youthful figures for informal and formal wear.

Dirndls are featured for late spring and summer in such a variety of materials and versions that the girl who looks well in the full-skirted, basque-bodiced type of frock can wear the style throughout the entire day. Novelty cotton materials are used most extensively because the dress of peasant inspiration seems most appropriately designed of the colorful, printed fabrics.

A collection of dirndls that were created primarily for play wear displays the vogue of gay cotton prints and peasant linens. All of the vivid color combinations associated with California's sports fashions are represented in these frocks that stress the very short skirt and the short-sleeved blouse. Several suspender dresses are included, the skirts being made of the cross-stripped or flower dotted cottons while the sheer white blouses display peasant embroidery.

Noted among youthful evening dresses, there are modifications of the dirndl developed in sheer cottons such as dotted Swiss and dimity. Taffeta is the favorite medium when a crisp type of material is used.

Opera Names Principals For Season

List for 11 Weeks Includes 80 Singers, Dancers, Comedians.

COMPLETE casts of principals for 11 of the 12 weeks of the twentieth anniversary season of outdoor opera are announced today by Municipal Opera.

With the eight prima donnas previously announced, the list adds up to 80 leading singers, dancers and comedians — the largest number ever engaged for a park season.

Among the men to make their Municipal Opera debuts in leading parts are Ronald Graham, baritone, in "Virginia," and Oscar Shaw, singing and dancing comedian, as John P. Wintergreen in "Of Thee I Sing."

New feminine stars will include Melissa Mason, ingenue comedienne, Fifi D'Orsay, stage and screen comedienne, and Ethel Morrison. Mary Hopple, contralto; Vicki Cummings, comedienne, and Helen Raymond, character actress, are to return.

Returning also are leading men and comedians of other seasons, including Al Trahan, Billy House, Jack Sheehan, Eric Mattson, George Rasely, Jack Good, Hal Forde, Eugene Lowenthal, Joseph Macauley and the old-timer, Frank Moulan.

A Week Rich in Comedy---Heavy in Screen Drama

By Ellwood Douglass

THERE'S a lot more in the detective comedy at the Ambassador Theater, "There's Always a Woman," than a thrifty sense that thar's gold in them 'hills originally explored by Nick Charles. In fact, the only hints suggestive of the Powell-Loy hit that led off the cycle are its large content of champagne, ribaldry and excellence.

Joan Blondell, who persuaded Melvyn Douglas to quit the District Attorney's office and strike out on his own, takes over his agency when he goes back to the old job in order to have meals regular if simple. Clients flock to her, but only to use her as a stooge in a murder, her husband's first assignment from the District Attorney. They work wholly and hilariously at cross-purposes to a solution not too unanimous for the purposes of hearthstone comedy. The story has some amusing twists, and some of the craziest situations of its kind. Douglas' convincing, dead-serious but consistently comic handling of the detective alone would assure his place as one of the best workmen in the business. He is most happily abetted by his wide-eyed and balmy wife, Miss Blondell, Mary Astor as the murdered man's widow; Frances Drake as his former fiance, and Walter Kingsford as the butler — "Don't forget the butler," says Operative Blondell.

Joe Penner's "Go Chase Yourself" makes an admirable companion piece. An unusually bright and adroit screenplay was done by Paul Yawitz, former St. Louis reporter, and Bert Granet, from a story by Walter O'Keefe. In the cast are Lucille Ball, Richard Lane, June Travis, Fritz Field and Tom Kennedy.

Doctor Rhythm.

"AUNTIE BEA" LILLIE, who hasn't done so well previously in pictures, does very well indeed as angel and mascot of a police circus, and also of Bing Crosby and Mary Carlisle, in "Doctor Rhythm" at the Fox. Crosby starts out as a doctor, becomes a policeman and winds up as a gypsy. It all begins with a class reunion at the zoo which culminates with Andy Devine, rather advisedly, it seems, trying to change places with the animals and then teaching games to a trained seal—which happens to be an expert.

Crosby has some nice scenes with Miss Carlisle and also with a statue in the zoo, and has, likewise, four good songs. It's based on an O. Henry story, but it takes a long lead off base. And it all goes to show that when Miss Lillie wants double damask dinner napkins, she gets them—and then some.

Fresh, not canned music, a vigorous song and dance by a local Miss Bergona and a pair of smooth gymnasts, Paul and Nino Ghezzi, make up a stage show with Dave Schooler as master of ceremonies and featuring Nick Lucas, who has developed greatly in voice and presence.

Marco Polo and Gaiety Girls.

IT'S A SHAME one can't say more for "The Adventures of Marco Polo" at Loew's. It ought to be good. But it's Marco Polo without poetry, art or much excitement. Probably it is worth seeing out of curiosity if nothing else, and fortunately the Alexander Korda musical, "Gaiety Girls," which has everything it lacks, makes the errand profitable.

One thing Marco Polo has is Gary Cooper, as the adventurer, in some very heavy romance with the interesting newcomer, Sigrid Gurie, as the daughter of Kublai Khan. With it are a swell explosion contrived by James Basevi, maestro of the San Francisco earthquake and the Manukura hurricane, a great deal of intrigue and the usual competent acting by Basil Rathbone, also by Alan Hale as a rebellious and henpecked tribal lord and Binnie Barnes as his dominant and flirtatious lady, and a screen play by Robert E. Sherwood.

"Gaiety Girls" is a refreshingly deft and fast-moving comedy, with no pretensions but notable craftsmanship in lines, direction, acting and stage design. It has tuneful music and first-rate dancing, solo and chorus. Jack Hulbert and Patricia Ellis are the stars; Thornton Freeland, the director.

Condemned Women.

Prison, pathos and psychiatry fill the melodrama at the St. Louis, "Condemned Women." Sally Eilers, shoved around all her life and finally into the penitentiary, finds a friend there in Louis Hayward. Also there is Ann Shirley, who took the rap for an embezzling boy friend so he could spend his three years in law schools without bars.

There is a great deal of heavy drama and some "big" scenes, mostly in a prison break. Things look pretty black for a while, but it comes out all right in the end.

"This Marriage Business" has lots of action and a fair measure of fun, with Victor Moore as a small-town license clerk, Vicki Lester as his daughter, Allan Lane as a reporter and Jack Carson as a strong-back photographer.

"Joy of Living," the first-rate musical starring Irene Dunne and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. has moved to the Missouri for its third week. With it is the jewel thief mystery, "The Lone Wolf of Paris," featuring Francis Lederer and Frances Drake.

Politicians Still Make Comedy for Broadway

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 7.

THE Broadway theater continues to assume that whether constituents are enthusiastically in favor of their current government or not, they have the privilege in this country of speaking their minds.

In "Revelry," a play of about ten years ago, the administration of Warren G. Harding was dramatized in a terrific indictment of its rule.

Later the musical comedy, "Of Thee I Sing," flung hilarious but respectful satire at the Coolidge and Hoover regimes.

The newest theatrical commentary upon our National Government arrived this week, this the comedy, "Washington Jitters," which the Theater Guild is presenting just across the street from the playhouse in which "I'd Rather Be Right" is performing. And it is the opinion of the majority of New York critics that "Washington Jitters" would be considerably more entertaining if, as in "I'd Rather Be Right," there were songs and dances to lighten the tedium of Washington politics.

But "Washington Jitters" is frequently an extremely comical satire of politicians in general, and not so much a criticism of any one group of them in particular. For it presents politicians, be they Democratic, Republican, Communist or belonging to any other party, as professional men who use practically parallel tactics to achieve their divergent ends.

It is the story of Henry Hogg, a young man who has eavesdropped attentively in the various governmental agencies and offices of Washington while he was engaged in painting, erasing and then painting new names on the doors of the several thousand appointive offices. Silently pursuing his chores as a Government sign painter, Hogg overheard all sides of every question that plagued the various politicians and he began to brood, and honestly so, that something should be done to make the Government more efficient and economic.

DELIVERING a new sign he had painted to a co-ordinator of one of the most important governmental bureaus, he found the coordinator out and sat down at his deck to wait, meanwhile perching the sign on the desk. Enter a radio broadcaster who made the mistake of inquiring no further and, believing Henry Hogg to be the co-ordinator, began to interview him for a news broadcast.

Young Hogg gave him an interview that critically dissected every aim of the administration. Overnight the sign painter became a political power. He found himself, so great was the ballyhoo, occupying an office which didn't exist and to which he had not been appointed. Senators and other Government dignitaries began fawning for his favors.

But Hogg was an honest if naive young man. As soon as he discovered the false throne on which he had tumbled, he explained that the Senators and Congressmen had been misled through their own ignorance and that he was now happy to correct their errors in judgment.

So the comedy ends with the befuddled Senators and Congressmen deciding that perhaps Henry Hogg might make a good President.

Most of the cast seems to be from the Stuart Walker stock companies of the Middle West, but especially is Walker's graduate, Fred Stewart, excellent in the role of Henry Hogg.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, who will be 82 years old next July 26, finds his prophetic "Heartbreak House" again appearing at a moment when it seems to be timely Shavian comment on current world events.

Today, when European borders are rumbling with threats of war, the youthful and stimulating Mercury Theater players have received this drama which Shaw voluntarily suppressed during the World War.

As he explained when he published the play in 1919, "you cannot make war on war and on your neighbor at the same time."

So it was not until after the Armistice that he finally allowed the play to be staged.

Since then it has been seen on Broadway several times and now the Mercury players bring it back in an exciting production just as war clouds in reality are seemingly as threatening in Europe as they were when Shaw wrote and suppressed the play a quarter century ago.

This is a drama which Shaw wrote as a warning to the moneyed, leisure class of Great Britain. They must, he chided them from his Shavian pulpit, give up their aimless, witty, futile lives and steer a straight, determined course. Otherwise, enemies from foreign shores would take advantage of their weakness and rain death upon them from the skies. They must either learn a better way of life or die, he warned.

"If men will not learn until their lessons are written in blood," one of his characters summarizes, "why blood they must have, their own by preference."

Mummers to Present "The Man on Stilts"

The Mummers' last play this season, "The Man on Stilts," a comedy of hero-making and politics by Edwin and Albert Barker, will be given under direction of Willard Holland next Thursday and Saturday evenings at the Wednesday Club Auditorium.

A revised version of the play, which was originally produced in New York by Arthur Hopkins, is offered by the Mummers. It tells of Godfrey, a California country boy who, cheated out of his wages on a city paving job, drives off with the steam roller. A reporter thumbs a ride, scents a story and makes him famous, and famous he remains through 3000 miles by steamroller, despite a spectacular last-minute effort to escape it.

Warren Metzinger has the part of Godfrey, with Frank Novotny as Senator Tarbottom, Jean Fischer as Godfrey's fiancee and Jane Garrett as the Senator's "niece."

Philharmonic Society Ends Season Thursday

The final Philharmonic Society concert this season will be presented at 8:15 p. m. Thursday at Scottish Rite Cathedral, 3637 Lindell boulevard, under direction of Alfred H. Hicks, with Miss Bessie Ash, pianist, as soloist. The program:

1. Overture—Russian Easter—Op. 36 — Rimsky-Korsakow
II. Concerto—Op. 4 —Serge Liapounow
First performance in St. Louis.
Bessie Ash.
Intermission.
III. Suite for orchestra, Op. 19 — — Ernst v. Dohnanyi
1. Andante con variazioni.
2. Scherzo.
3. Romanza.
4. Rondo.

New York Playgoers

Some indication of the character of the New York theatrical audience is contained in a survey recently completed under the direction of John Golden, who has "Susan and God" as his current hit. It was discovered that 38 per cent of the higher-priced seats are bought by out-of-town people in New York for short visits.

Thirteen Citations for Merit To Programs Broadcast by KSD

Women's National Radio Committee Awards 14 to Red Network, Seven to Blue, Ten to CBS and Two to Mutual Chain.

PROGRAMS on KSD through the WEAF network of the NBC won 13 of 33 citations for the most meritorious on the air which were awarded by the Women's National Radio Committee at its recent luncheon in New York.

The 13 citations for programs on KSD were given with another to the Red net, with which KSD is affiliated. Seven citations were given for programs on the Blue network, ten for series on the CBS net and two for programs on the Mutual net. As the WEAF and WJZ networks are affiliated with the NBC, 21 of the 33 citations went to NBC programs.

One Man's Family, broadcast by KSD at 6 p. m. Wednesdays, was cited as the best radio serial.

KSD's Thursday night Good News of 1938 and Rudy Vallee's hour were voted the best variety shows.

Charlie McCarthy, featured on KSD in the hour at 6 p. m. Sunday, and Fred Allen, whose Town Hall Tonight is broadcast at 7 p. m. Wednesdays, were voted the best comedy personalities.

Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone, who are on KSD at 5 p. m. Sundays; Amos 'n' Andy, who are on KSD at 9 p. m. Monday through Friday, and George Burns and Gracie Allen, on KSD at 8:30 p. m. Mondays, were voted the outstanding comedy teams.

Don Ameche, of the Charlie McCarthy show, and Robert Taylor, of Good News of 1938, won top honors as masters of ceremonies.

The citation for good taste in a commercial program went to the Jack Benny series.

KSD's 8 p. m. Sunday Phil Spitalny all-girl orchestra program and its 6 p. m. Friday concert featuring Lucille Manners, the Revelers Quartet and Frank Black's orchestra were voted the best of the sponsored light musical series.

Walter Damrosch's Music Appreciation Hour on the WEAF network, which was concluded recently, was cited as the best schoolroom program, giving that chain its 14 citations.

The concerts by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and the NBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Arturo Toscanini on KSD, and Alfred Wallenstein's Sinfonietta concerts, were voted the best of the non-commercial serious music programs. The Sunday night concert from Detroit, the recent Monday night Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra and concerts, and Sunday night Rising Musical Stars programs, and the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts were voted the finest of the commercial serious music series.

COMING FEATURES

AROUND table discussion of "Judaism in a Democracy" is set for 2:45 p. m. tomorrow on the CBS net in connection with the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the United Synagogue of America in Chicago. Preliminary to the covering of the running of the Preakness Stakes next Saturday, a dramatization of the founding in 1873 and subsequent story of this race will be broadcast at 7 p. m. tomorrow on the WEAF net.

Wednesday, the story of Junipero Serra, the Franciscan friar, who played such a part in establishing missions in California, will be dramatized in the Cavalcade period. Shakespeare's retirement to Strafdord-on-Avon in 1607, and the founding of Jamestown, Va., will be the subjects of the Living History program at 5:30 on the CBS net. Announcement of awards to distinguished citizens of foreign birth will be made in a broadcast from a dinner of the National Institute of Immigrant Welfare at 8:30 p. m. on the WJZ net. A broadcast from the Memphis Cotton Carnival is set for 2:30 p. m. on the CBS net.

Thursday, the speech of King Christian as he opens the Northern Europe fair at Oslo, will be part of a broadcast from Norway at 7 a. m. on the CBS net. At 10:30 a. m. the WEAF net will carry a description of an unusual maneuver in the Army Air Corps war game in the East.

Friday, the Tony Galento-Nathan Mann fight will be broadcast at 8 p. m. by the WJZ net and KWK.

Saturday, the christening of the United States destroyers, Mayrant and Trippe, will be covered at 9:30 a. m. on the Mutual net. A talk by Lady Astor, broadcast from London, and one by Mrs. H. H. University of Chicago Forum Now at 8:30—Here and There—Studio Gossip and Network News.

EFFECTIVE today, the University of Chicago's Round Table forum will be broadcast at 8:30 Sunday nights on the WEAF network and WMAQ, Chicago. This will be the first change of time for this program, which has been put on the air on 361 Sundays and has come to be regarded as possibly the most valuable of all the radio educational series. Tonight's broadcast will cover a discussion of the visit of Hitler to Italy, under the title, "What Are the Dictators Planning in Rome?" by Quincy Wright, professor of international relations, University of Chicago; Clifton M. Utley, director of the Chicago Council of Foreign Relations, and G. A. Borgese, the Italian editor, scholar and historian, who is an exile from Italy because of his opposition to Fascism and who has become an American citizen. Borgese is now professor of Italian literature at the university.

Vice-President John N. Garner, who seldom takes part in a broadcast, will speak next Sunday on a CBS net program in connection with the dedication of the Yugoslavian Cultural Gardens in Cleveland, O.

The Song Shop, which was to have gone off the air after last Friday night, will be continued at the same time on an indefinite schedule . . . To date, 64 movie stars have taken part in KSD's Thursday night Good News of 1938 programs.

Examinations will be held at the Federal Building, in St. Louis, at 9 a. m. Friday for all classes of radio amateurs and commercial operators, and at the same hour Saturday for Class A and B amateurs only.

The start and finish of the 500-mile automobile race at Indianapolis May 30 will be described on the Mutual net, which also will carry preliminary stories on the race Sunday, May 22, and Saturday, May 28. Plans of the NBC and CBS in respect to the race have not been announced.

WITH a grant of funds by the Rockefeller Foundation, a survey is being made to determine the reasons for the strong popular appeal of KSD's One Man's Family serial. Conducted by the School of Public and International Affairs of Princeton University, the survey will include interviews with listeners to the serial. Other surveys have indicated that 20,000,000 listeners weekly follow the progress of the serial on KSD and the WEAF network at 6 o'clock Wednesday evenings.

A Salute to Air Mail Week program, at 6 p. m. Saturday, directed by Jerry Hoekstra, will include talks by Postmaster W. Rufus Jackson, Ralph Page, airport manager at Lambert Field, officers of the Chamber of Commerce and pioneers in local air mail development, and music by Ben Feld's orchestra.

Arch Oboler's Lights Out play, at 10:30 p. m. Wednesday on the WEAF net, will have its locale in the sewer labyrinth of Paris . . . The NBC's parrot contest is set for 1:30 p. m. next Sunday on the WEAF net, and probably on KSD.

The Ranch Boys trio, Jack Ross, Joe ("Curley") Bradley and Hubert ("Shorty") Carson, who are to be featured in the Saturday National Barn Dance, plan to start Tuesday to ride on horseback from Hollywood to Chicago and New York. They say they should reach Chicago by July 16. Their start will be broadcast at 2:45 p. m. Tuesday on the WJZ net.

Two European concert singers, Mme. Emmi Leisner, a German contralto who has sung in opera, and Maria Sokil, a soprano from the Ukraine, are billed with Glenn Darwin, the baritone, at 1 p. m. next Sunday and May 22.

When Al Williams takes off Thursday in an airplane at Kitty Hawk, N. C., scene of the Wright Brothers first flights, to deliver a load of mail later in the day at Dayton, O., a Mutual net microphone will be there to record for listeners the climax of National Air Mail Week. The broadcast is set for 11:15 a. m. . . .

Next Sunday, from 1 to 2 p. m., Howard Barlow will conduct the Columbia Symphony Orchestra in the first of the third summer season of Everybody's Music broadcasts on the CBS net and KMOX for which Henry M. Neeley, "The Old Stager," will act as commentator. Barlow's opening program will include the overture to Lalo's "Le Roi d'Ys," Brahms' Variations on a Theme by Haydn and Sibelius' Seventh Symphony. Brugna Castagna, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera, will be the soloist in next Sunday's Concert from Detroit, which John Barbirolli will conduct.

MERLE OBERON will be starred Monday night, May 15, in a Radio Theater performance of Somerset Maughan's "The Letter" . . . Cliff Soubier, the character actor, will be back on the Uncle Ezra program May 16 and in the National Barn Dance May 21 . . . When Fred Allen takes his summer vacation, the Monday night For Men Only show may be shifted to half an hour of his Wednesday period on KSD and some sort of audience participation program may fill in the other half hour. . . . Oscar Polk, the Negro actor now on Broadway in "You Can't Take It With You," is playing Horace in the Big Sister serial. . . .

Reports have Morton Downey, the tenor, or Cissie Loftus likely to carry on for Walter Winchell when he takes his air vacation in July. . . . Jack Haley will again head a program, in September, but on the CBS net Friday nights. . . . Kate Smith will sign off her Thursday show for a vacation in the summer, returning to it late in September, and may also resume her comment program and add another CBS series. . . . Promotion of a radio show featuring Leopold Stokowski, the conductor, and Deanna Durbin is still "strictly a perhaps," Variety reports. . . . The Lorenzo Jones serial is being transcribed for broadcasting by the big station in Luxembourg for British listeners. . . . Mark Warnow and his orchestra will go off the Hit Parade after June 4 and return to the air July 6, with a CBS net noncommercial revival of his Blue Velvet Music. . . . The Great Plays performances on the WEAF net were concluded yesterday afternoon with one of Anderson's "Valley Forge."

Ceremonies at the dedication in Washington by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt of the first airplane postoffice, the flagship of a trans-continental air line, will be broadcast on the Mutual net at 12:15 noon next Sunday.

Crooks to Sing 'Una Furtiva' on KSD Tomorrow

Sir Adrian Boult to Conduct NBC Symphony Concert at 8 O'Clock Next Saturday Night.

SIR ADRAIN BOULT, conductor of the British Broadcasting Corporation's symphony orchestra, is expected to arrive in New York this morning on the Britannic, to direct the NBC Symphony Orchestra concerts on KSD at 8 o'clock next Saturday night and Saturday, May 21.

For his broadcast next Saturday, he has programmed Bussoni's "Comedy Overture," which the Italian-German composer wrote in 1897 and revised in 1904; Beethoven's Seventh Symphony; William Walton's Concerto for Viola and Orchestra with William Primrose as soloist, and Aaron Copeland's "El Salon Mexico," which had its premiere in a concert conducted by Carlos Chaves in Mexico City two years ago.

Sir Adrain was born in Chester, England, 49 years ago, attended Westminster School in London and Christ College, Oxford, then studied conducting at Leipzig under Artur Nikisch. In 1914, he became an assistant conductor for the Covent Garden opera, in 1918 was invited to conduct the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in London, and the following year conducted the Diaghileff Ballet Russe, resigning to join the faculty of the Royal College of Music. In 1932, he was placed in charge of the music department of the British Broadcasting Corporation, and became conductor of its symphony. For his services to British music, he was knighted in 1937.

Radio concerts for this week will include:

Today—7:30 a. m., on KMOX, Aubade. 10:30 a. m. on KWK, Radio City concert; Handel's "Water Music" and Ravel's "Alborado del Grazioso," Jan Peerce singing the "O'Paradiso" aria and Henrietta Schumann, pianist, playing two movements of Tschaikowsky's B-flat Minor Concerto.

12 noon on KWK, concert by the NBC Symphony Orchestra, Walter Damrosch conducting; Goldmark's "Overture to Spring," the Allegretto from Brahms' Second Symphony, Lekeu's Adagio for string orchestra, Honegger's "Pacific 231," Chasins' "Parade" and the fourth movement of Philip James' "Radio Station WGZBX," first prize winner in the NBC orchestral awards competition in 1932. During this broadcast, Linton Wells, who is touring Latin-America, will interview a newspaper man at Managua, capital of Nicaragua. 2:30 on KMOX, Exploring Music; orchestra led by Bernard Hermann and Hollace Shaw, soprano. 4:30 on WJZ net, first of fourth annual series by the Canadian Grenadier Guards Band, J. Flood at Cairo Drama on KSD Tuesday Night

Illinois Highway Patrol to Be Featured—Sinking of the Titanic Topic of Thursday Paths of Destiny.

ANOTHER of the new Trailing the Highway Patrol programs will be broadcast by KSD at 9:30 Tuesday night when the work of the Illinois State Highway Patrol in the Cairo region during the 1937 flood will be dramatized.

During the flood crisis, the problem of getting relief supplies delivered in the Cairo region was serious because of highway congestion, and the Illinois patrolmen won praise for the way in which they kept the supplies moving South. Part of the program, which will be produced in KSD's studios, will be devoted to Gov. Henry L. Horner's trips to the flood area to check the efficiency of the relief agencies and hurry up the relief work. H. H. Harrison, traffic engineer of the Illinois Highway Department, will speak in the safe driving part of the broadcast.

In the Paths of Destiny period, at 9:30 Thursday night on KSD, the sinking of the Titanic in 1912 with the loss of nearly 1500 lives, following the liner's collision with an iceberg, will be dramatized. The script, written in KSD's studios, will depict incidents of heroism in the disaster, such as Mrs. Isadore Strauss' refusal to leave her husband to die alone, the way in which men stood up to wives and children and the certainty of death so that women might have the seats in the lifeboats, the gallantry of officers and members of the crew, the harrowing wait in vain for the arrival of rescue ships befoer the liner should sink, and the impression which the self-sacrifice and fortitude displayed in the disaster made upon the world.

KSD'S ALPINE Varieties program's will be broadcast again this week at 9:15 Monday through Friday and at 6:45 p. m. Saturday. Also scheduled on KSD for Saturday evening are the Hole-in-One Golf tournament program at 5, the Camera Club of the Air at 5:45, the Community Forum at 7 and the American Portraits at 7:30.

The trophy won by the team representing Soldan High School last Saturday afternoon in the finals of KSD's spelling tournament will be presented to the school within a few days. Engraved on it will be the names of the members of the Soldan team—Margaret Cremer, Alice Mitchell, Robert Weinhaus, Arthur Rosen, Sara Canis, Chandler Monroe, Virginia Brainard and Ruth Ziegenmeyer, and the alternates, Mildred Trump, Ann Chapel and Stanley Rosenblum.

Interviews with persons active in sports continue to be features of Frank Eschen's Mid-day Sports Previews at 12 noon Monday through Saturday. One of his guests the past week was Al Rickenbacker, who is active in the promotion of the annual Memorial day 500-mile auto race at Indianapolis, discussed prospects for the coming event.

Yesterday KSD broadcast the second of its Hole-in-One Golf Tournament programs, which are regularly scheduled at 5 p. m. Saturdays. W. J. Egan was the winner of the first tournament, and the runner up was Lou Fehlig, formerly captain of the Notre Dame golf team.

The talk in connection with the Missouri Library Commission by Miss Lillie R. Ernst, principal of Blewett High School, is set for 4 p. m. Thursday.

At 4:15 p. m. tomorrow, KSD will carry a concert by a chorus of 50 girls from the Incarnate Word Academy.

Flood at Cairo Topic Of Program on KSD

and ended with the wrecking of the fugitives' car and the death of one and serious injury of the others, will be dramatized in the Public Hero No. 1 period tomorrow evening.

Beth Holly will be back in the story Wednesday night when the One Man's Family serial comes on KSD at 6 o'clock. The Barbours will be at Sky Ranch, the some of Claudia and her husband, Nicky, and the chief topic of conversation will be Clifford's recent talk with his estranged wife. It is probable that there also will be a long talk between Beth and Paul Barbour.

Tommy Dorsey plans to devote part of his KSD program at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday to instructions in swing music as he and his orchestra play it.

Through the magic mirror, Mickey Mouse and his gang will visit Switzerland at 7:30 Monday night and hear the story of William Tell and the tyrant, Gessler.

Henry Kirchdoerfer of Oneida, Pa., foreman of a coal mine, who spent eight days with five of his men trapped in a shaft by a flood, will have a part in the Johnny Presents program Tuesday evening on KSD.

"A Wife for Philip Green," which tells of the woman-shunning attorney whose troubles begin when a girl seeks a free airplane ride by posing as his wife, will be the First Nighter play on KSD Friday night.

A description of part of the Preakness Ball of the Maryland Hunt Club, following the running of the Preakness States race, will be carried by KSD at 10:15 Saturday night.

WHENEVER Carleton E. Morse, author of the One Man's Family serial, which KSD broadcasts at 6 p. m. Wednesdays, is not in the studios, Michael Rafetto, who plays Paul Barbour, directs the broadcast. . . . Irving Caesar, the song writer, whose Songs of Safety are a Thursday night feature of Rudy Vallee's programs on KSD, is giving most of his time to composing them . . . Malcolm Claire now has 12 programs for children weekly on the networks—at 6 a. m. Monday through Saturday on Eastern stations in the WEAF net, at 8 a. m. on Mid-Western stations and at 4 p. m. on WENR, Chicago. . . . Eddie Cantor plans to move from New York back to Hollywood immediately after his broadcast tomorrow evening. . . . Norma Paterson, a Chicago radio actress, has joined her husband, Arthur Peterson, in the cast of A Tale of Today. She replaces Nancy Hurtle in the role of Sally Ackerton. . . . A poll of peace sentiment in this country has been started on the Thursday night We, the People program. . . . Lillian Lauferty, writer of KSD's new Your Family and Mine serial, is the wife of James Wolf, the Metropolitan Opera basso. . . . WLW is still broadcasting the Moon River concert at 12:30 midnight daily.

Betty Lou Gerson, the young Chicago radio actress, who has just finished a season as leading lady for Jim Ameche in the Grand Hotel series, has been added to the cast of the Attorney at Law serial. She will play Vicky Blake, a young divorcee. . . . The Merry Macs, who are now featured with Fred Allen Wednesday nights on KSD, originally included Cheri McKay and Judd, Ted and Joe McMichaels. When Cheri left the show business in 1936, Lynn Martin took her place and the billing was Lynn Martin and the Merry Macs. Then Helen Carroll succeeded Miss Martin, and the old billing, Merry Macs, has been used ever since.

Ken Carpenter, whose passages with Bing Crosby about the chimes have enlivened the 8-9 o'clock hour Thursday nights on KSD, was born in Avon, Ill., Aug. 2, 1900, attended Lombard College, at Galesburg, Ill., where he was married, and has an 8-year-old son. He began announcing on KFI, Los Angeles, in 1930.

Garden Club Convention in Philadelphia

St. Louisians Go to Attend Meeting — Entertainment and Tours for Visitors Arranged.

PHILADELPHIA, May 7.—

THE Garden Club of America, meeting here next week, will convene for its twenty-fifth anniversary in the city where it was founded by the late Mrs. J. Willis Martin, outstanding social leader and lover of flowers and gardens.

Philadelphia hostesses, known for their hospitality, will entertain each day, beginning Monday, in both their homes and gardens, many of which are famous for their beauty. Several of the members have opened their houses for the entire week.

Aside from these informal gatherings, garden week will be filled with tours, not only to local gardens, but to those in outlying suburbs, visits to famous arboretums and historic homes of revolutionary and even prerevolutionary times. The fountains and famous gardens of Longwood, estate of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre S. du Pont, at Kennett Square, Pa., will be seen by garden club devotees, as will the well-known Widener orchid collection and other rare botanical exhibits.

A trip will be made to the School of Horticulture at Ambler, Pa., 16 miles from Philadelphia, which numbers among its students several from St. Louis. The school is of special interest to the Garden Club since it was founded by a group of Philadelphia and Wilmington women to promote interest in gardening and landscape design.

Visitors will register Monday at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, headquarters of the club, but may stay anywhere they choose, and many will be with friends. The St. Louis Garden Club will be represented by Mrs. William O. Schock, who arrived last week and will be joined tomorrow by Mrs. John Valle Janes, Mrs. Edward J. Walsh, Miss Grace Morrill and Mrs. Charles G. Ross. Mrs. Schock and Mrs. Janes will be the guests of friends and will return to St. Louis Saturday.

Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock the delegates will gather at Strawberry Mansions to meet Mrs. John H. Fife, national president, who presided at the meeting held in St. Louis last spring. Strawberry Mansions dates back to colonial times, although its gardens have been restored within the last few years as a tribute to the club's founder.

Officers for next year will be elected Tuesday morning at a meeting held at Bellevue-Stratford. The next night a dinner will be given for presidents, voting delegates and five additional registered members of branch garden clubs; national directors and chairmen and the editor and board of editors of the Garden Club Bulletin.

Guests at dinner are to be seated at five tables diverging from the speakers' tables, each row decorated in different colors, shading from light tones at the head to deep colors at the foot. Flowers will be in silver and glass containers on mirrors 18 by 20 inches in diameter.

Thursday night the Philadelphia Museum of Art will open 20 authentic period rooms for a Garden Club dinner. Arrangements of flowers are to be in keeping with the settings, in the cloister, a French Gothic chapel, or in a court before a Romanesque portal.

Wellesley Garden Pilgrimage This Week

THE St. Louis Wellesley Club will sponsor the first of two garden pilgrimages Wednesday from 10 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock that afternoon.

The group will visit eight county gardens, three of which are in Florissant; the gardens of Joseph Desloge, "Vouziers," New Hall's Ferry road, situated above the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers; of Mr. and Mrs. Hermann von Schrenk on the corner of St. Denis and St. Pierre roads, and of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Fordyce, "Hazelwood," on Graham road near Brown road.

In Ladue, gardens include those of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McKittrick Jones on McKnight road; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lesser on Cella road; Mr. and Mrs. Alex Wessel Shapleigh in Fordyce lane; of Mr. and Mrs. M. Erwin Bry and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Werner, which adjoin Ladue road.

Blue and white arrows and road maps will be placed to guide visitors. Luncheon privileges at Norwood Hills Country Club, Lucas and Hunt road, will be extended to all making reservations.

Friday afternoon, May 20, the second pilgrimage will be made, when the tour will include only city gardens. The purpose of the second visit is to show the possibilities of small yards.

In case of rain on either day, the pilgrimages will take place the following day. Proceeds from the pilgrimages will be used for the Wellesley College scholarship fund.

Juniors Plan Dance At Woman's Club

THE juniors of the St. Louis Woman's Club, frequent party givers, are planning their last social event of this season—a buffet supper and dance "in the Southern manner," Friday night, May 20, at the clubhouse.

Invitations, written in verse and mailed today, promise

Dinner at eight by candlelight,
Wistaria to lure your heart's delight,
Music soft with a Southern hint,
Frosted glasses with fragrance of mint.

The three-stanza jingle ends with:

The junior members will be the belles
Who'll dance that night and sing as well,
So bring your beau the twentieth of May
And make hey hey in the Dixie way.

The lounge will be converted into a bar, and the colonial dining room will house small tables to which food will be served. Entertainment will include guitar music played by a strolling musician, a duet by Miss Elizabeth Cordell and Miss Donne Tyler Stevens, twins, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin McDonald Stevens, and an old-fashioned waltz by Mrs. Robert A. Black Jr., Mrs. Carla Clingman Rand and Mrs. Marion Blackwell Hocker.

Mrs. T. Middleton Levis is chairman of the Junior Committee. Mrs.

Junior League Members To Show Sports Clothes

AUTHENTIC sports clothes will be shown by exponents of hunting, tennis and swimming at a fashion show to be given Tuesday during luncheon at the Junior League tearoom. Mrs. Henry J. Kaltenbach Jr., master of fox hounds at Bridlespur Hunt Club, and a group of women members of the hunt, will wear accepted hunting attire. Ike Macy, tennis professional at the St. Louis Country Club, and a group of young women tennis players will show practical tennis clothes. Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace Jr., accompanied by a retriever from her own Audlon Kennels, will be costumed for field trials; Miss Grace White and Mrs. Lee Niedringhaus for fencing, and Mrs. D. D. Walker III for the beach.

In addition, the following regular corps of models from the league membership will display sports clothes from a West End shop. Models include Miss Ann Shapleigh, Mrs. Drew Brown, Miss Lucile Keeler, Mrs. Theodore Desloge, Miss Edwine Nugent and Mrs. Benjamin Wilkins Durham.

Tea at Charles E. Potter Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Potter, 8035 Park drive, Hampton Park, have invited a group of their friends for a mixed tea Sunday afternoon, May 22, from 4 to 6 o'clock. Weather permitting the party will be held in the garden. Mr. and Mrs. Potter will be assisted in receiving by their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Trigg.

Alan C. Caldwell Jr. And Susan Gilkeson Wed

WICHITA, Kan., May 7.

IN a candlelight service at 4 o'clock this afteroon Miss Susan Gilkeson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Boyd Gilkeson, became the bride of Alan Charles Caldwell Jr., son of Alan Charles Caldwell, 140 Trevillian avenue, Webster Groves. Vases of white snapdragon decorated the altar and standards of the same blooms marked the chancel rail of St. James' Episcopal Church. White tapers burned in candelabra before the large fern plaques which served as a background for the floral arrangement.

The Rev. Samuel E. West read the ceremony. Mr. Gilkeson gave his daughter in marriage. She was gowned in ivory satin and duchesse lace, designed on empire lines with sleeves fashioned full at the shoulders and ending in points over the hands. The low, V-neckline was accented by a tiny lace collar. A three-tiered tulle veil fell from a halo of the duchesse over the dress train. Her cascade bouquet consisted of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Charles Lewis Thompson II of St. Louis and Mrs. John Francis Fitz-Gerald attended the bride. Their frocks of frothy green chiffon over matching slips were patterned after the bride's gown. A large bow decorated their green

SPRING parties in prospect include three in honor of Miss Ruth Deibel, who will be married late Wednesday afternoon, June 1, to Edmund Temple Allen. The bride-elect, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Deibel, will be guest of honor next Saturday at a cocktail party to be given by Mrs. Gwynne Evans, 10 Hortense place. Friends of the bridal pair have been invited for cocktails from 4 to 6 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Evans' daughter, Mrs. J. Wallace Thorsen of New York, will arrive that morning with her two children, Gwynne and Wendy, and will remain until after the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kramer will give a small tea for Miss Deibel Monday afternoon, May 16. Mrs. Kramer was Miss Virginia Wilson, a cousin of the bride.

Miss Deibel will share honors with Miss Irene Pettus and Miss Peggy James at a luncheon to be given by Mrs. L. Wade Childress May 26 at the St. Louis Country Club. Miss Pettus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Pettus, will be married to Philip K. Crowe of New York June 4. Miss James, who is to be a bridesmaid at the Allen-Deibel wedding, will return home this week after an eight months' world cruise.

Mr. and Mrs. Deibel will mail invitations tomorrow for the ceremony which is to take place at the First Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. Dr. Roy Calvin Dobson officiating. Cards are to be inclosed for a small reception at Bellerive Country Club. The eight bridesmaids, previously announced, are Mrs. Gilbert Robinson Pirrung, matron of honor; Miss Eugenie Evans, maid of honor, and Mrs. Theodore Plummer Desloge, Miss Ann Shapleigh, Miss Lucile Keeler, Miss James, Miss Grace White and Miss Martha O'Neil.

Kent Ravenscroft will be best man for Mr. Allen, who is the son of Mrs. Clifford B. Allen. Ushers will be William R. Bascom, Dr. John Wickham Seddon, Gilbert Robinson Pirrung, Brayton Slade of Chicago, Ernest A. Hamill II of Lake Forest, Ill.; Charles Gordon Zug of Sewickley, Pa., and Bruce Crane of Dalton, Mass.

Three pre-wedding parties are in prospect for Miss Jane Goldrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Philip Goldrick of 515 Purdue avenue, whose marriage to A. Floyd Chapman Jr. will take place May 21. Miss Margaret Mitchell Docter is planning a luncheon; Mrs. Homer Brewster Taylor will give a similar party Saturday, and Mr. and Mrs. John Gates Jr. have invited a group for cocktails Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. William Geoffrey Kimball have invited friends to call at their new home on the Barnes road this afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock. Lower floor rooms will be decorated in flowers and a string orchestra will play. This is the first large party the Kimballs have given since moving from their for-

St. Louis Spring Horse Show Set For May, 18-20

Annual Event to Be Held at Missouri Stables Arena—Army Team to Be Entertained.

THE April-May horse show season, which, with the exception of the Bridlespur Hunt Club exhibition next Sunday has been promoted largely by college and preparatory school students, will close May 21 with the last performance of a four-day St. Louis Spring Horse Show at the Missouri Stables Arena.

Men and women owners and exhibitors of three and five-gaited show-ring mounts, hunters and harness horses will be represented during the four evenings beginning Wednesday, May 18. In addition to the regular performances, a special matinee for school children is being arranged for Saturday afternoon, May 21, at Walsh Memorial Stadium.

Important on each program will be the appearance of the United States Army Equestrian Team, which has been in training at the Cavalry School in Fort Riley, Kan., for the 1940 Olympic Games in Japan, and which will receive all profits from the show. The War Department has announced that the team left Fort Riley April 25, on an exhibition tour of five cities. The trip has a three-fold purpose: to further the training of both men and horses by placing them in competition before large crowds in different surroundings, to permit the public to witness mounted army team co-ordination, and to raise funds for their trip to the Orient.

Eight officers, an equal number of enlisted men, and 18 horses comprise the self-contained unit, which is moving by van and truck with all necessary equipment. The exhibition here will show horses and riders in all forms of competition required in Olympic games.

Dakota, a big brown gelding which in 1936 tied for fourth place in the great jumping event, the Prix de Nations of the Olympics, and winner of the International Individual Horse Championship at Aachen, Germany, in 1937, is among the best known horses to be shown.

Capt. Milo H. Matteson, Ninth Cavalry, is captain of the team, which is managed by Maj. Frank L. Whittaker from the office of the Chief of Cavalry, Washington. Officers of the troop are Maj. Hiram E. Tuttle of the Quartermaster Corps and Capt. Royce A. Drake and First Lieutenants Frank F. Wing, Scott M. Sanford and W. H. S. Wright, all of the Ninth Cavalry.

The total entry list is estimated by horse show officials at more than 450, the record for a spring show here. Fifty events, including stakes and classes as well as special events for children, are part of the lengthy schedule. In the competition will be student teams from Fontbonne, Lindenwood and Maryville colleges, The Principia, John Burroughs and Country Day schools, Visitation and Sacred Heart academies, Western Military Academy, Taylor School for Boys and Webster Groves High School.

Officers of the show met Thursday night at Hotel Chase, with more than 100 exhibitors to complete arrangements. Mayor Dickmann is president. W. T. Treadway, who presided in the Mayor's absence in Louisville, is vice-president; James N. Wellman is secretary and J. W. Losse, treasurer. Mayor Dickmann, with Col. Joseph A. Atkins, commandant of Jefferson Barracks; Col. C. H. Miller of the Seventh Corps Area and Capt. L. L. Doan of Western Military Academy constitute a committee to entertain the visiting army team.

These committee chairmen have been appointed: A. N. Engle, tickets; James E. Darst, publicity; Colin Westerbeck and Wills Taylor Engle, ring; George Laufer, program; Mayor Dickmann, entertainment; Ray Bartholomew, trophy; Miss Margaret Blewett, schools and college entries, and Frederick J. Berkley, announcer.

Trophy donors include Mrs. Henry J. Kaltenbach Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Brinckwirth, Mrs. Dorothy Hyland, H. J. Sternberg, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Knollman, Dr. Horace W. Soper, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. McGuire, D. P. Richards, Edwin R. Meyer, John M. Olin, Frank Mulligan and Albert Pendleton.

Leora Hennessy Is Wed To William B. Shields

MRS. W. H. HENNESSY, 5933 Kingsbury boulevard, has announced the marriage of her daughter, Miss Leora Hennessy, and William Bayard Shields, 5660 Kingsbury boulevard, son of Mrs. Anne Cole Shields and of the late Dr. William Bayard Shields. The marriage, attended only by members of the families and a few friends, took place Thursday morning, April 28, at 9:30 o'clock in the rectory of St. Louis Cathe-

Missouri Night To Be Observed At Triennial

MISSOURI night will be cerebrated at the opening of the triennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Kansas City Tuesday night. The meeting will open Tuesday and last until the following Tuesday, inclusive. It will be attended by about 4000 delegates. The federation estimates its membership at more than 2,000,000 in this and other countries. A large delegation will leave St. Louis tomorrow to represent the Eighth District Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs.

A major entertainment will be a historic fantasy, "Turn, Wheel, Turn," under the direction of Mrs. Ruth Kelso Renfrow, president of the Eighth District, to be presented Tuesday night by more than 300 Missouri club women.

"Turn, Wheel, Turn" is a dramatic adaptation of the poems of Florida Watts Smith, with a choir of 200 voices, interpretive dancing and a processional, accompanied by orchestra. Mrs. Besse Patterson Gephart, St. Louis, has composed the continuity. Those who will take part in the pageant include Haskell Indians, students from the Missionary Unit of Kansas City, and Richard Dabney's Negro a capella choir.

Miss Lenore Anthony is chairman of the committee in charge, and Mrs. Fredric Halstead is vice-chairman. The general committee members are: Mrs. Charles Luntz, Mrs. Edward P. Huck, Mrs. Jerome F. Duggan and Mrs. W. R. Tuley.

Those serving in the production departments are: Mrs. Frank A. Wickenhauser and Mrs. O. Ray Penick, costumes; Mrs. Gustave F. Goetch, sets; Mrs. John Lonsdale and Mrs. Jerome E. Dyer, processional; Mrs. Arthur Musgrave, Mrs. Edward J. Heilligers, Mrs. Irl L. Johnson and Mrs. C. M. Woodward, music; Mrs. Herbert C. Ford and Mrs. Ray Leimkuehler, lighting and makeup; Mrs. Kenneth Ford and Mrs. Roy Cowan, properties.

Mrs. Edward J. Heilligers of St. Louis, State chairman of music, will present a group of songs as a part of the entertainment on the evening of the formal opening of the triennial meeting. Mrs. Heilligers will be accompanied by Mrs. Irl L. Johnson, Eighth District chairman of music.

The convention will be called to order by Mrs. David S. Long, local chairman for the triennial. Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, General Federation president, will preside and will respond to the addresses of welcome to be given by Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, Mayor Bryce B. Smith of Kansas City and Mrs. H. H. Muchall, president of the Missouri Federation. Mrs. William H. Morris of Hannibal, State chairman of American Citizenship, will offer the salute to the flag.

A tour and reception at the William Rockhill Nelson Gallery of Art and the Mary Atkins Museum has been arranged by Mrs. A. J. Maurer of Kansas City for Sunday evening, May 15.

The reception will be given in honor of Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation; Mrs. H. S. Godfrey, Federation chairman of fine arts; Mrs. Frederick B. Hall, St. Louis, national chairman of art for the organization, and Mrs. H. H. Muchall, president of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs.

Clubwomen from the nine Missouri districts will assist Mrs. Maurer on the reception committee. Those who will represent the Eighth District are: Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Muchall, Mrs. Renfrow, Mrs. Huck, Mrs. John D. Rippey, Mrs. Abraham L. Brown and Mrs. Johnson.

Hunter Boyd Gilkeson Jr. was best man and the groomsmen were Samuel C. McCluney Jr., the bridegroom's cousin; Mr. Thompson, Allen E. Clark and John F. Conrad III, all of St. Louis.

A short-sleeved jacket topped the hyacinth blue lace gown Mrs. Gilkeson wore with matching accessories. Her shoulder bouquet was of pink camellias. Miss Mildred McCluney of St. Louis, aunt of the bridegroom, chose brown lace with a hat of the same shade and a gardenia corsage.

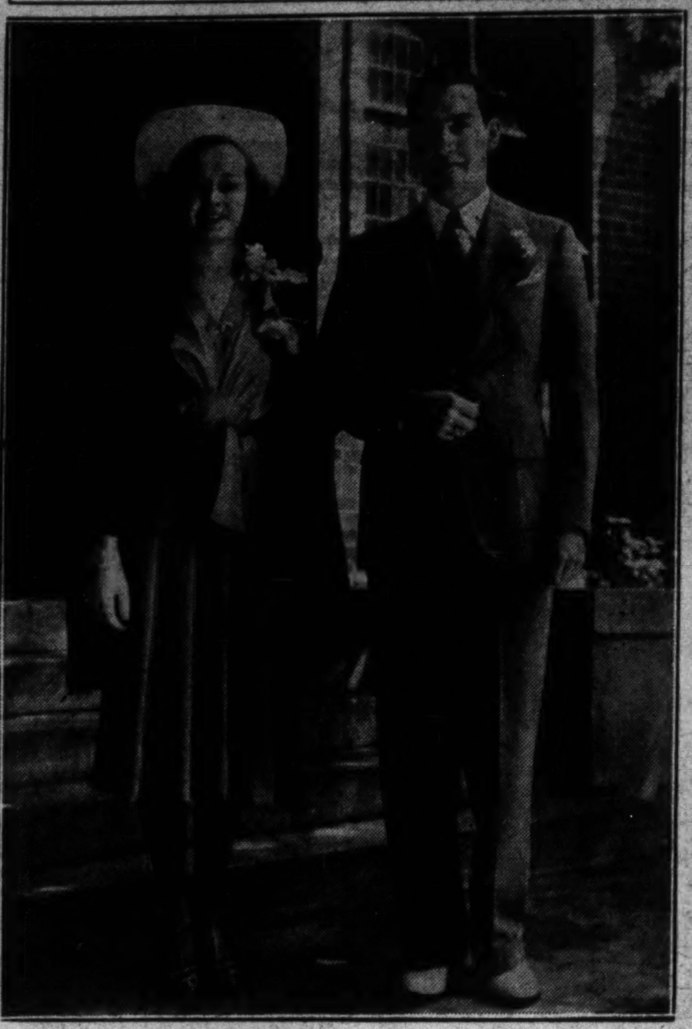
After the ceremony the bridal party received the families and out-of-town guests at the Gilkeson home. Lilies of the valley in silver bowls were flanked by candelabra on the buffet table. The tall wedding cake was topped by white orchids and lilies made from frosting. Assisting were: Mrs. F. A. Beverlin, Mrs. H. W. Horn, Mrs. E. M. Seydell, Mrs. Maude Schollenberger, Mrs. J. O. Davidson, Mrs. Allen W. Pinkel, Mrs. Harry Stanley, Mrs. Verne Laizig, Mrs. A. M. Buzzi, Mrs. Tom Fuller, Mrs. Paul Eaton, Miss Betsy McGrew of Little Rock, Ark., and Miss Louise McCluney of St. Louis, cousin of Mr. Caldwell.

The bride's traveling costume was a suit of beige and brown. Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell will make their home at 7675 Wise avenue.

Among the St. Louisans here for the wedding, in addition to the bridal party members, were: Miss Edith Souther, A. C. Caldwell, W. A. Caldwell, Mrs. Clark, Elliott R. Betts, H. H. Woods and Mrs. J. H. Williams.

Mrs. Caldwell, a member of the Wichita Junior League, attended Mount Vernon Seminary, Washington, the University of Kansas and the Universtiy of Wichita. Mr. Caldwell is a graduate of Washington University in St. Louis and a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Leaving Church After Wedding



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

MR. AND MRS. TRACY WEED BARNES, leaving the Church of the Ascension after their marriage Friday morning. The bride was Miss Elizabeth Agnes McIntyre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Rankin McIntyre.

Van Cleave-Streiff Wedding in Church

MISS CATHERINE ISABELLA STREIFF, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Streiff, 5957 Cates avenue, was married to William Wallace Van Cleave at the Church of the Ascension at 5 p. m. yesterday. The Rev. John S. Bunting read the service. The altar was decorated with four vases of white spring flowers. Festoons of smilax were used in the decorations.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a beige costume suit trimmed with red fox fur, on which were pinned gardenias. Her hat and accessories were turquoise and wine-colored. Miss Nancy Streiff, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a pink tailored suit with a matching hat banded in turquoise and carried gardenias.

Thelan Grone was best man and the groomsmen were: F. Emerson Lamb, Mark M. Evans, John Paul Jones, L. G. Fink Jr. Mr. Van Cleave is the son of Mrs. Hazel Van Cleave of Garden Court apartments.

The families and out-of-town guests informally greeted the bridal pair at the Streiff home after the service.

The young pair departed on a wedding trip, after which they will live at 859 Goodfellow avenue.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Doering, former St. Louisans, now of Wilmette, Ill., uncle and aunt of Mrs. Van Cleave, and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth; Mr. and Mrs. C. Hubert Streiff, the bride's uncle and aunt from Springfield, Ill.; Mrs. Annie Balmforth Howe and her son, Lawrence, cousins of Mr. Van Cleave, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Appel, her uncle, and aunt of Highland Park, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Buchanan of Kansas City, Mo.; Dr. and Mrs. O. L. Zelle, Springfield, Ill., and Mrs. A. W. Griffith of Danville, Ill.

Mrs. August Edward Brooker has planned a garden reception at her home on the Cella road this afternoon. Guests will call between the hours of 4 and 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Felix E. Gunter have issued cards to friends to meet them Saturday afternoon for cocktails and see their new home at Chesterfield, Mo. During the designated hours, 4 and 7 o'clock, guests will be received, outdoors if the weather permits. The new Gunter home was the former residence of Mrs. George S. Tiffany, now of New York, and the late Mr. Tiffany.

Tea by Pen Women For Mrs. Sommers

MRS. KATHERINE HIGGINS SOMMERS, who will be a delegate of the Dante Club at the triennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Kansas City this week, will be the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Alberta Sherwin of Kansas City.

She will be the guest of honor at a tea given by the Kansas City Branch of the League of American Pen Women Saturday, at the home of Mrs. Robert Kerting, 1439 Drury lane, Kansas City. Mrs. Sommers, drama chairman of the St. Louis Branch of Pen Women, will read one of her one-act plays at the tea.

St. Louis Guests Attend Princeton House Parties

PRINCETON, N. J., May 7.

SEVERAL undergraduates and young women from St. Louis are among the hundreds at Princton University this week-end for the spring house parties.

Two members of Charter Club, Walter Rumsey Skinner Jr., son of Mr. and Mr. Walter Rumsey Skinner, and Edward W. Clark of Ridgewood, N. J., are escorting Miss Elizabeth Warren Funsten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Funsten, and Miss Nancy Lee Morrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morrill, respectively. Miss Maude Scudder Overall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Overall, is the guest of Washington Irving of New York, a member of the Colonial Club. Cottage Club guests are Miss Georgia Wright Simmons, daughter of Mrs. George Welch Simmons, whose escort is Russell Allan Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell E. Gardner Jr.; Miss Martha Fairback, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dickson Fairback, escorted by Henry Cathles of Scarsdale, N. Y.; and Miss Elinor Gates of Montclair, N. J., escorted by Alexander William Morriss III, son of Alexander William Morriss Jr.

Wilbur Tyson Trueblood Jr., son of Mrs. Wilbur Tyson Trueblood, a member of Campus Club, has as his guest, Miss Lucy Welch of Detroit, while William C. D'Arcy Jr., of Elm Club, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. D'Arcy, is escorting Miss Nanon Burns, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stanley S. Burns. Miss Lida Lee Christy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin M. Christy, is the guest of Charles Meride of Lima, O., a member of Terrace Club. Farish Alston Jenkins of the Cap and Gown Club, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Miss Theo Stark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stark of Louisiana, Mo., and a student at Pine Manor College, Wellesley, Mass., is the guest this week-end of James Fitzmorris of Chicago. Miss Stark has often visited in St. Louis. James H. Williams, son of Mrs. James H. Williams, has as a guest Miss Ellen Fairfax of Richmond, Va.

Dancing, the theater, athletic events and informal picnics are the order of the holiday week-end. Eighteen upper class eating clubs on Prospect street, better known to students as "The Street," have engaged individual bands to play for separate dances.

Dancing last night began at 10:30 o'clock and lasted until 4 o'clock this morning. This afternoon tea dancing is scheduled, and tonight another dance will be held. This afternoon 11 Princeton sports teams will play home contests. Holding the spotlight will be the Princeton-Harvard-M. I. T.-Syracuse crew regatta on Lake Carnegie.

Last night Theater Intime, undergraduate dramatic organization, presented George Farquhar's "Beaux Strategem," and tonight the performance will be repeated. The play is produced in collaboration with the dramatic club of Finch Junior College of New York and staged in McCarter Theater.

Last night members of the senior class gathered on the steps of historic Nassau Hall after the 9 o'clock curfew, and, clad in their traditional white beer suits, sang many songs well known to Princeton men.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, May 7.

A RED carnation is certain to adorn the buttonhole of President Roosevelt's coat today when he joins the rest of the nation in doing honor to the mothers of America. It was his cousin several times removed—President Theodore Roosevelt—who was the first of the Presidents to wear a carnation on Mother's day. The movement spread around the world after it was started by Miss Ann Jarvis of Philadelphia. She was the first president of the International Mother's Day Association and Congress took official cognizance of Mother's day in 1914.

Augusta Poe, chosen as queen of the Preakness Ball in Baltimore is a descendant of Mrs. David Poe, wife of the Quartermaster-General of the Maryland line during the American Revolution when she organized a group of Baltimore women for a ball when it was learned that the soldiers in the French contingent under Marquis de La Fayette needed clothes. First they held the ball, then sewing parties were held. Mrs. Poe whose grandson was Edgar Allen Poe, the poet and author, furnished the materials at her own expense. The Preakness ball will take place in the Fifth Maryland Armory.

The late Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, physician and friend and adviser to three Presidents had a wonderful store of anecdotes. One of these concerned the night in 1916 when Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and the rest of the country thought for a time he had been elected President of the United States. Admiral Grayson was with President Wilson, the other candidate, when the news kept coming in over the wire. President Wilson was in high spirits and confident despite of the trend against him. Admiral Grayson, however, sought to console the President with the prediction that in four years more the people would call him back to the presidency. In return President Wilson told a story. It concerned a Confederate soldier returning home after Lee's surrender. As he gazed at his wrecked farm, where the buildings had been burned, his empty stock pens and torn down fences the Confederate glanced down at his bare, bleeding feet and his one remaining arm, and it in a sling, and dryly remarked: "I'm glad I fought; I'm proud of the part I played; I have no regrets; but I'll be damned if I ever love another country."

A friend from Chicago surprised us the other day by relating the artistic exploits of Mildred Marshall Hayward whom Washington knew as Mrs. Chauncey P. Blair, during her visits here a few winters ago. Her still life canvasses have been exhibited at the Studio Guild in New York City.

Dr. Ruel Pardee Tolman, director of the National Gallery of Art, which is under the Smithsonian Institute, is fond of pointing out a woolly lamb in a Madonna and Child painting presented to the Gallery by the late Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson, White House chatelaine, when her uncle James Buchanan was President. When this painting was cleaned some time ago the lamb appeared in the picture.

Painting Exhibition At Artists' Guild

"PAINTINGS for the Home" is the subject of the exhibition being held at the Artists' Guild, 812 North Union boulevard, which will continue until Monday, May 16, and which is open to the public in the afternoons.

Weddings and Engagements

Wunderlich-Jacobsmeyer

MISS CATHERINE JACOBSMEYER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Jacobsmeyer, 7505 Devonshire avenue, Webster Groves, became the bride of Joseph Wunderlich, April 30, at 8:30 a. m. at St. Michael's Church in Webster Groves. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph Pruess.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a princesse style satin gown trimmed in lace, and her veil was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried gardenias and lilies of the valley. Miss Marie Jacobsmeyer, sister of the bride, and Miss Eleanor Wunderlich, sister of the bridegroom were bridesmaids. Miss Jacobsmeyer wore a peach lace gown and carried an arm bouquet of shasta daisies. Miss Wunderlich wore a dress of aquamarine and carried yellow daisies. Marilyn Mueller, niece of the bride, and flower girl, wore a yellow dress and carried a basket of shasta daisies and sweet peas. Ralph Jacobsmeyer, brother of the bride, was best man, and Bernard Peick was groomsman.

A breakfast at the home of the bride for the families, bridal party and a few friends, followed the ceremony. A reception was held in the evening after which the pair departed for a wedding trip in the South. Upon their return they will make their home in St. Louis.

Doyen-Fischer

Miss Dorothy Fischer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton J. Fischer, 3137 Iowa avenue, and Warren Doyen were married Saturday morning, April 30, at 10 o'clock in the rectory of St. Francis de Sales Church. The Rev. A. A. Ripper performed the ceremony.

The bride wore white lace with a long tulle veil. Her sister, Miss Marie, and Miss Helen Brice were bridesmaids, and her brother, Vincent Fischer, and Carl Singleton were groomsmen.

A breakfast was served the families at the Fischer home afterward. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Lee J. Kramper, 3856 Kingsland court, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, gave a reception in their honor.

They will live at 6318 Arsenal street. Mr. Doyen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Doyen of Richwoods, Mo.

Scannell-Callahan

Miss Charlotte Reta Callahan, daughter of Daniel W. Callahan, 2634 Lyle avenue, and James A. Scannell announced their engagement at a party recently. Mr. Scannell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Scannell, 7411 Commonwealth avenue. No date has been set for the wedding.

Heining-Vielhaber

Miss Pearl Alice Vielhaber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Veilhaber, 3868 Delor street, and J. Fred Heining were married at First Church of Divine Science, 8 o'clock Wednesday night. The Rev. W. Long of North St. Louis Divine Science Church officiated, assisted by the Rev. Elsie Nordman, pastor of the southside church. The church was decorated with spring flowers and ferns.

The bride, gowned in ivory lace, was attended by Mrs. Marguerite McCleery as matron of honor, and Miss Lucille Gross as bridesmaid. They wore cornflower blue net. Ralph Rayhill was best man and Frank Vielhaber, brother of the bride, was groomsman. The ushers were Louis Lazear and Alan C. Winter.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Heining, 9211 Midland boulevard, will take his bride to 1029 Eiler street to live.

Engaged to Wed

MISS LEA BELLCHAMBER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Bellchamber, 8507 South Broadway, whose engagement to Russell Rosenhauer has been announced.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Marie Irene Steinberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Steinberg, 5723 Waterman boulevard, and Joseph Chused, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Chused, 5845 DeGiverville avenue. The news was disclosed at a dinner dance at Hotel Chase, Saturday night, April 30. Miss Steinberg is a graduate of the University of Missouri and a member of Sigma Theta Pi sorority. Her fiance is a graduatae of the Washington University Law School and a member of Phi Beta Delta. The wedding will take place late in the summer.

Schmiechen-Warmbrodt

The marriage of Miss Bernice Warmbrodt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Warmbrodt, 509 Wilmington road, and the Rev. Siegfried Schmiechen, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Reinhold Schmiechen of Venedy, Ill., took place April 30, at Carondelet Evangelical Church. The Rev. Samuel Schmiechen, brother of the bridegroom, performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Mildred Horstman as maid of honor, and Kurt Schmiechen, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. A reception was given at the bride's home, and afterward the pair left for Colby, Wis., where they will live.

Birthday Party for Niece.

Dr. and Mrs. George Stecker, 630 Westwood drive, entertained Thursday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at a birthday party in honor of their 9-year-old niece, Miss Betty Jane Selvaggi. The table centerpiece was an arrangement of figures representing Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, and paper napkins had printed on them children's fairy stories. The guest of honor is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Selvaggi, 1144 Backer avenue.

FASTER TRAVEL MOVES SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA CLOSER!
A TWO WEEKS VACATION and an ordinary budget are now ample for 12 DAYS ACTUALLY HERE
OCEAN: sandy beaches and foaming surf; breezes, sun-tan and happy play; surfing, deep-sea fishing, swimming, sailing to nearby pleasure isles.
COOL nights and rainless days; every outdoor sport; oranges, palms, fruits, flowers; Los Angeles County's interesting native industries.
SIX VACATIONS IN ONE
THRILLS of Hollywood's gay days and nights; celebrities of movie-making, radio, arts, literature in the nation's new fun and fashion capital.
EN ROUTE: An important part of this vacation is the interest and beauty, the wide variety of sights and scenes along the way.
There's No Need to Put This Trip Off Any Longer —Costs Here Are Low
Shorter travel time by all methods of transportation has cut the time to Southern California so drastically that even a short vacation is ample. In 2 weeks, for example, which is 16 days counting the week-ends, you can have a choice of transportation and be actually here at least 12 days. By whatever method you come, the trip itself is part of your vacation. Costs here average 22.8% under those of 20 other leading U. S. resorts.
So, if you, too, have been putting off this vacation-of-a-lifetime till "some day," why not make it this summer? Start planning now.
FREE: Automatic Trip Planner
This 80-page Official Guide—widely acclaimed by travel experts—plans your trip for you from start to finish: what to do and see, how to get here, time required, itemized costs, plus nearly 200 photographs, maps, etc. . . . . facts only this non-profit, community organization has. Coupon brings it FREE—send now.
When you arrive, our new Official Information Bureau at 505 West Sixth Street, Los Angeles, will give you expert help in getting maximum enjoyment from your stay. Be sure to take advantage of this FREE service.

SUMMER ABROAD ONE OF GAY FESTIVALS

Every Country in Europe Is Presenting Spectacles Both Medieval and Modern.

Two hundred and seventy-four voyages will start from Atlantic ports for Europe between May 15 and August 15. While many travelers are leaving now for spring events such as the Eucharistic Congress on May 23, most trans-Atlantic tourists go to Europe for the months of June, July and August.

In every country in Europe there are things to see: In Glasgow it is the Empire Exhibition; in Rome the Caesar Augustus Exhibition and at Oslo, Norway, the Handicrafts and Industrial Exhibition. The English Derby on June 1st, the Wagner Festival at Bayreuth beginning July 24, the Salzburg Festival Plays opening July 23, will attract many visitors, but there are other minor events which cannot be duplicated anywhere else in the world.

Folk Dance Fete.

You will never forget the Folk Dance Fete at Bampton near Oxford if you see it this year on June 6. If you will not be in England till July see the Tynwald open-air Parliament on the Isle of Man, on July 5: one of the strangest and oldest legislative assemblies in the world. Or in August, see the fahouse horse show at Dublin on the 2nd. When you fly or steam across the Channel to France, see some of the ancient Pardons in Brittany, like the Pardon of the Birds at Quimperle on June 6, or the Pardon of the Horses at Eloie near Sizam three days later. If you can be at Biarritz on July 4, you can join in the Frenchman's celebration of our Independence Day. Over the Rhine into Germany you will find on June 4 the pageant at Rothenberg-on-Tauber: performance by the people of the historical plays "Der Meistertrunk," and "The Shepherd's Dance." It has been held every year for centuries and is as colorful as the Passion Play at Oberammergau. If you are interested in modern education, be at Berlin an July 24, where for a week will be held an international convention on vocational education. If you can be in Dusseldorf in the middle of August you will see the grandeur with which Germans will celebrate the 650th anniversary of that city.

Poland is just across the corridor from Germany and easy to reach, so that you can be there for Corpus Christi Day, June 16, and see the gorgeous costumes at the festival at Lowicz. On Assumption Day, Aug. 15, you can see at Czestochowa, the annual pardon, when as many as 300,000 pilgrims in costume come from mountain villages for one of the most colorful ceremonies in Europe.

At Seckau in Austria from July 15 till September there are being given this year open-air performances of "Everyman" and on the 17th at Thiersee, the Tyrol Passion Plays will open for six weeks. This unusual medieval attraction is not advertised as much as others.

In Italy the calendar is full of attractions. Outstanding this year as every year for centuries past is the Palio Horse Race at Siena on July 2 and Aug. 16. Admirers of St. Francis can go up to Assisi on July 2 for the annual festival, while those who like a noisy celebration may go to Palermo in Sicily for the Days of St. Rosalia, when races, processions and fireworks will keep everyone excited. At Arezzo on Aug. 7 will be held the Tournament of the Saracens, which may also be seen on June 15 by those who go to Italy first on their European trip.

League of Norsemen.

Even if you have no Norse blood in your veins you will want to be present at the "League of the Norsemen" in Oslo on June 20. Denmark has a fine historical pageant at Viborg on June 12, and on the 17th will hold its great agricultural exhibiiton at Copenhagen, celebrating the 150th anniversary of the independence of peasant farmers. On July 4, at Denmark's Rebild Park, is found probably the greatest American Independence day celebration in Europe. Again this year, Sweden will put on its medieval musical plays at Visby in the island of Gotland. These plays run on various dates, from July to September.

Holland and Belgium continue to match their larger neighbors with pageants colorful and ancient. The Grand Fete of the Royal Guild of Ancient Arquebusiers at Vise on June 26, and the Benediction of the Sea at Ostend on July 3 are outstanding, while Holland offers a whole summer of Kermiss fetes, jolly and quaint. You will see one at Roermond June 12; at Venlo on the 19th and at Wormerveer on July 17, while on the last day of August the whole country celebrates the birthday of the Queen. When in the low countries, don't miss a chance to go to Luxemburg, the Grand Duchy, for at Echternach on June 7 occurs the strangest dance in Europe, the Dancing Procession of St. Willobrod, with 30,000 spectators on the sidewalk.

SPRING HORSE SHOW OPENS AT ATLANTIC CITY

The spring Horse Show at Atlantic City will open in the convention hall on Tuesday, May 10, and continues through Saturday. The hall has been decorated to simulate a hunt course on an estate with a long straightaway for roadsters.

This class promises to be most interesting, for the track has banked turns which permit top speed for the horses and light bikes. Hunters and jumpers have also been entered in the show. A total of $20,000 in cash awards and trophies will go to the winners of the 114 classes which have already some 1200 entries.

FISHING SEASON TO OPEN IN WISCONSIN

The fishing season in Wisconsin opens officially on May 15. Fishing in Wisconsin's 7000 lakes should be excellent since the Conservation Department planted more than one billion young fish last year. This brings the total fish planting for the past six years to more than three billion young fish.

NEW SHIP FOR GERMAN LINE

Construction of a new 36,000-ton steamer for the Hamburg-American line will begin shortly, according to a cable received by John Schroeder, managing director of the line in New York. The new steamer will accommodate 1300 passengers in cabin, tourist and third class, and will have a speed of 23 knots per hour.

OPEN NEW TRAVEL BUREAU

The Kirkland De Luxe Travel Service recently has opened a new office at Stix-Baer-Fuller. L. J. Kirkland will be in charge of the bureau, which is to be open daily from 9:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m.

FISHING AND FESTIVALS TO ATTRACT MICHIGAN VISITOR

The official opening of the trout season in Michigan last week brought to light some impressive catches, according to reports received. The biggest opening day fish was a 12-pound rainbow trout caught on the Muskegon. A 10-pound trout was reported caught at Traverse City. Limit catches were not many. Most of them were made on worms.

The Michigan calendar for the month of May includes Blossom Festival at St. Joseph and Benton Harbor from the seventh to the fifteenth. The Blossom Queen will dedicate the opening of the Blue and Gray Trail, Highway 33.

lovely color for your Gray Hair
Similar to its Former Original Natural Shade
24 years without injury to a single user
If you have gray hair, simply wet it with Canute Water and allow to dry. In from 1 to 3 applications, (depending on shade), it will be completely re-colored. All in one day, if you wish. After that, a single treatment, only once a month, will keep it that way. You may then curl, wave or set your hair — or get a permanent — if you like. The color remains permanent against sun, air, salt-water, or shampooing. Canute Water is pure, colorless and crystal-clear. It leaves the hair clean and natural to the touch. Even you, yourself, will be unable to distinguish the re-colored hair from your natural. It will solve your problem so completely, that you will be astonished.
To the best of our knowledge, Canute Water is the only hair coloring preparation proven perfectly harmless by a noted Scientist in one of America's greatest Universities.

DEPARTMENT STORE SALES OFF 6 PCT. FROM LAST APRIL

Decline for Entire Federal Reserve District, Including St. Louis, 7 Pct.

Dollar value of department store sales in St. Louis for the four weeks ended April 30 was 6.5 per cent less than the value in the corresponding four weeks last year, the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank reported yesterday.

For eight cities in this Federal Reserve district, including St. Louis, the decline amounted to 7.3 per cent.

In the week ended April 30 sales in St. Louis were 2.6 per cent greater than those in the preceding week but 5.3 per cent less than those in the like week last year. In the eight cities the week's sales increased 7.4 per cent over those for the preceding week but fell 8.1 per cent below those in the comparative week of 1937.

LECTURE ON MUNICIPAL OPERA

Mrs. Samuel Scott of New York to Address Playhouse Club.

Mrs. Samuel Scott of New York, lecturer on drama and opera, will give an illustrated talk on the 1938 St. Louis Municipal Opera on May 22 at a meeting of members and guests of the St. Louis University Playhouse Club in the College of Arts and Sciences.

She will attend the club's opening performance of "The Mad Hopes" on the evening of May 16 at the university's auditorium. A performance will be given also the following evening.

Jewish Evangelist's Subject.

Dr. Nathan Cohen Beskin, Jewish minister who is conducting a series of evangelistic services at the Lighthouse Free Methodist Church, Tower Grove and Norfolk avenues, will preach at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon on "The Return of the Jews and the End of the World."

Address on "Germany Today."

The Y. W. C. A. Business Girls' Forum will meet at the Y. W. C. A., 1411 Locust street, Thursday noon. Walter Hoops, a former German citizen, will speak on "Germany Today."

SEA SCOUTS TO START BOAT RACES TODAY

Rules for St. Louis Council's Annual Camporee Announced by Col. H. D. McBride.

Scout troops participating in the 1938 Boy Scout camporee will be required to demonstrate their camping ability under all weather conditions which arise, Col. H. D. McBride, camporee chairman, announced yesterday. The encampment, sponsored annually by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, will be held May 20-22 at Tilles Park, Lay and Litzinger roads, St. Louis County.

Ratings of troops will be based on administration, campcraft, commissary and program. Participation streamers will be presented to each troop enrolled in the camporee, and units meeting certain minimum standards will receive streamer awards as "approved" campers. However, troops rated as superior will be awarded "outstanding" camper streamers.

Seven assistant district campmasters, who will be in charge of program details, have been appointed to assist Col. McBride. They are Harry C. Noe, Roy Birkhead, J. V. Allison, W. W. Locke, A. W. Lantz, John T. Heard and Edward Cushing.

Assistant district campmasters in charge of scoring have also been selected. They include J. C. Larkin, Clyde Connell Sr., J. C. Vincel, B. H. Burcell, Max Pfabe, H. G. Phillips, R. N. Judah and A. Brust.

Sea Scout activities bill be demonstrated at a show sponsored by the crew of the Polaris at the Coliseum, Sunday, May 22, from 2 p. m. to 11 p. m. The Polaris, sponsored by the Men's Club of St. Michael and St. eGorge's Church, was named National Flag Ship of the United States and Territories by President Roosevelt June 19, 1937.

The spring racing season of the St. Louis Sea Scout division will be launched today, beginning at 2 p. m. at Creve Coeur Lake. More than 150 Sea Scouts, representing 12 ships, will participate.

The program features point races races for single and double gigs, a dinghy race, and two sailing events for the X-boats. The Southern Cross, under Skipper Phil Finger, will be in charge of duty crew work.

TILLES PARK ALMOST READY AFTER SIX YEARS

59-Acre Tract at Litzsinger and Lay Roads Given to City by C. A. Tilles for Children's Use.

DEVELOPED BY W P A IN 2 1-2 YEARS' WORK

Underbrush Cleared, Roads, Shelter House and Fireplaces Built—Total Cost $280,000.

After 3½ years of delay and 2½ years of work by the W P A, at a cost so far of $280,341, development of Tilles Park, a gift to the City of St. Louis, is almost completed. The park, covering 59 acres and attractively wooded, is at Litzsinger and Lay roads, Ladue.

C. A. Tilles, who made money years ago in racetrack and other enterprises and in real estate investment, gave the park to the city, particularly for the use of children, in 1932. He provided that the city would receive, after his death, an additional 7.47 acres on the Lay road side, where he makes his home.

Preliminary development plans were made by the Park Division before the city administration changed from Mayor Victor J. Miller to Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann in the spring of 1933. They were not completed until the spring of 1935. The W P A moved in Nov. 8, 1935. Its workers, the majority of whom were Negroes, came chiefly from the city. The average number was 261 the first year but has declined to 75 in the last year.

Two Months' More Work.

Under W P A rules work has gone on only 12 to 14 days a month, for a single eight-hour shift. The W P A has made two allotments aggregating $248,483, for labor, and the city has provided $31,858 from a 1923 park bond item for materials. Present work will require six weeks to two months to complete, a Post-Dispatch reporter was told yesterday by E. F. H. Johnson, W P A superintendent in charge.

Director of Public Welfare Joseph M. Darst said the park would not be opened to the public until about Aug. 1. He complained of the lack of maintenance funds for this park.

The public has been barred from the park to avoid accidents during construction. However, the Boy Scouts held an annual encampment there last spring and will return May 20-22. There were a few picnics of city employes and churches by permit last year.

Johnson, who took charge a few weeks after work started, recalled how the site looked at the beginning, with evidence of personal enthusiasm for the job in his remarks. The grounds were heavily wooded and overgrown with thick, tangled brush, poison ivy and other vines. There were many sinkholes—depressions common in parts of St. Louis County—and some were dangerous. Ponds were infested by mosquitoes. Open drains carried sewage into the place. Workers caught a fox in the thicket in the early days and encountered many snakes.

In the ensuing transformation, the only work left on the present program consists of finishing touches on a cottage and garage for the park keeper, completion of four tennis courts, installation of road light standards and a general clean-up. No provision has been made for some additional seeding, grading and construction of athletic fields and trails which might be desirable.

Native Stone Buildings.

All permanent structures are of rough native stone, mostly obtained from a nearby W P A quarry. They are simple and attractive. Roofs are of dark slate, except for the cottage and garage, where red tile is used. The only entrances are two adjacent gates near the Lay-Litzsinger corner, one on either road. Each is 101 feet wide, and each required 110 tons of rock. Stone trimming, cut by hand on the site, came from the foundation of an old fence at Hyde Park. There is a six-foot steel and wire fence enclosing the park, 6200 feet long.

A count has shown 2209 trees of the following varieties: Oak, elm, wild cherry, hackberry, wild plum, sassafras, hickory, ash, willow and walnut, also small apple and pear orchards. The majority are large oaks, some of majestic appearance. All the trees have been trimmed, a little tree surgery has been done and diseased growth and stumps removed, along with the superfluous underbrush and poisonous vines. Planting has included 197 evergreens and 526 shrubs; 30 acres have been seeded with a mixture of bluegrass, Canadian rye and other grasses, and there has been some sodding.

Circling through the park is about a mile of gravel-coated bituminous macadam driveway on a heavy rock base, with stone and precast concrete curbs. Beside it are six parking places for cars. On a knoll near the center is a 34 by 83 foot shelter house, open on the long sides and with big fireplaces in the stone walls at the east and west ends. Near the entrances is a 34 by 81 foot wading pool, with maximum depth of two and one-half feet, equipped with floodlights for night. Beside it is a locker house for boys and girls.

10 Camp Fireplaces.

Scattered through the park at picturesque points are 10 rock camp fireplaces, each with a nearby water hydrant. Johnson has taken pride in variegating their design and that of the eight stone comfort houses. For one of the latter he sent to the Babler State Park quarry for a hard rock.

Some of the sinkholes have been filled or lined. Below several of them sizeable natural caverns were discovered. Advantage was taken of the sinkholes by turning drains from the wading pool and three septic tanks into them. A mile and one-half of sewer pipe, three miles of water main and much electric cable was laid and three drinking fountains installed. The Ladue-Deer Creek Sanitary Sewer District has just completed a sewer through the park and may in the future, depending on receipt of funds, build a branch there.

The stone base of the tennis courts has been put down and a bituminous surface soon will be spread. The courts will have a metal fence on a stone foundation. The roughest ground remaining is at the northeast corner of the park, where it has been proposed to provide baseball diamonds and horseshoe courts. A long frame building used for the W P A office and shops may be converted for use of the Boy Scouts.

Attractive residential districts have sprung up on the west and north sides of the park.

Tilles, the donor, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he regretted not having specified that development must be carried out within a year after the gift was made. He has complained to Mayor Dickmann about delay in completing the work, and has asserted that the improvements could have been carried out at a fraction of the cost.

Underwriters' Breakfast Speakers.

JEWISH WELFARE FUND DRIVE OPENS TONIGHT

Campaign to Raise $226,700 to Be Continued Until May 20.

The Jewish Welfare Fund campaign to raise $226,700 for the Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A. and 22 other philanthropic and character building agencies will be formally opened tonight at a dinner for campaign solicitors at Temple Israel House, Kingshighway and Washington boulevard.

The money sought will be used for the support of local, national and international agencies which do not participate through the Jewish federation, in United Charities funds.

Dr. Baruch Braunstein, regional director of the United Palestine Appeal, will be the principal speaker at tonight's meeting. Others will be Rabbi Julius Gordon of Temple Shaare Emeth; Irvin Bettmann, president of the Jewish Federation; Dean Isidor Loeb, campaign chairman, and Irving Edison, vice-chairman.

In the campaign 965 solicitors, divided into 30 teams of men and 22 of women, will seek contributions. The campaign will continue until May 20.

Two new campaign divisions have been organized this year. A new subscribers' division is under the direction of Edgar L. Barkhouse, and a junior division is headed by Mrs. Louis Putzel.

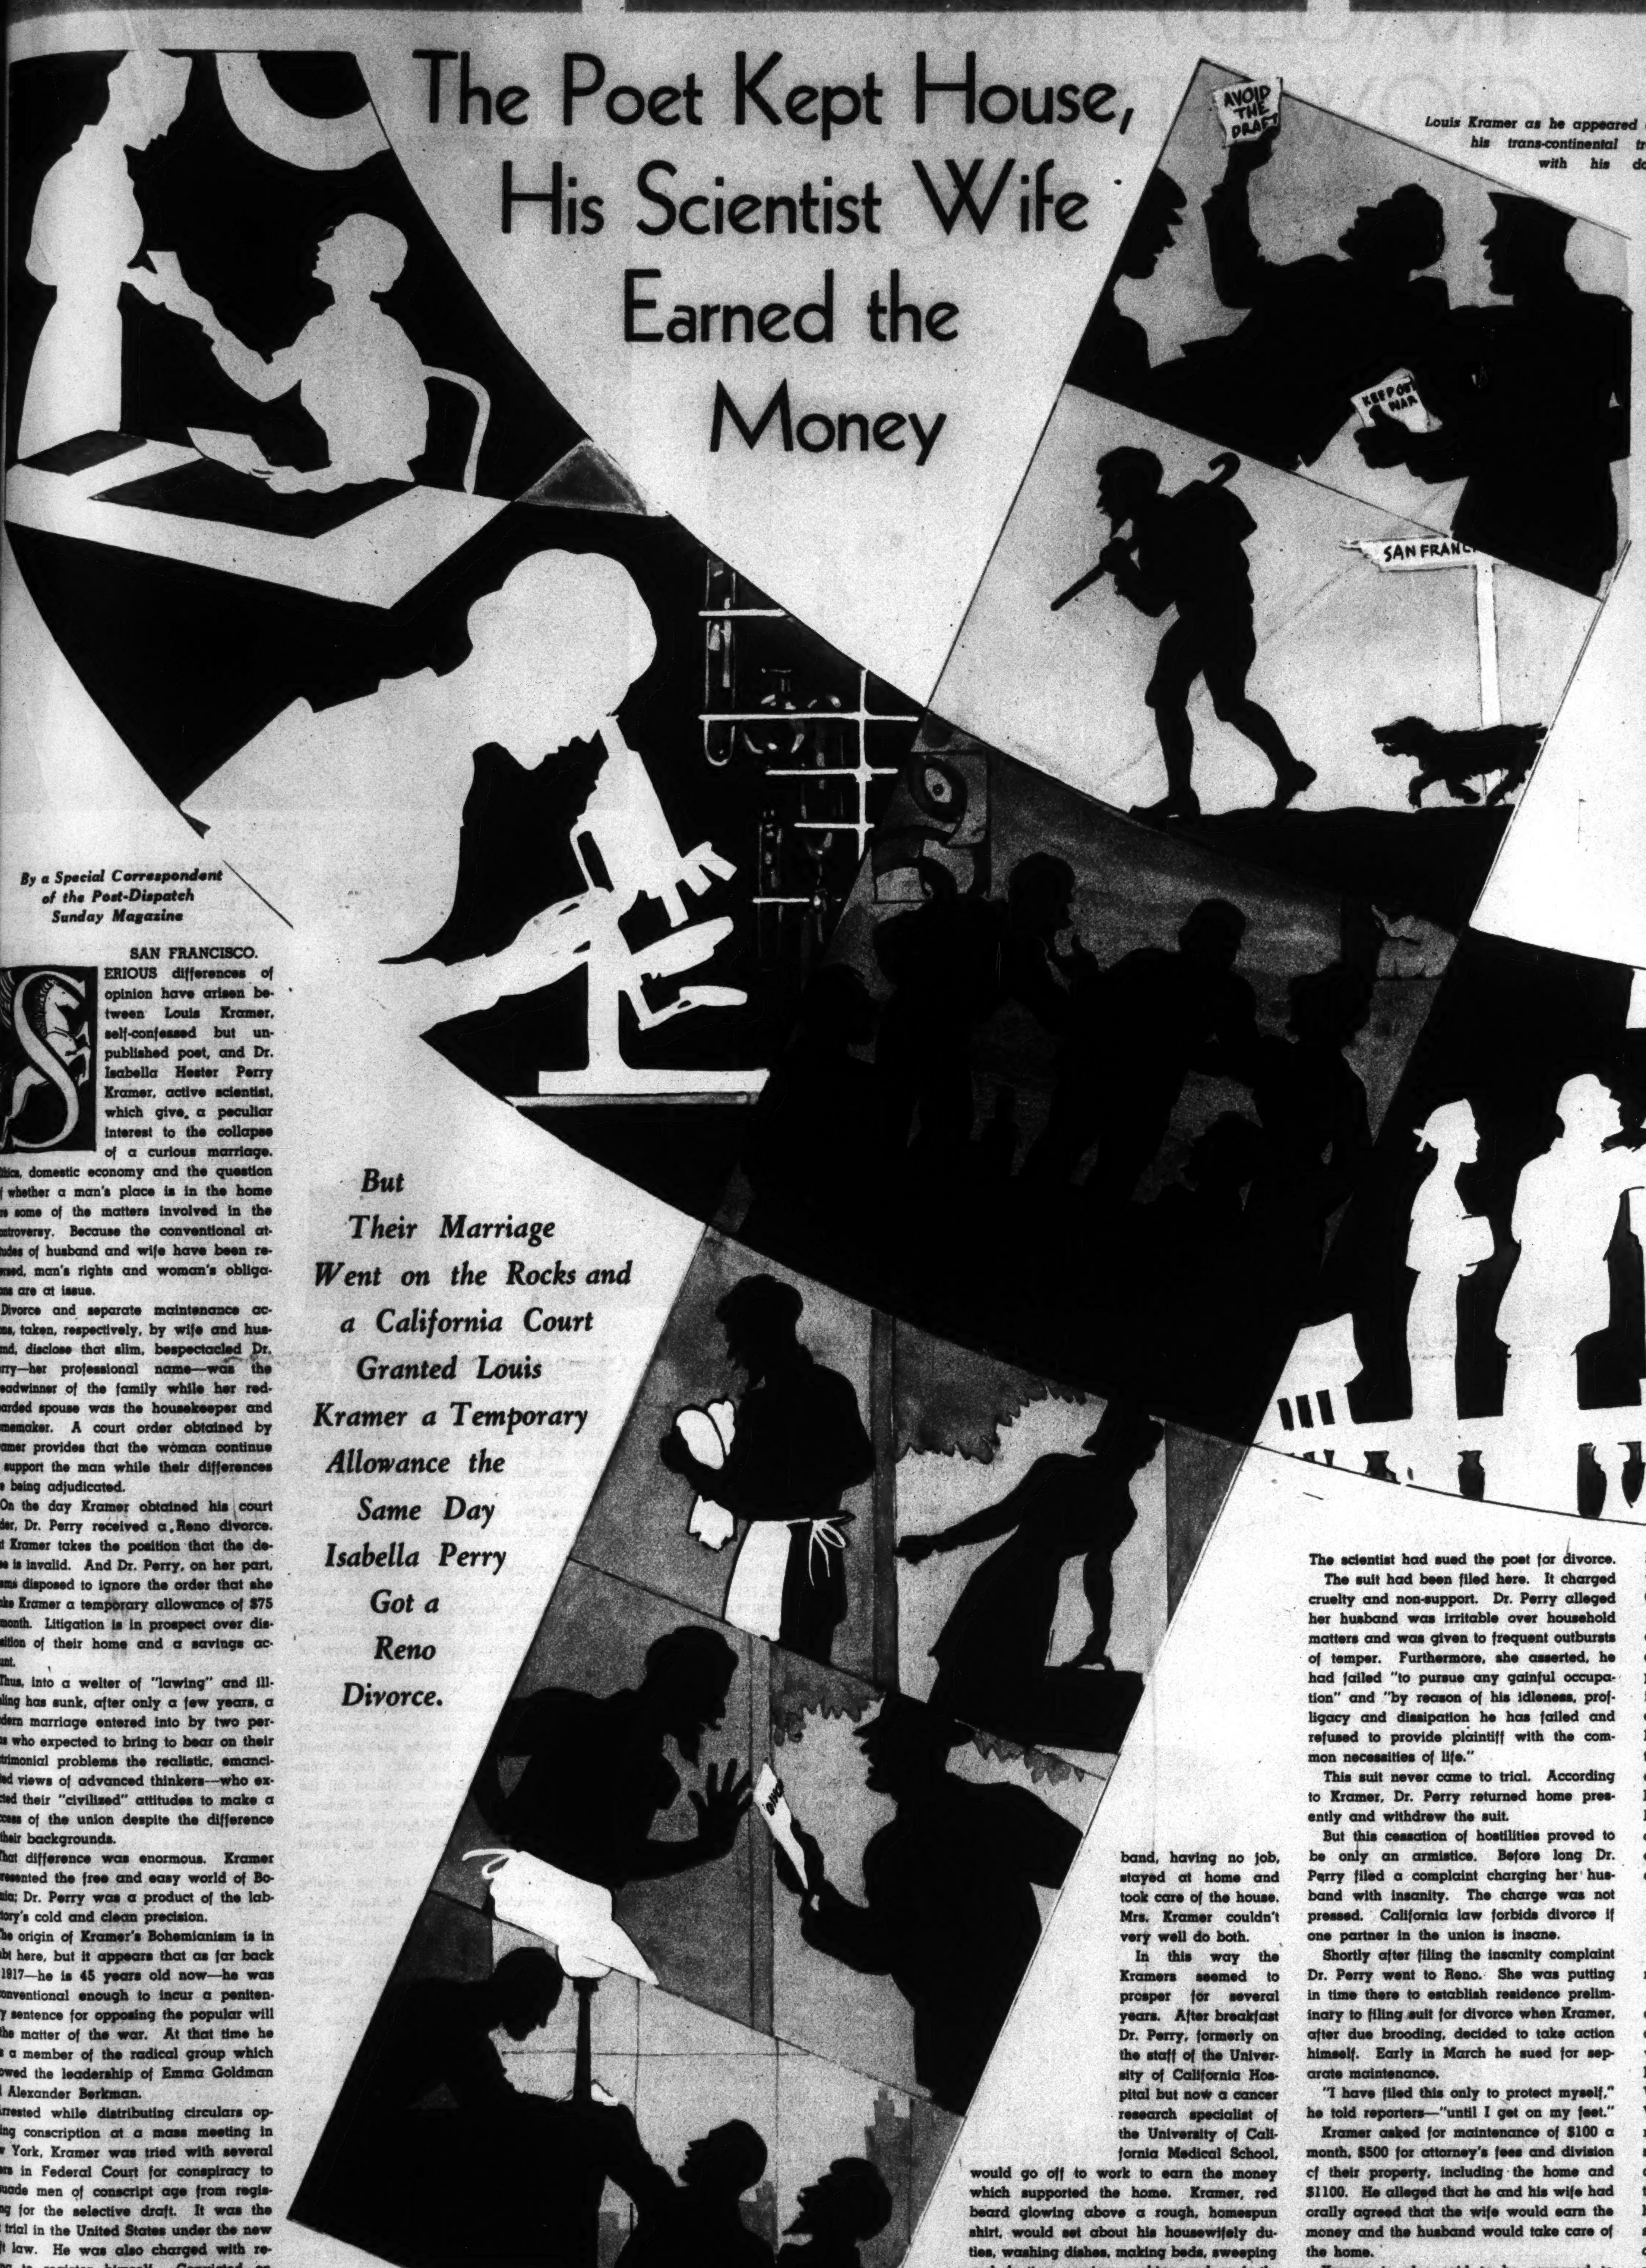
The Poet Kept House, His Scientist Wife Earned the Money



Louis Kramer as he appeared on his trans-continental trek with his dog.

But Their Marriage Went on the Rocks and a California Court Granted Louis Kramer a Temporary Allowance the Same Day Isabella Perry Got a Reno Divorce.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

SAN FRANCISCO.

SERIOUS differences of opinion have arisen between Louis Kramer, self-confessed but unpublished poet, and Dr. Isabella Hester Perry Kramer, active scientist, which give a peculiar interest to the collapse of a curious marriage. Ethics, domestic economy and the question of whether a man's place is in the home are some of the matters involved in the controversy. Because the conventional attitudes of husband and wife have been reversed, man's rights and woman's obligations are at issue.

Divorce and separate maintenance actions, taken, respectively, by wife and husband, disclose that slim, bespectacled Dr. Perry—her professional name—was the breadwinner of the family while her red-bearded spouse was the housekeeper and homemaker. A court order obtained by Kramer provides that the woman continue to support the man while their differences are being adjudicated.

On the day Kramer obtained his court order, Dr. Perry received a Reno divorce. But Kramer takes the position that the decree is invalid. And Dr. Perry, on her part, seems disposed to ignore the order that she make Kramer a temporary allowance of $75 a month. Litigation is in prospect over disposition of their home and a savings account.

Thus, into a welter of "lawing" and ill-feeling has sunk, after only a few years, a modern marriage entered into by two persons who expected to bring to bear on their matrimonial problems the realistic, emancipated views of advanced thinkers—who expected their "civilized" attitudes to make a success of the union despite the difference in their backgrounds.

That difference was enormous. Kramer represented the free and easy world of Bohemia; Dr. Perry was a product of the laboratory's cold and clean precision.

The origin of Kramer's Bohemianism is in doubt here, but it appears that as far back as 1917—he is 45 years old now—he was unconventional enough to incur a penitentiary sentence for opposing the popular will in the matter of the war. At that time he was a member of the radical group which followed the leadership of Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman.

Arrested while distributing circulars opposing conscription at a mass meeting in New York, Kramer was tried with several others in Federal Court for conspiracy to dissuade men of conscript age from registering for the selective draft. It was the first trial in the United States under the new draft law. He was also charged with refusing to register himself. Convicted on both charges, he was sentenced to three years in prison and fined $10,000—the maximum penalty.

Newspaper accounts spoke of Kramer and a co-defendant as "leaders in anarchist circles," and reported that Kramer, on the witness stand, said he was opposed to all governments. He was described as defiant. A threat that he might be deported to Russia was made after he had testified that he had been brought to this country when he was a year old. He was sent to Atlanta Penitentiary to do his time.

In the early '20s Kramer was seen a good deal in the Bohemian haunts of New York. He had decided by this time that he was a poet, but apparently was unable to make publishers believe it. Disinclined to devote his time and talents to steady, prosaic work, he lived in a rather hit-or-miss fashion—but managed to get married and divorced.

In 1928 Kramer decided to try his fortune in California. Without money, but with plenty of confidence and an Airedale dog, he set out afoot for the West. Catching rides when he could, tramping when he had to, he made his way across the continent. For food he depended mostly on his muse; when he or the dog got hungry, he would turn out a verse and peddle it to whoever would buy for whatever he could get—cash or comestibles. The muse got a good workout on the trip because the dog especially became very hungry very often.

In San Francisco Kramer soon found a place in the local Bohemia, a shifting, indefinite little universe peopled by more or less successful practitioners of the arts, exponents of various ologies and isms, champions of political, social and economic unorthodoxy and temporary fugitives from conventionality. He managed to eke out an existence, sometimes working for a while at some job, such as clerking in a hotel.

Among the people who had occasional contacts with the unconventional set due to intellectual or other interests was the slender spinster, Isabella Hester Perry, a licensed physician. And eventually she and Kramer met. They fell in love. After considerable discussion, they married. That was in 1932.

The new Mrs. Kramer, who was about the same age as her husband, had a profession which was yielding her a living, so she continued to follow it. Her husband, having no job, stayed at home and took care of the house. Mrs. Kramer couldn't very well do both.

In this way the Kramers seemed to prosper for several years. After breakfast Dr. Perry, formerly on the staff of the University of California Hospital but now a cancer research specialist of the University of California Medical School, would go off to work to earn the money which supported the home. Kramer, red beard glowing above a rough, homespun shirt, would set about his housewifely duties, washing dishes, making beds, sweeping and dusting, sewing, cooking and so forth. Having found, soon after marriage, that these tasks did not provide sufficient outlet for his energies and ambitions, he had taken up weaving, so when the regular household chores were done he would apply himself to a handloom and weave cloth which could be used for his and his wife's clothing.

But one day last January this situation was gravely disturbed. Kramer says Dr. Perry went to work as usual that morning but failed to return for dinner in the evening. He had the meal ready at the customary time, he relates, and, after waiting a while, put the things back on the stove to keep them warm. Well, she didn't come and she didn't come, and Kramer got pretty indignant. After all this slaving over a hot stove, you would think, etc., etc. Then, as Kramer tells it, he began to grow uneasy—automobile accident—a holdup—an abduction? At last the doorbell rang. Hurriedly answering it, Kramer was confronted, not by his wife, but by a process server. The scientist had sued the poet for divorce.

The suit had been filed here. It charged cruelty and non-support. Dr. Perry alleged her husband was irritable over household matters and was given to frequent outbursts of temper. Furthermore, she asserted, he had failed "to pursue any gainful occupation" and "by reason of his idleness, profligacy and dissipation he has failed and refused to provide plaintiff with the common necessities of life."

This suit never came to trial. According to Kramer, Dr. Perry returned home presently and withdrew the suit.

But this cessation of hostilities proved to be only an armistice. Before long Dr. Perry filed a complaint charging her husband with insanity. The charge was not pressed. California law forbids divorce if one partner in the union is insane.

Shortly after filing the insanity complaint Dr. Perry went to Reno. She was putting in time there to establish residence preliminary to filing suit for divorce when Kramer, after due brooding, decided to take action himself. Early in March he sued for separate maintenance.

"I have filed this only to protect myself," he told reporters—"until I get on my feet."

Kramer asked for maintenance of $100 a month, $500 for attorney's fees and division of their property, including the home and $1100. He alleged that he and his wife had orally agreed that the wife would earn the money and the husband would take care of the home.

Kramer is also said to be prepared to support his contention by citing a "homestead declaration" which Dr. Perry filed in 1934, claiming for the pair a homestead right in their San Francisco abode. In this declaration she was identified as "the head of a family"—herself and Kramer.

DR. PERRY'S attitude was indicated by allegations of non-support and cruelty in her Reno divorce action and her remark there that his statement that she had made a prenuptial agreement to support him represented "wishful thinking" on his part. In a brief interview she also said that domestic trouble had interrupted her research work.

That the romance had turned quite sour as far as she was concerned was indicated by her description of Kramer as "a weaver of fabrics and a poet who never sold any poetry." Kramer resented that. The part about being a weaver was all right, for he is proud of being a good weaver; but the crack about his poetry steamed him up a bit—after all, there were those exchanges of verse for food and things on his trip to California.

Dr. Perry's Reno suit was filed two days after Kramer began his action here for separate maintenance. Kramer countered promptly with an amended petition charging that the Reno suit was "a fraud to escape California jurisdiction" and to keep him from contesting it since he lacked funds to go to Reno. Kramer also had a receiver appointed for the home, alleging his wife had shifted title to a brother in North Carolina. He expressed concern for the safety of his musical library and loom in the house as well as fear that he would be thrown out in the cold.

UNDER the protection of the receivership he remained in the house with doors shut against reporters, photographers, process servers and in-laws.

On April 13, Kramer, in San Francisco, obtained his order in Superior Court for $75 a month temporary allowance from his wife; the same day a Judge in Reno gave Dr. Perry a private hearing and a divorce. Whereupon Kramer's attorney, Russell C. Westover Jr., pronounced the Reno decree no good, and a lawyer for her said the same of the maintenance order. A week after the judgment Dr. Perry had not made the stipulated payment to Kramer, as she had not been served. Kramer's lawyer has said he will oppose dissolution of the receivership until Dr. Perry complies with the maintenance order.

When Dr. Perry got around to filing an answer to his suit, she alleged the poet was abusive, slapped and struck her with his hands and with a heavy stick, sometimes refused to let her use the kitchen telephone and radio and dragged her out of her car and back into the house when she started for work one day in January, 1936.

She charged when she was brought home from a hospital where she had undergone an operation she found the house in a cold and dirty condition and her bed unmade. She said that once when she was ill he forced her to go out in the yard when it was raining and cut chives to season a salad, and that on another similar occasion he forced her to get up and go out to tie up a shrub in the garden—whereas she had been, she asserted, a true and dutiful wife.

According to Westover, California law makes no distinction between the sexes in the allowance of alimony, but Poet Kramer is the second man in the State to get a court order for support from a wife.

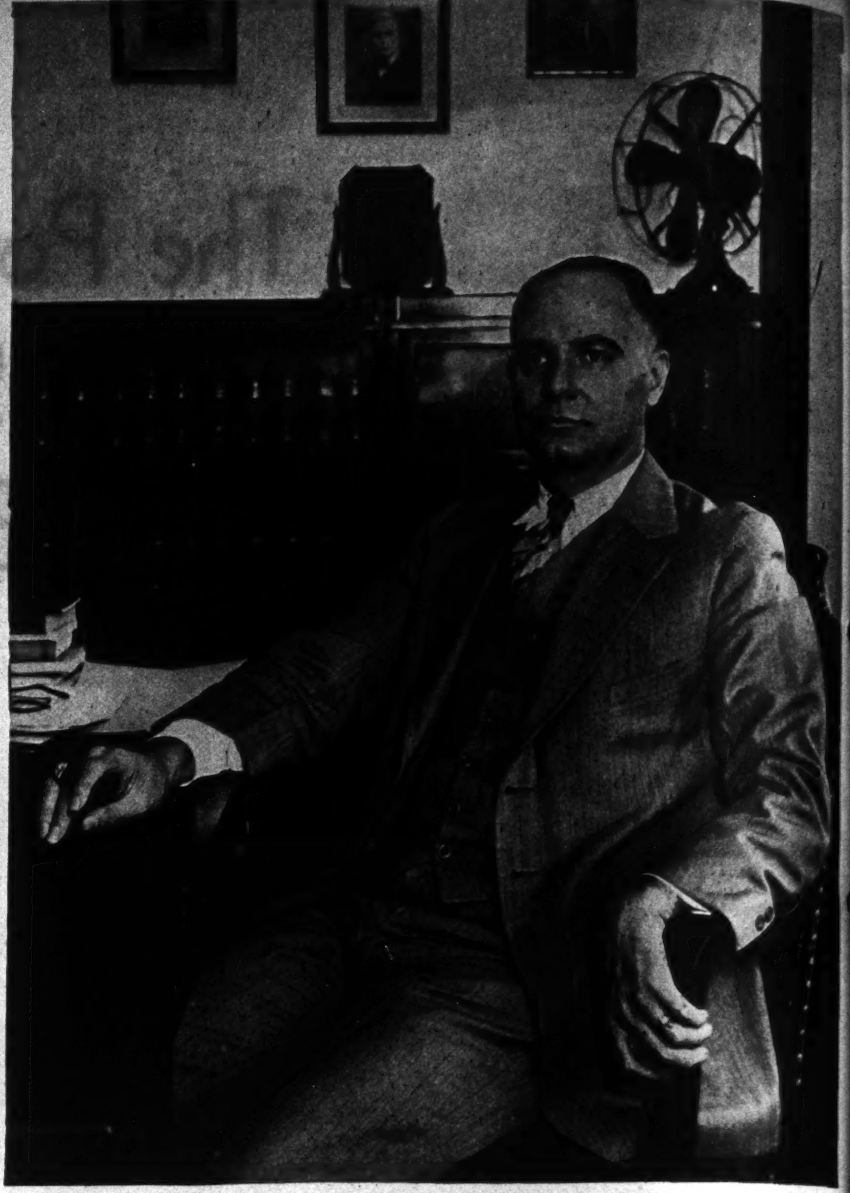
TRAGEDY FIRST CROWDED his LIFE— then TOOK IT

Henry Nowlin.



Claude Nowlin.

Claude Nowlin Spent Years on the Trail of His Son's Murderers and Finally Was Slain by His Wife Who Claims She Shot Him in Self-Defense.

Mrs. Olga Nowlin.

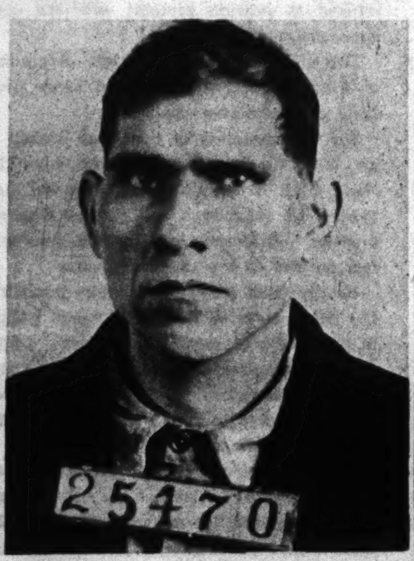
OKLAHOMA CITY.

SUCCESS far above that of the average man was the lot of Claude Nowlin in 1922 when, at the age of 41, he was general counsel of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company with headquarters in St. Louis. Those who knew him best said that he was a kindly man whose only weakness was a little too much liking for liquor on rare occasions. Calm, deliberate and sure of himself, he was a crack trial lawyer. His nose was aggressive, his mouth firm, his eyes deeply intent when he faced a jury. He was a fighter.

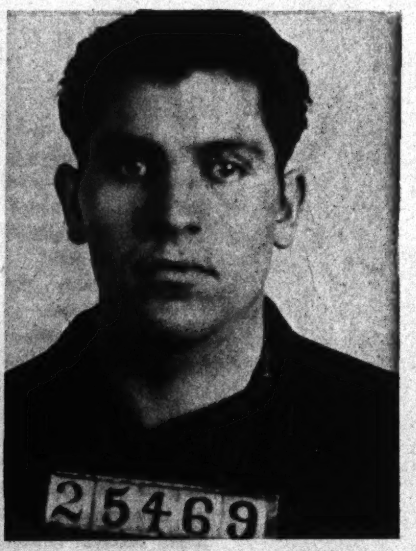
When he went to St. Louis in 1921, he sent his son, Henry, or "H. M." as he fondly called him, to Missouri Military Academy at Mexico, Missouri. This boy, the elder of two, was the apple of his eye. Not everything had gone smoothly in Nowlin's life; he and the boys' mother had been divorced. The visits he had with Henry, who was 16 when he entered the academy, gave him more pleasure than anything in life. Those who knew the father and son said they had a fine affection for each other. It was the murder of this son, a little more than a year after Nowlin moved to St. Louis, that cast a great shadow on Nowlin's life. That shadow was dispelled on April 18 when his second wife shot and killed him in his home here.

Nowlin, in the years just before his death, had become addicted to drink. According to the statement that his widow made to police, she had brought him home from a beer tavern, he had rebuked her and then had slapped her face.

But in the minds of Nowlin's friends there is no doubt but that this tragedy had its inception in Henry's murder. That tragedy changed the whole course of his life, causing him to devote several years and a small fortune to running down three of the four men responsible for the boy's death.



Carl Delbono.



Frank Delbono.

Henry's mother had married J. W. Holman, an Oklahoma oil producer living at Tulsa. On the morning of August 29, 1922, Holman left Tulsa by automobile to attend to some business in Missouri. Young Nowlin, visiting there, wanted to see his father again before returning to school and he went along. Two cars started out. Henry was driving a Hudson in which were Mr. and Mrs. Holman and Holman's daughter, Merywill. Following them were Holman's business associate, W. K. Sweeney, and Henry's brother, Robert, 12 years old.

On the way young Nowlin talked of the fun he would have in surprising his father by walking into his office with a casual "Hello, Dad." Everything went nicely until shortly after 8 o'clock that evening when the two automobiles were about 10 miles south of Nevada, Missouri, and a mile or so north of Moundsville. Then a car with blinding headlights came careening toward young Nowlin's machine. It crowded his car off the road and partly into a ditch. The other car stopped abruptly and the occupants yelled curses in broken English. The car then started off just as Sweeney and Robert Nowlin came up. Sweeney grabbed a shotgun, which he had been using to shoot rabbits along the way, and fired in the direction of the departing machine.

Sweeney said later that the car was out of range and that he had fired high with no expectation of hitting it. But some of the shot struck one of the occupants of the car, Joe Delbono, a Sicilian miner, two or three of the spent pellets drawing blood from his chin. The other men in the car were Sam and Carl Delbono, brothers of Joe and also miners, and Henry Dazey, all of Moundsville. Sam was the driver.

Meanwhile, a passing car had taken [illegible] Holman, Merywill Holman and Robert to a farmhouse, and Holman and Sweeney had gone in their car for assistance while Henry kept watch over the ditched Hudson.

Adam Roth, a farmer who lived near the scene of the accident, saw a car draw up to the Hudson and stop. Then, in the still summer air, he heard a voice, in broken English, say: "We come back to kill you." Defiantly, Henry answered, "Oh no, you won't kill me." Several shots followed with such rapidity that they must have come from two weapons. There was a brief moment of silence and the car sped away.

Holman and Sweeney came back presently and Roth hailed them, reporting what he had heard. They found Henry dead, sprawled by the side of the Hudson. There were two bullet holes in his head and one in his chest. Powder burns showed that the shots had been fired at close range. A telephone call was made to the Sheriff and then Holman hurried to the farmhouse where Mrs. Holman and the rest of the party were staying.

Mrs. Holman, distracted with grief, finally managed to call Henry's father at 1 a. m. and tell him what had happened. A few minutes later and he was in his car, on his way from St. Louis to Nevada where the boy's body had been taken. Rain set in. The car mired down before the father was halfway to Nevada. He finished the trip by train.

Evidence at the inquest pointed to the Delbonos. After the Coroner's jury found "first degree murder," Nowlin vowed he would devote his life to avenging the murder of his son. He was determined to see that the four Delbonos were punished. Two of them, Sam and Joe, had disappeared, but Frank and Carl were found and brought to trial, seven months after the killing. They tried to clear themselves by imputing the guilt to their two brothers but the jury found them guilty, sentencing Carl to 15 years and Frank 10 in the penitentiary.

Nowlin expressed bitter disappointment. He had left vengeance in the hands of the State and now he believed the State had shown mercy which he felt the two defendants did not deserve. Well, the State could carry out its idea of chastisement. There were two more Delbonos, free and untouched by what Nowlin regarded as the mild reproof the State had given their brothers.

So Nowlin settled down to a hunt for the two fugitives. The assistance of county and State officers was not enough. He engaged several private detective agencies. Always, by day or by night, he was in readiness to go wherever a clew might lead. In his position as general counsel for the Bell Company he had duties and responsibilities that he must not shirk. In order that his absences on his nation-wide search might be as short as possible, he went by plane whenever he was called.

He was up against a hard proposition. Two Sicilians were hiding someplace. Descriptions of the men were meager. Relatives had destroyed all the photographs of the two men except one poor snapshot of Joe. Nobody, except Nowlin, expected that the fugitives would be apprehended. He was grimly determined that they should be.

NOWLIN learned that Sam had been drafted during the war. He asked the Government to aid justice by supplying him with Sam's fingerprints but it took the position that the fingerprints of men who had been called for service were confidential. That was one of the many stumbling blocks that beset Nowlin's path.

The search went on. Nowlin moved to Oklahoma City. An airplane pilot remained almost constantly at his call. Aside from following definite clews he visited all the coal mining towns in Missouri and Kansas—a large assignment. His private detectives visited other coal towns over the United States.

That took two years. And no results. Nowlin wondered what to do next. Then he was informed that Joe Delbono was bootlegging in Springfield, Illinois, and his automobile had license 700,116. Sheriff Lemon of Springfield was notified. Leaving the courthouse, he came upon the car parked next to his. He set deputies on watch.

They waited patiently until a dark little man, in broadcloth suit, silk shirt and patent leather shoes, walked up to the car. His wife and child, well dressed, were with him. The deputies frisked him. He had a pistol.

Extraordinary activity in Springfield followed. The Italian consul was the leader. Many of the prisoner's countrymen in Springfield, it seemed, insisted that the prisoner was William Portieri, a coal miner, and not Joe Delbono.

Len Small was Governor of Illinois. Persons acquainted with the deference customarily shown by his administration to the Italian voting bloc predicted freely that the requisition issued by Missouri's Governor would be rejected. When Sheriff Marshall of Vernon County, Missouri, arrived with the papers, he was told he would have to make a very strong showing to get the man. Marshall had with him two persons who instantly and positively identified the prisoner as Joe Delbono. But Marshall wired Prosecuting Attorney Dan Gibson of Vernon County to bring more witnesses. Gibson hurried to Springfield with two who knew Delbono.

The extradition hearing was held in Gov. Small's office with Director of Public Welfare C. M. Jenkins sitting as judge in the Governor's place. The prisoner's friends crowded the office. One after another, the Springfield countrymen testified that the prisoner was William Portieri. But each of four Missourians testified that the prisoner was Delbono.

Jenkins, after the conclusion of the brief testimony, spoke of the sacred rights of an accused person, and declared a recess.

Later that afternoon, when the hearing was resumed, Jenkins announced that it had been up to Missouri, the demanding State, to give strict proof. It had offered some but only one of its witnesses said he had seen the defendant in Missouri on the night of the murder. And on the other hand, several of the accused's countrymen had testified that he was in Springfield all the time. The proof being thus, it was the conclusion of "the Executive" that the requisition papers could not be honored.

The accused and his friends chattered joyously and the dazed Missourians departed. The accused called later at Sheriff Lemon's office and his pistol was returned.

Nowlin, on his way by plane to the hearing, had been forced down.

A few nights later Joe Chcioppi, who had been associated with Delbono, was seriously wounded by shots from a rifle which was thrust through his window. Chcioppi refused to talk. Then James Mariotti, another Sicilian who knew a good deal about Joe Delbono and might have informed on him, was shot in the back. Before he died, Mariotti was able to say that Joe Delbono had shot him, that Joe Delbono and William Portieri were one and the same person, and that he (Mariotti) had been shot to seal his lips concerning the murder of young Nowlin.

About this time, Joe Delbono left Springfield surreptitiously, apparently figuring that there might be such a thing as abusing the use of the city as a sanctuary. Assassinations were rather commonplace in Chicago then, so Joe landed there and opened a restaurant under the name of Michael Blando. Matters went along smoothly for him until August 23, 1926, when poetic justice overtook him. He and his wife had just entered their car after an Italian picnic on South Halstead street. Two men stepped silently to the side of the car. They said nothing but they fired several shots into Joe Delbono's body. So careful was their workmanship, that Mrs. Delbono, sitting next to her husband, was not even powderburned. She talked quite readily to police.

"MY HUSBAND'S right name," she said, "was Joseph Delbono. He killed Henry Nowlin."

The execution of Joe Delbono was never explained. It may have been reprisal for the killing of Mariotti. It may have been just an incident in a bootleggers' war. What counted was the fact that Joe Delbono, believed to have been the one who fired the shots that killed young Nowlin, was dead. Claude Nowlin was satisfied.

There remained but Sam Delbono on Claude Nowlin's list. The years went on and Nowlin continued what grew to be a more and more hopeless task—now ended, unfinished, by his own violent death.

"I owe it to the memory of my son," he would murmur. But the trail grew colder and colder as the years went by. Nowlin went back to civil practice. He was kept busy. Gradually Sam Delbono faded into the background, particularly as Nowlin began to drink more heavily.

But down to the final tragedy, he had continued to hold his own in the courtroom. The thrill of the fight kept his mind from other things. His last important case was that of Mrs. Sue Britton, whom he defended on a charge of manslaughter in the shooting of her husband. But when he wasn't in the courtroom, memories came crowding back. Sometimes, there was the dark form of the fourth Delbono who had vanished into thin air. It was easy for Nowlin to persuade himself that a few stiff drinks were just what he needed . . .

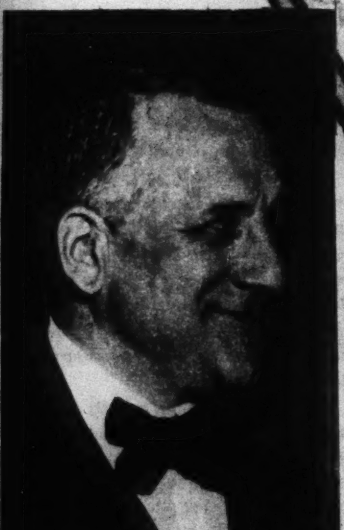
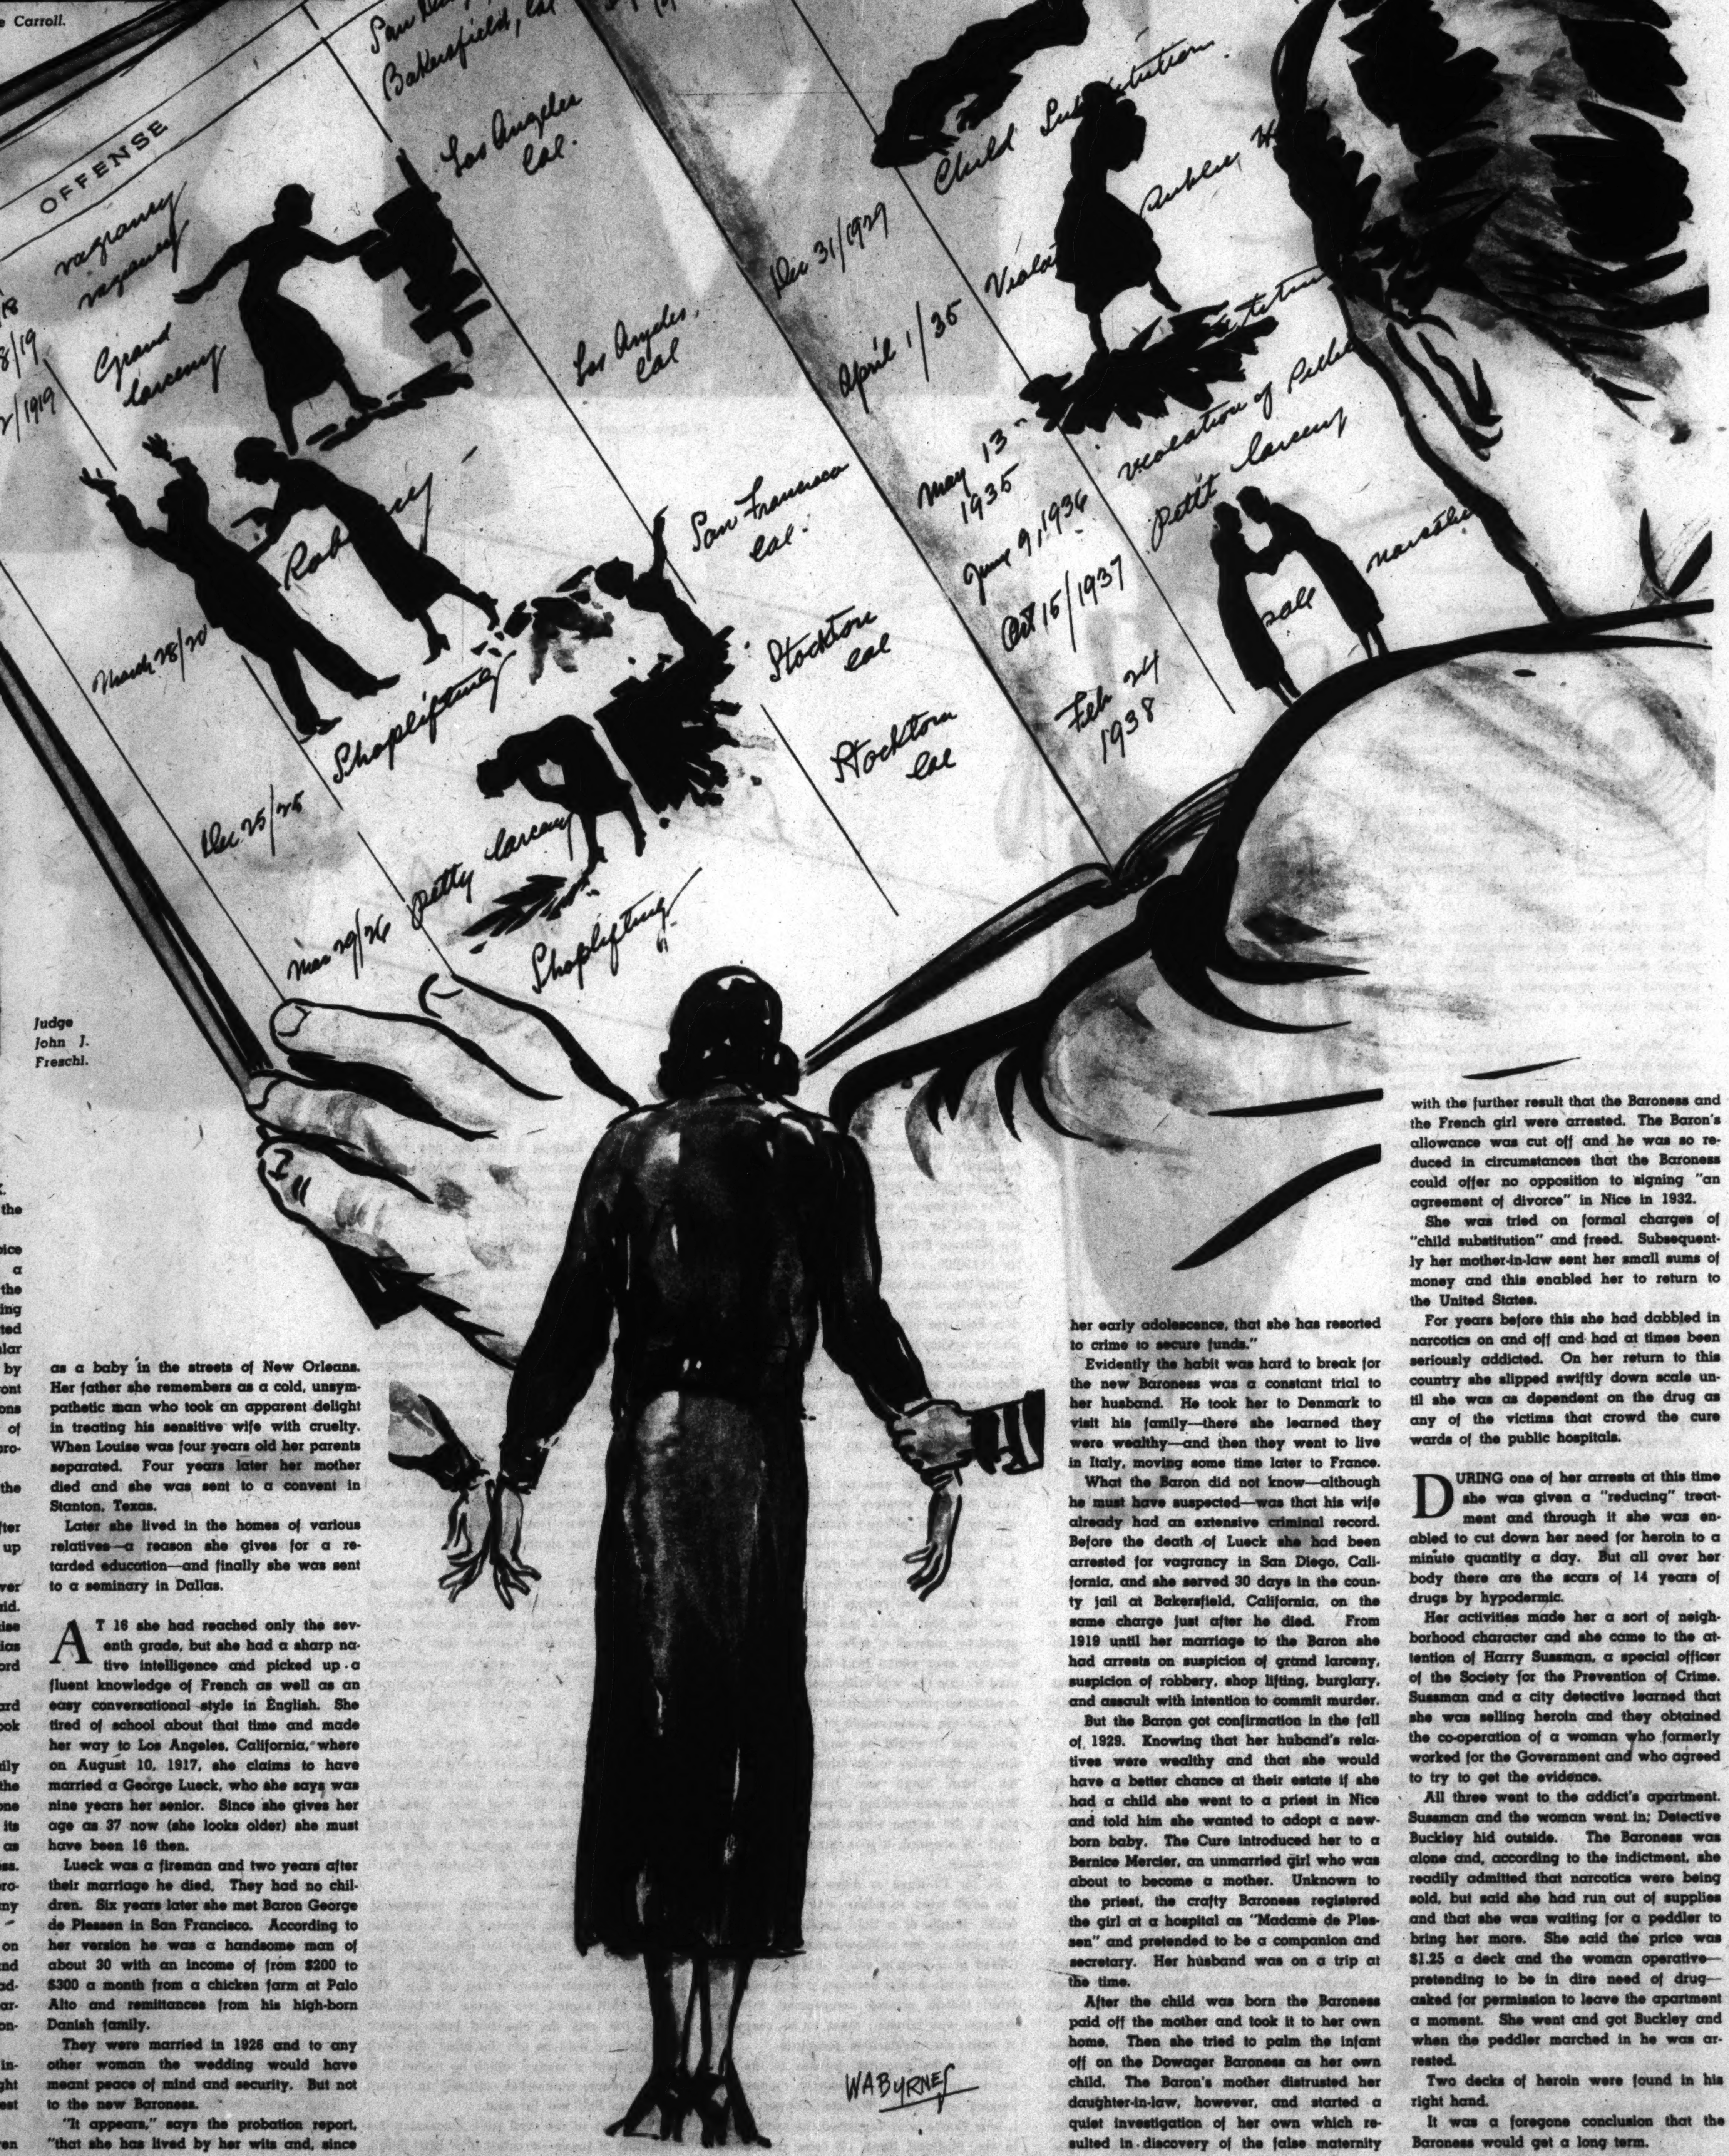
'The WORST RECORD I HAVE EVER SEEN'

And Why the Woman, Who Once Was a Baroness, Drew This Condemnation From the Experienced Jurist When He Sentenced Her to Prison for Drug Peddling.

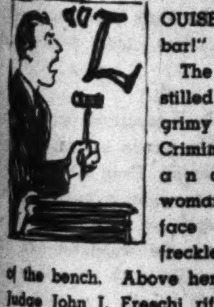
Louise Carroll.



Judge John J. Freschi.



By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine



NEW YORK.

"LOUISE PLESSEN to the bar!"

The clerk's voice stilled the hum in a grimy chamber in the Criminal Courts Building and an emaciated woman, her angular face splotched by freckles, walked in front of the bench. Above her General Sessions Judge John J. Freschi riffled the pages of the report on her life turned in by the probation department.

"I am the Baroness de Plessen," the woman mumbled.

No one paid any attention to her. After a few moments Judge Freschi looked up from the papers.

"This is the worst record I have ever seen—in all my years as a Judge," he said.

Then in stilted sentences he sent Louise Plessen alias the Baroness de Plessen alias Louise Carroll to Women's Prison in Bedford Hills for from five to 10 years.

The woman turned dully away. A guard and matron fell in on each side and took her off to jail.

A cavalcade of crime passes daily through the dreary building that houses the criminal courts in New York City, but none of the numberless women who have trod its worn floors has ever come there with as unrelieved a background as the Baroness. Irving Halpern, the veteran head of the probation department, tried hard to find any bright spots in her life—and failed.

She has been arrested for vagrancy, on suspicion of grand larceny, for robbery and for shop lifting, for burglary, for narcotic addiction and the possession and sale of narcotics, for child substitution and for conspiracy to commit a murder.

So this is not a pretty story—but it is interesting as the story of a life that might have, but never did rise above the lowest of human levels.

Louise Carroll was never pretty, not even as a baby in the streets of New Orleans. Her father she remembers as a cold, unsympathetic man who took an apparent delight in treating his sensitive wife with cruelty. When Louise was four years old her parents separated. Four years later her mother died and she was sent to a convent in Stanton, Texas.

Later she lived in the homes of various relatives—a reason she gives for a retarded education—and finally she was sent to a seminary in Dallas.

AT 16 she had reached only the seventh grade, but she had a sharp native intelligence and picked up a fluent knowledge of French as well as an easy conversational style in English. She tired of school about that time and made her way to Los Angeles, California, where on August 10, 1917, she claims to have married a George Lueck, who she says was nine years her senior. Since she gives her age as 37 now (she looks older) she must have been 16 then.

Lueck was a fireman and two years after their marriage he died. They had no children. Six years later she met Baron George de Plessen in San Francisco. According to her version he was a handsome man of about 30 with an income of from $200 to $300 a month from a chicken farm at Palo Alto and remittances from his high-born Danish family.

They were married in 1926 and to any other woman the wedding would have meant peace of mind and security. But not to the new Baroness.

"It appears," says the probation report, "that she has lived by her wits and, since her early adolescence, that she has resorted to crime to secure funds."

Evidently the habit was hard to break for the new Baroness was a constant trial to her husband. He took her to Denmark to visit his family—there she learned they were wealthy—and then they went to live in Italy, moving some time later to France.

What the Baron did not know—although he must have suspected—was that his wife already had an extensive criminal record. Before the death of Lueck she had been arrested for vagrancy in San Diego, California, and she served 30 days in the county jail at Bakersfield, California, on the same charge just after he died. From 1919 until her marriage to the Baron she had arrests on suspicion of grand larceny, suspicion of robbery, shop lifting, burglary, and assault with intention to commit murder.

But the Baron got confirmation in the fall of 1929. Knowing that her huband's relatives were wealthy and that she would have a better chance at their estate if she had a child she went to a priest in Nice and told him she wanted to adopt a newborn baby. The Cure introduced her to a Bernice Mercier, an unmarried girl who was about to become a mother. Unknown to the priest, the crafty Baroness registered the girl at a hospital as "Madame de Plessen" and pretended to be a companion and secretary. Her husband was on a trip at the time.

After the child was born the Baroness paid off the mother and took it to her own home. Then she tried to palm the infant off on the Dowager Baroness as her own child. The Baron's mother distrusted her daughter-in-law, however, and started a quiet investigation of her own which resulted in discovery of the false maternity with the further result that the Baroness and the French girl were arrested. The Baron's allowance was cut off and he was so reduced in circumstances that the Baroness could offer no opposition to signing "an agreement of divorce" in Nice in 1932.

She was tried on formal charges of "child substitution" and freed. Subsequently her mother-in-law sent her small sums of money and this enabled her to return to the United States.

For years before this she had dabbled in narcotics on and off and had at times been seriously addicted. On her return to this country she slipped swiftly down scale until she was as dependent on the drug as any of the victims that crowd the cure wards of the public hospitals.

DURING one of her arrests at this time she was given a "reducing" treatment and through it she was enabled to cut down her need for heroin to a minute quantity a day. But all over her body there are the scars of 14 years of drugs by hypodermic.

Her activities made her a sort of neighborhood character and she came to the attention of Harry Sussman, a special officer of the Society for the Prevention of Crime. Sussman and a city detective learned that she was selling heroin and they obtained the co-operation of a woman who formerly worked for the Government and who agreed to try to get the evidence.

All three went to the addict's apartment. Sussman and the woman went in; Detective Buckley hid outside. The Baroness was alone and, according to the indictment, she readily admitted that narcotics were being sold, but said she had run out of supplies and that she was waiting for a peddler to bring her more. She said the price was $1.25 a deck and the woman operative—pretending to be in dire need of drug—asked for permission to leave the apartment a moment. She went and got Buckley and when the peddler marched in he was arrested.

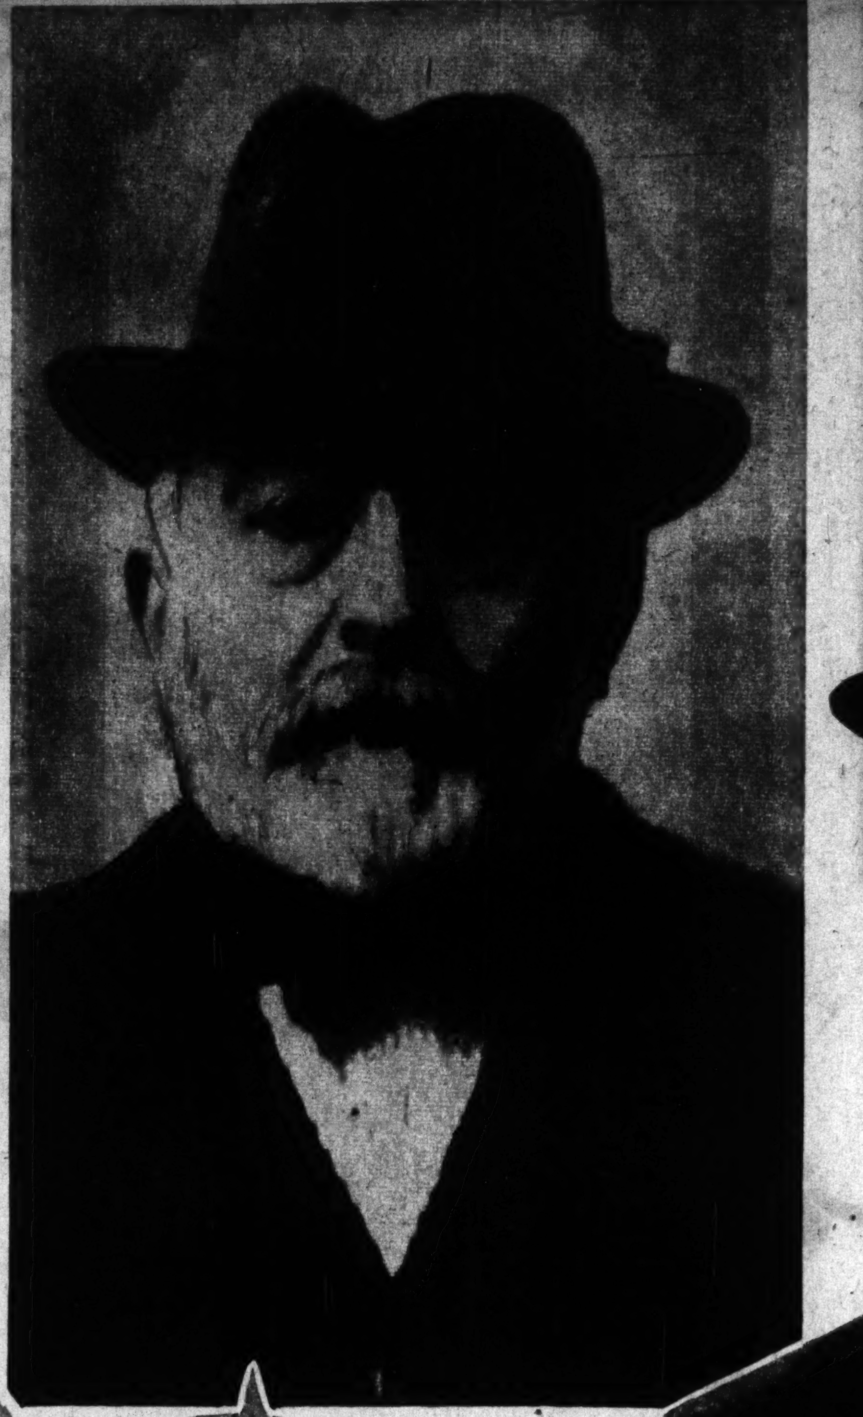
Two decks of heroin were found in his right hand.

It was a foregone conclusion that the Baroness would get a long term.

SENTENCED AGAIN at 73

The Notorious William Hobbs, Who Was One of the Principals in the Blackmailing Case of the Mysterious 'Mr. A,' Lets His Inordinate Love for Money Steer Him Back to Prison.

Mrs. Maude Robinson.



William Cooper Hobbs.

Charles Ernest Robinson.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LONDON.

OLD but not venerable, William Cooper Hobbs stood in the prisoners' dock in Old Bailey the other day and heard the Judge say: "You do not grow better as you grow older." The prisoner's white beard quivered righteously. "Oh, I try to, my lord," he protested.

The evidence favored the Judge's view. Hobbs had just been sentenced to five years' penal servitude for forgery; on a previous court appearance, 13 years before, he had received a two-year sentence for fraud.

In the last 13 years, it was apparent, Hobbs had not succeeded in curing himself of an overpowering love of money. It was this vice, stronger than his ethical sense or fear of the law, which involved him, at the dawn of the fantastic '20s, in that international scandal, the "Mr. A" blackmailing case. It was avarice again which brought him to judgment a few weeks ago for forging and uttering a will which named him as one of the beneficiaries of the late Willie Clarkson, famous London wigmaker.

Even in the shadow of prison the white-haired Hobbs' extravagant concern for his pocketbook was unabated. Just before sentence was pronounced he made a final plea to the Court, and the plea was: "Punish me if you like, but don't"—imploringly—"take my money."

Recorder Gerald Dodson was not notably moved. He ordered Hobbs to pay £500 ($2500) of the costs of the trial. Thus ingloriously and unhappily ended Hobbs' latest appearance as a public figure. It was an anticlimax. It attracted widespread attention not so much for the immediate circumstances surrounding it as because it involved a man who had once helped collect hush money from a rajah, with a resulting world-wide guessing bee as to the identity of the victim.

That celebrated case had its beginning amidst the festivities marking the first anniversary of the Armistice. On the night of November 11, 1919, a Victory Ball was given in the Albert Hall of London, and very much in attendance was Mrs. Maude Robinson, seductively costumed as a grasshopper. Also in attendance was a visitor from afar, young Hari Singh, nephew and heir of the Maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir. The Rajah, who was to become Maharajah a few years later, was making a tour of Europe following his selection as heir to his uncle's throne and his marriage to the daughter of a neighboring potentate, the Rajah of Dhrampere. His bride was not with him on his tour.

From his box in the Albert Hall, the Rajah saw Mrs. Robinson, appraised the charms generously revealed by her gala costume, and soon was nourishing a conflagration in the depths of his Oriental soul. They met, and in a short time the Hindu prince found the Englishwoman responsive to his ardor, although she was married.

Mrs. Robinson in her "grasshopper" costume.

Her husband was Charles E. Robinson, a bookmaker. Hari Singh was 24, Mrs. Robinson about 30.

The Anglo-Indian affair progressed rapidly. The Rajah and the bookmaker's wife were together in Paris and on the Riviera. He called her "Maudie."

One night in December of 1919, a man walked into a room of a Paris hotel to be greeted, it was afterward related, by these words from an agitated Mrs. Robinson: "My husband! My brute of a husband!" It was also said that she struck and scratched the intruder while Rajah Hari Singh tried to quiet her.

The public knew nothing about these sprightly doings at the time. It was not, in fact, until the autumn of 1924, when people were singing "What'll I Do?" and mad young things were trying to find the answer in as many shocking ways as possible, that the romance and its impressively pecuniary consequences were disclosed to an appreciative world.

The disclosure was brought about by a suit filed by Charles E. Robinson against the Midland Bank of London. Robinson sued for £125,000, or approximately $625,000, alleging the bank had allowed another person to withdraw this amount after it had been deposited for his account. The money was part of a total payment of £150,000 made by the Indian prince to prevent his liaison with Robinson's wife from becoming known. The bank denied liability on the ground that the money had been obtained by blackmail and that Robinson had no proper claim to it.

Interest in the ensuing trial was heightened by the mystery thrown around the identity of the alleged victim of the blackmail. He was called in court merely "Mr. A." It was not until the trial was over that "Mr. A" was officially identified as Rajah Hari Singh. Lord Justice Darling, presiding over the court, said the secrecy was imposed for reasons of state. It seems that the territory over which Hari Singh was scheduled to rule (he was enthroned in 1926) was considered rather important to Britain's system for the preservation of its Eastern empire; that it would be very helpful to Britain for the ruler to be friendly to the British. Hari Singh was friendly, therefore Britain wanted nothing to prevent his accession to the throne when the old maharajah died. A scandal, it was feared, might have this result.

So for 10 days or more people all over the earth tried to guess who "Mr. A" was while details of a bold conspiracy against the purse of the unknown notable were unfolded in a London court. His identity was finally made public because, it was reported, other Indian princes complained that the secrecy was causing them to be suspected of being the mysterious potentate.

One of the principal figures in the conspiracy proved to be an elderly, respectable-looking law clerk, William Cooper Hobbs. It was Hobbs who deposited the hush money in the Midland Bank. It was Hobbs who drew out the bulk of it the next day—and, according to testimony, split the loot with Captain James Charles Arthur, aide-de-camp to the Rajah, and Montague Noel Newton, a confessed co-conspirator.

The bank contended that the Robinsons, husband and wife, were in the plot with these three men, and that after the Rajah had paid up, the three double-crossed the others by appropriating most of the loot. The Robinsons denied having taken part in the conspiracy. Maude gave the impression she had fallen in love with the Prince; she said he was "splendid." Robinson maintained that others had blackmailed the Rajah but that the money the Indian paid was intended as a settlement on Mrs. Robinson; that it had been exacted in his name and that the money had been deposited in and withdrawn from the bank through forgeries of his signature.

ROBINSON was not the man who had burst in on the Rajah and Maude in Paris; Newton—who had once been convicted of forgery—testified that he was the intruder, and said it was by pre-arrangement with Mrs. Robinson. Newton appeared to have been the largest winner in the scheme.

He was said to have received about £40,000 of the hush money; he was accused of having taken by force from Mrs. Robinson £10,000 that she had been given by Hari Singh; he was paid £3000 by the bank to testify; and he was reported to have won at poker about £28,000 of Captain Arthur's alleged share of the loot.

Captain Arthur, incidentally, vehemently denied, after being arrested in France, that he had plotted against the Rajah. On the contrary, he said, he had guarded the Prince's interests when acting for him. The Rajah had signed two checks for £150,000 each, but only the one had been cashed; the Captain said he got the other one back by payment of money which he raised himself. French authorities refused to return Arthur to England for trial.

Testifying in the civil trial concerning his handling of funds extracted from Hari Singh, Hobbs gave an illuminating demonstration of his attitude toward money. He had said he was unable to produce certain documents in court because they were in Paris, so the Judge directed him to telephone for them to be sent to London immediately. "Telephone?" asked Hobbs, apparently shocked at the spendthrift suggestion. "Yes, telephone," said the Judge. "After all the money you've had in this case you can easily afford to telephone to France."

Hobbs also drew a reprimand from the bench when he resented the laughter of spectators at a remark which one of the lawyers made to him. "What are you laughing at, you laughing baboons?" he shouted at the crowd. "You mustn't laugh at me, you baboons."

Robinson failed in his suit against the Midland Bank. The jury decided that while there was a blackmail conspiracy against the Rajah, the Robinsons were not among the conspirators, but it could not decide whether the bank owed money to Robinson. Lord Justice Darling then ruled in favor of the bank, after hearing arguments, and assessed costs against Robinson. The Judge said: "I cannot conceive of any tribunal, the King's bench above all, allowing a person to come into court and claim part of the proceeds of a theft which took the form of making a threatened man pay for the defilement of the claimant's wife."

Just before judgment was given, Hobbs was arrested. He was about to leave England when the police seized him. In March of 1925 he was convicted of having conspired to defraud the Rajah, and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. In a plea against having to pay costs, he told the Judge that he had to support his aged father.

Others accused of having been conspirators in the "Mr. A" case were not prosecuted in the English courts. But last year the Robinsons got into trouble with the law of the United States. They were arrested in Jersey City, New Jersey, and Mrs. Robinson found it advisable to return to England after immigration authorities had charged her with overstaying her visitor's permit. Robinson was taken to Charleston, South Carolina, where he was convicted in Federal Court of swindling an elderly retired Cincinnati business man on a horse-racing scheme and was sent to Atlanta Penitentiary for eight years. The victim said Robinson posed as "Sir Mark Jenkinson," a vice-president of Vickers, Ltd., British arms maker.

HOBBS' recent departure from legality was, it has turned out, doomed from the beginning. Even if he had beaten the rap in the criminal prosecution he would have reaped no profit.

When Clarkson, the wigmaker and theatrical costumier, died in 1934 his estate was valued at £64,000 in all. Two wills were produced. One named Hobbs as an executor but not as a beneficiary. Since it named no residuary legatee, whatever money was left after bequests were paid would go to the Crown. Under the other will, Hobbs was both executor and residuary legatee. The will would give him, it appeared when it was produced, between 2000 and 3000 pounds.

But not long after Clarkson died his estate was sued by insurance companies which alleged the wigmaker had made fraudulent claims for fire damage, and the companies got judgment for 25,000 pounds and costs. This deduction left the estate insolvent—there was nothing for the residuary legatee.

So when Hobbs, 73 years old and in poor health, went into court to defend himself from a charge of forging and uttering the will designating him as residuary legatee, his hope of profit from the enterprise had gone; he could fight only to preserve his liberty—and the money he already had. He lost the fight. The jury decided the will favoring him was a forgery. Edmond O'Connor, a former solicitor who had witnessed it, was convicted with Hobbs and received a sentence of seven years.

O'Connor had practically no money to spend for his defense, and it is understood an appeal was made to Hobbs to aid him. But Hobbs, who was driven to and from court in his Rolls-Royce and was reputed to have a comfortable fortune tucked away, declined to assist his needy co-defendant.

SKETCH

NEW YORK.

WHEN the liner American Trader plowed up the bay the other day a little woman with a shock of graying hair, a ruddy complexion and a thin mouth marched up to the rail and stood looking at the skyline brilliant in the spring light. The wind straggled a few strands of vagrant hair, but she didn't bother to adjust them. She stood there for all the world like any other nice, elderly woman awed by the wonder of lower Manhattan, and only the knot of young men with paper and pencils ready made it apparent that she was more than she seemed to be.

And so it was for she was the Right Honorable Margaret Bondfield, P. C., the first and only woman ever to hold a Cabinet position in Great Britain, the first woman delegate ever to appear at a Trade Union Congress, the first woman ever to be elected to a Trade Union Executive Committee, the first woman ever to be a member of a British Government (Under-Secretary for Labor) and the first woman to attain the honor of the King's Most Honorable Privy Council (which carries the suffix P. C. for life).

Forty-six years of trade union work behind her and as many before her as her life would run. She said she was here—the thin mouth twisted humorously—on a holiday, a vacation during which she would tour the nation examining the administration of relief in this city and that, attend two conferences of social workers, take a look at the Tennessee Valley Authority, study Berea College in Kentucky.

She smiled and said that her waking day and her working day were always the same—holiday or no—although the locale might change, and so while here she will also give a series of lectures in American cities and all of this she will cram into a full and vigorous year.

This was her fifth visit, she said, and she still loves the majesty of the skyline but she wished the boat would hurry and dock so she could rush off to the Henry Street Settlement where she planned to stay a couple of days with her friend Lillian Wald and get to work on a stack of correspondence. Then there will undoubtedly be committees to attend and speeches to make although she will not have to see the delegations that call on her incessantly in London.

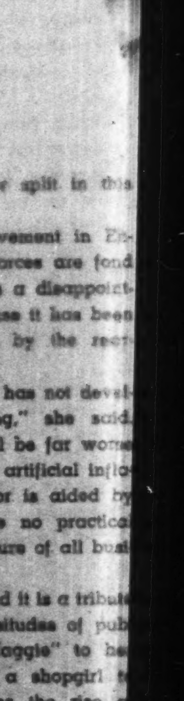
It does not take her long to adjust herself and she has always had plenty to do even since the day she was a sort of British Frances Perkins in the Ramsay MacDonald ministry (from 1929 to 1931).

"In London," she said, "I make speeches and do propaganda work for the co-operative movement, the Labor party and the trade union movement. I call myself a socialist without affixes or prefixes.

"I still support the Labor party's program, of course, and I think that if the Labor party's policy on foreign affairs had been continued from 1934 on, Europe would not be in such a state right now.

"The Fascist movement in England is a spent force. There is still freedom of speech in England. A man like Oswald Mosely, the Fascist, has to be muzzled, of course, when he threatens to march into districts where his very appearance would cause a riot—in the Jewish districts, for example—but he is allowed to speak all he wants to elsewhere so long as he observes the decencies of ordinary social behavior."

The two organisations Miss Bondfield will address are the Y. W. C. A. convention at Columbus, Ohio, and the National Council of Social Workers in Seattle, June 27. She is the official British delegate to the Y. W. C. A. conference.



The play of her agile mind is indicated by what she has mapped out for herself here—labor, housing, city management and education. She will study the city manager form of government in Cincinnati, the new educational system at Berea College, the "constructive work" of the TVA and the planned work of the Federal administration. After the tour she will make an intensive study of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organisation to learn more of the reasons for the labor split in this country.

The great business improvement in En gland which anti-Roosevelt forces are fond of holding up as a model is a disappoint ment to Miss Bondfield because it has been "artificially stimulated there by the re mament program."

"I am sorry that the boom has not devel oped out of natural trading," she said. "When a slump comes it will be far wors than if we did not have this artificial infla tion of business. When labor is aided by dead-end goods which have no practica value it is a threat to the future of all busi ness."

Margaret Bondfield is 64 and it is a tribute to her that despite the vicissitudes of public life she is still "Our Maggie" to her constituents. Her rise from a shopgirl to cabinet minister approximates the rise of labor in England for both stories are intertwined. She was born in Somerset where the natives are strong and patient, one of 11 children. She started to teach boys in a state school at 13, became a shop assistant at 14 and a couple of years later entered the trade union movement.

Then as now she was small, quick-tongued, enormously industrious, a quality more to account for her rise than subtlety or cleverness although she has both. She might be unnoticed in a crowd until she begins to speak. Her speech is clear, direct and hard-hitting and she is one of the few women who have succeeded in "bringing down the house" in so huge an auditorium as Albert Hall.

As a shop assistant Miss Bondfield had a deep personal interest in bettering the conditions of working people at a time when they were at a low ebb in England. Industrial magnates hired and fired at will and working conditions were horrible. Shop assistants were particularly unprotected by law, they were boarded like domestic servants and treated like serfs. Miss Bondfield, for instance, worked from 7:30 a. m. to 8 p. m. every day and once or twice a week until 10 p. m. or 11 p. m. She got half a day off a week. She averaged 74 hours a week and got $125 a year.

Then came the Shop Assistants' Union. Miss Bondfield became an organizer. At 23 she was on the district council of the London branch. She contributed to its journal and she studied wages, hours, working conditions and other statistics. At any time she was prepared to step to the front of a meeting or lecture platform and reel off her credo at 200 words a minute.

She extended her activities to include raising funds for decent lodging houses for working girls, and by the time she was 25 she was assistant secretary of the union. A year later she became the first woman to attend a Trade Union Congress. At that time her union had only 2000 members but with her associate, the late Mary MacArthur, she succeeded in raising that figure to 20,000 within the next ten years.

IN 1898 she and another girl, with $100 between them, visited the United States, lectured on working conditions in England and came back with more money than they started. Later with Miss MacArthur she formed the National Federation of Women's Workers and took her 50,000 members into the general workers' union of 450,000. Her colleagues sent her to Berne for an international labor conference and to another in Paris. In 1919 the government sent her as a labor member to a Labor Convention at Washington under the auspices of the League of Nations. Then she was a visiting delegate to the convention of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic City. In 1920 she was one of the labor delegates who visited Russia and her refusal to condemn—although she did not praise—brought fiery attacks from anti-Communists.

In 1923 labor gave her the greatest honor it could confer—she was made chairman of the general council of the Trade Union Council which meant that for one year she was the head of the British trade union forces. One of her notable accomplishments in this office was the settlement of the great boilermakers' strike which lasted for months, affected 70,000 men, tied up shipbuilding and cost the country $50,000,000.

A year later Ramsay MacDonald formed the first Socialist cabinet in British history and made Miss Bondfield parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Labor. This made it virtually certain that when MacDonald named his second cabinet he would include her—and he did.

As Minister of Labor Miss Bondfield found her path a thorny one. More forthright than tactful, she had never warped her convictions in the face of a tempest and she had aroused the feminists in the years gone by with frequent assertions that she thought women ought to pay considerable attention to building a home. Nor did she retract her statements on Russia one whit despite the furore they created.

As Minister of Labor she was addressed as "The Right Honorable Lady," the first time the words had been heard in the House of Commons. She ran into trouble on an unemployment insurance bill which she sponsored and which would have increased the "dole" $62,500,000. It was not so much the bill, although it did not have too great a popularity; it was the confidence of the woman minister that riled the shell-backs in Commons. She stood there with every possible ounce of information at her fingertips turning back attacks while she rapped her gold lorgnette on the dispatch box which has been hammered by parliamentary orators for generations.

She was in Canada trying to arrange for women farm immigrants when word of the MacDonald Cabinet crisis reached her. She raced across Canada that night, caught a liner two hours before it sailed and was back in her constituency in time to fight. They greeted her with a torchlight procession and 50 men drew her miles in a decorated carriage through streets filled with cheering partisans.

But the Cabinet fell—and she with it.

There is little outside of work in the life of Miss Bondfield. She thinks walking—alone—is the best of all recreations. She likes the theater but doesn't get much chance to go. She prefers biographies as reading material but like many another famous person she gets a kick out of a murder mystery. Her eyes are dark and bright through her pince-nez. Most of her friends say she has "a mind like a man."

John Harlan Amen.

NEW YORK.

THERE are quiet, efficient fellows like John Harlan Amen who accomplish big things with so complete an absence of fanfare that they are likely to fall into the category of prophets without honor in their own country. Only a comparative handful of New Yorkers know that Amen has been sudden death to rackets for years, that he has shipped 216 criminals off to prison in only six prosecutions.

Amen's courtroom manner is dry, almost colorless but so deadly that time after time strongarm men, higher-ups and small fry have battled for position to make the first guilty plea. They know that Amen doesn't come into court unless he's got the goods—and he always seems to have it—but the fellow wins his case with so little hullabaloo that the metropolitan press barely mentions way down the fact that . . . "John Harlen Amen, special assistant to the Attorney-General, prosecuted."

Not that this enforced oblivion bothers portly John Amen for he is first of all a lawyer with an impeccable practice and a special assistant to the Attorney-General only because he likes the excitement of pitting himself against men as shrewd as Louis (Lepke) Buchalter and Jacob (Gurrah) Shapiro in the multi-million dollar fur rackets, of tearing into so closely held a corporation as the artichoke racket, of blasting the monopoly that held the $25,000,000-a-year fish industry in an iron thrall, of gathering the loose threads of a $100,000,000 a year trucking scheme that a Federal grand jury is examining with an eye to the anti-trust statutes.

Tucking a slugger behind bars is his release from the restrictions of corporation law even though he may carry the austere manner into a courtroom. For him it is hard to shake off the classic training of Phillips Exeter (where his father, the late Dr. Harlan Page Amen, was headmaster), of Princeton and Harvard Law School.

New York is fortunate that it has an Amen, as well as a Thomas E. Dewey, for the latter takes care of rackets within the city and the former deals exclusively with crime that is interstate and between the two of them many a malefactor trembles in his penthouse in anticipation of the day when his activities will come under the white hot scrutiny of one or the other.

Of District Attorney Dewey much has been written; of Amen comparatively nothing.

Once upon a time there was a respectable young lawyer with profitable prospects who was married to a girl named Marion Cleveland—she was the daughter of a president of the United States—but he was a little bored with the placid intricacies of private practice. This was in 1930; he was eight years out of law school, and Attorney-General John G. Sargent had heard of the good work he was doing. One day there came an offer to assist in an anti-trust investigation in Hollywood and the young lawyer put his affairs in order and went to the West Coast.

That was the first appearance of John Harlan Amen in public office and as a result of his efforts indictments were returned against 12 motion picture companies including such giants as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists, First National. He based the indictments on charges the companies conspired to force independent exhibitors out of the industry unless they entered into preferential booking contracts. The case never came to trial, however, for Amen announced in court that the companies had entered into a "consent decree" under which they agreed not to conspire against trade.

This was life, said the young attorney, this was different from the dusty law of his everyday routine. So when there came a chance to assist in the inquiry into the poultry racket he accepted eagerly. That investigation was the first of several that finally broke the stranglehold of Arthur and Charles Herbert on the industry, saving consumers some $2,000,000 a year. The power of the brothers Herbert was not completely broken then for Arthur emerged from prison and promptly took up where he left off but it laid the groundwork for the final smashing blow delivered by District Attorney Dewey.

Another feather in his cap and Amen began to bulk larger in deliberations in Washington. About this time—1933—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia placed an embargo on further dealings in artichokes to throttle outrageous racketeering and the government moved to investigate a monopoly in that vegetable.

AMEN—again—quickly found that the crux of the matter was a Sicilian named Joseph Castaldo who ran the Union Pacific Produce Company. He discovered that Castaldo was the successor to Ciro Terranova and that the entire industry was paralyzed by a reign of terror.

The indictment said Castaldo and his henchmen had operated with "threats of physical violence, the detention and damage of vehicles engaged in transporting artichokes, the destruction of artichokes in the course of transportation, the assembling of riotous gatherings, spying on jobbers and peddlers, the employment of gangsters for the purpose of intimidating, threatening, assaulting and kidnaping various commission merchants, jobbers, retailers, pushcart peddlers and their employes."

Eventually Castaldo pleaded guilty and to the astonishment of all concerned he was given a suspended sentence. However the Government promptly tried him on charges that he had not paid sufficient tax on an income of $9,000,000 in three years and he was sent to jail.

Then followed the two most lustrous of Amen's prosecutions—the rabbit fur dressing industry in which 42 individuals, 41 corporations, a labor union and two locals were found guilty, constituting the largest group ever sentenced in Federal Court here on racketeering charges, and the fish industry

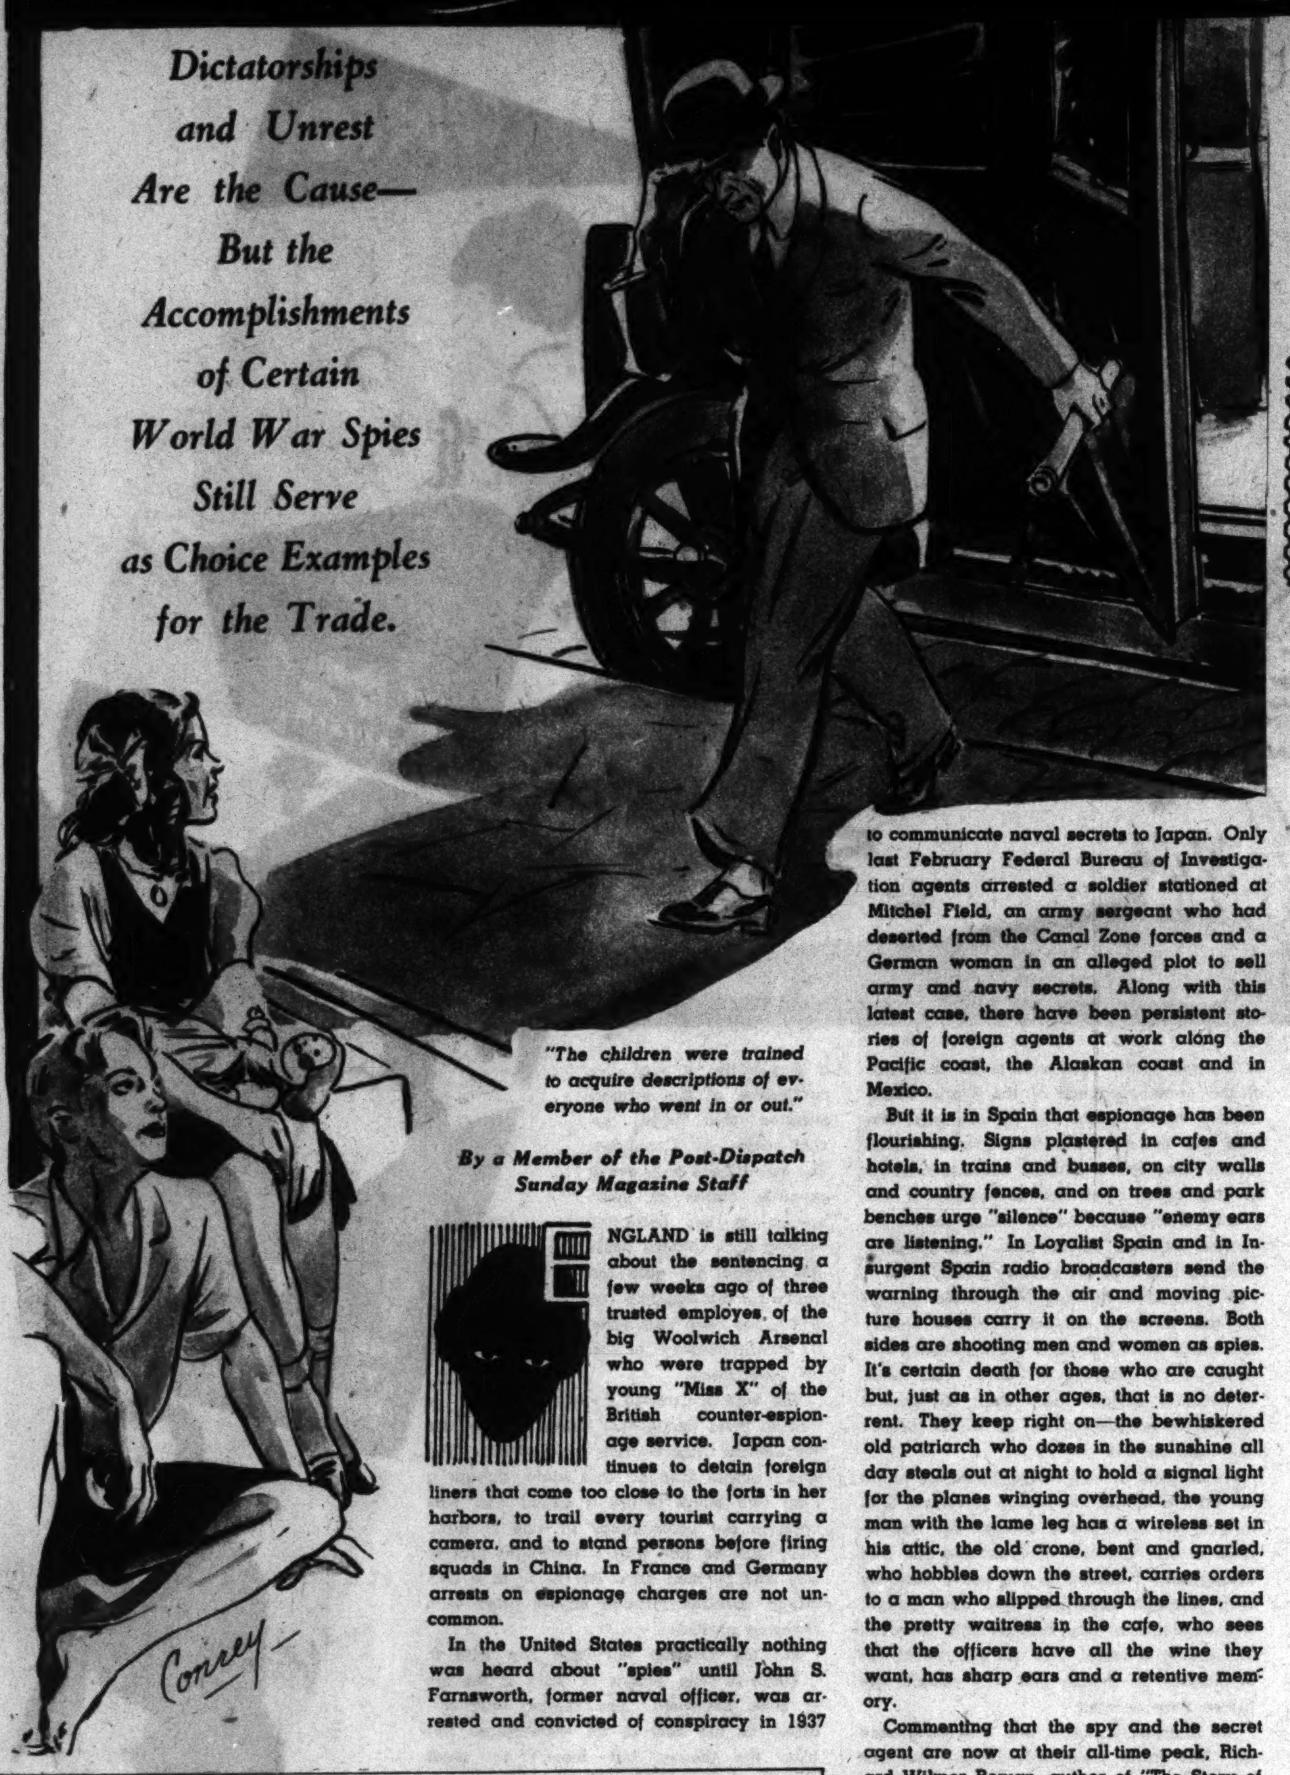
International Espionage HITS an ALL-TIME HIGH

Dictatorships and Unrest Are the Cause—But the Accomplishments of Certain World War Spies Still Serve as Choice Examples for the Trade.



"The children were trained to acquire descriptions of everyone who went in or out."

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

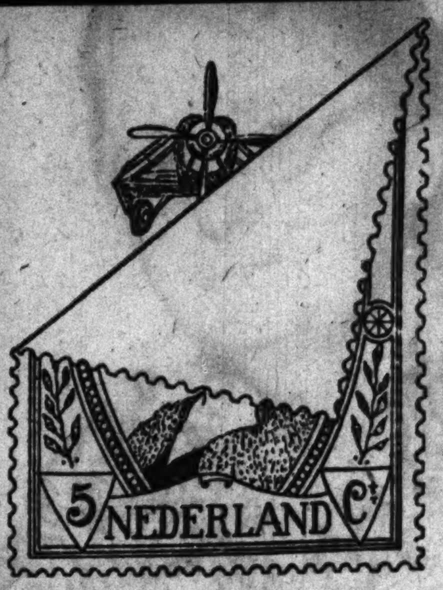
ENGLAND is still talking about the sentencing a few weeks ago of three trusted employes of the big Woolwich Arsenal who were trapped by young "Miss X" of the British counter-espionage service. Japan continues to detain foreign liners that come too close to the forts in her harbors, to trail every tourist carrying a camera, and to stand persons before firing squads in China. In France and Germany arrests on espionage charges are not uncommon.

In the United States practically nothing was heard about "spies" until John S. Farnsworth, former naval officer, was arrested and convicted of conspiracy in 1937 to communicate naval secrets to Japan. Only last February Federal Bureau of Investigation agents arrested a soldier stationed at Mitchel Field, an army sergeant who had deserted from the Canal Zone forces and a German woman in an alleged plot to sell army and navy secrets. Along with this latest case, there have been persistent stories of foreign agents at work along the Pacific coast, the Alaskan coast and in Mexico.

But it is in Spain that espionage has been flourishing. Signs plastered in cafes and hotels, in trains and busses, on city walls and country fences, and on trees and park benches urge "silence" because "enemy ears are listening." In Loyalist Spain and in Insurgent Spain radio broadcasters send the warning through the air and moving picture houses carry it on the screens. Both sides are shooting men and women as spies. It's certain death for those who are caught but, just as in other ages, that is no deterrent. They keep right on—the bewhiskered old patriarch who dozes in the sunshine all day steals out at night to hold a signal light for the planes winging overhead, the young man with the lame leg has a wireless set in his attic, the old crone, bent and gnarled, who hobbles down the street, carries orders to a man who slipped through the lines, and the pretty waitress in the cafe, who sees that the officers have all the wine they want, has sharp ears and a retentive memory.

Commenting that the spy and the secret agent are now at their all-time peak, Richard Wilmer Rowan, author of "The Story of Secret Service," recently published by Doubleday, Doran, adds: "Political police systems—the most offensive type of allegedly 'defensive' secret service—are today the foundation and bulwark of 13 'strong-arm' governments which were not even in existence 20 years ago." In covering "thirty-three centuries of secret service," Rowan begins his book with the Biblical story of Rahab, the harlot of Jericho, who sheltered and concealed the spies of Israel, made a covenant with them and duped their pursuers, thus establishing the "siren-in-secret-service plot pattern" which still is of periodic relief in Hollywood.

Press reports have told of a school for spies in China and Spain. Apparently they are based on the system used by Elizabeth Schragmuller, 26-year-old university student, who ran a school for German spies in captured Antwerp during the World War. At the outbreak of hostilities she bombarded the German general headquarters with so many letters requesting "a job at the front," that they finally sent her to Brussels to censor mail. She had been at this work only a short time before her superiors noted that her censorship was very intelligent and yielded much interesting material. As a result, she was selected for training as a spy. She showed such aptitude that she was made instructor, then head of the school.



A spy's sketch of an airplane improvement drawn in invisible ink beneath the postage stamp of an otherwise innocent letter.

Anyone coming to this school for training arrived in a limousine with the shades lowered. As the car slowed in front of the house, the house door would swing open. When the car stopped, the new arrival was whisked from it and into the house. Never for more than a second or two was any student visible to persons on the street. The Germans knew that the rapidly improvised civilian secret service of the Belgians was something to contend with. What they did not know, though, was that the children who played in front of the house at No. 10 Rue de la Pepiniere had been trained to acquire descriptions of everyone who went in or out.

After a furtive arrival, the probationary student was escorted through dim halls and past closed doors to a comfortable bedroom where he was locked in. Street side windows were shuttered and barred. Ventilation came from a window looking out on a bleak courtyard.

ELIZABETH SCHRAGMULLER knew the customary practice of wearing masks, as insurance against treachery should a potential informer be in the school, was not a sure way of saving them from future recognition. So the novices of Antwerp were closeted in rooms slightly larger than prison cells to live and work alone. A soldier servant knocked on each door at meal times, then unlocked it, set a tray of food on a table, went out, and locked the door. The student spy kept his face hidden even from the servant. Technical instructors entered to start the various courses. Only after a recruit's zeal and capabilities had been solidly established, generally a matter of several weeks, was he allowed a few privileges within the confines of the school. He then was allowed to study all the intriguing equipment that this up-to-date school boasted. In this school were the finest available collections of models and maps, charts and photographs, models of aircraft, warships, artillery and regimental insignia. The library carried technical and scientific books, including handsome volumes of colored plates exhibiting the uniforms and equipment of the combatants.

The student was taken in hand by Miss Schragmuller herself after he had mastered the wealth of visual information. Ciphers, codes and communicative dodges were among the last subjects of a bulging curriculum. They included the study of "invisible" inks, their use and manufacture, and other ingenuities, tricks and resources comprising offensive or defensive strategy of wartime military secret service. After 15 weeks of this, the average candidate had been brought to a boil, according to the Antwerp standards of spy competence. As a sort of graduation baccalaureate, Miss Schragmuller turned upon each student the full blast of her volcanic patriotism. If he were German, she sought to infuse him with her burning desire for victory. If he were a hireling neutral or renegade, she sought to inspire him with a sporting instinct to play the game to the last card for Germany.

But analyzed it becomes warships and the position of mine fields.

As for the precepts that she dinned into the heads of her pupils, there was nothing esoteric about them. They were mainly just common sense rules. To quote her: "Never talk or behave mysteriously except in this one instance: a communicative person with matters of genuine value to impart will often yield them the more readily if he or she has been told something—perhaps wholly fictitious—in a flattering and confiding way, with a slightly mysterious air.

Louise de Bettignies.

"Do not burn a letter or other paper and treat the charred or ashen fragments as unreadable. Microscopic examination can do a great deal with paper ash.

"A tired informer is less cautious or suspicious, more relaxed and expansive, less disposed to lie, or to bargain with you shrewdly—all advantages in the transaction which you reserve to yourself."

But her school was like all others; it had its failures. There was Joseph Marks, a huge lumbering man who turned out to be craven, ingenuous and preposterous. He achieved renown of a sort by being the first to carry out of Belgium the authentic tidings of the "terrible Doctor Elizabeth." Almost as soon as he set foot on English soil, the gross and palpitant Marks was through. All his schooling went overboard at Tilbury dock and he stepped up to the nearest police official and astounded him by confessing everything.

WILD with fear, he said he was no Holland business man. And he was no philatelist despite his stamp album. Eagerly he told how the European stamps stood for battleships, the Africans for cruisers, the North Americans for destroyers, and so on.

He was to mail these from British ports, postmark showing the date and the stamps within showing the ships within the harbor on that certain day. Tears of gratitude ran down his bulging cheeks a few days later when he was sentenced to five years in prison. Now, he said, he would feel safe from that "dreadful woman" in Antwerp.

On the Allies' side, one of the most resourceful spies was Miss Louise de Bettignies, a French governess who escaped from the occupied area of Belgium in 1914 and went back as a secret agent. Equipped with an almost perfectly forged passport, she wandered about among the German armies as a maker and seller of lace. She built up her own organization, including such useful persons as one Paul Bernard, a mapmaker. Bernard performed such impressive feats as writing in a coded shorthand, with a fine-pointed calligraphic pen and the aid of a magnifying glass, a 1600-word spy report on a picture post card underneath the postage stamp. Miss de Bettignies is said to have devised a system of signaling with carillon bells. One of her best pieces of work was transmission to the British of a map in the rim of a pair of spectacles. It showed the location of 14 German heavy batteries and ammunition dumps near Lille. All 14 were destroyed by artillery fire soon after the map reached the British. She enjoyed hairbreadth escapes from capture. She got a thrill out of watching a black Prussian officer stamp the imperial eagle on the photograph attached to her fake identification card. Had the officer run his thumbnail across the unusually glossy surface of the photograph he would have exposed this gloss as a film of transparent paper on which the deft Bernard had written with invisible ink, a 3000-word spy summary covering the latest movements of the German reserves. On another occasion she brazenly offered a bit of sausage to a counter-spy, who refused it, convinced that the papers sought could not be imbedded in the very food this flippant young woman was eating. She often would pretend she was a German aristocrat. Being a good linguist as well as a good actress, she fooled many an officious Prussian underling who sought to question her by discomfiting them with her fine Mecklenburg accent and her crushing, haughty air. But, through the apprehension of some of her minor aids, Mademoiselle de Bettignies finally was captured. Shortly before the Armistice, she died of pneumonia in a German prison.

racket where Joe (Socks) Lanza was king.

These two cases were made possible by a discovery in the Attorney-General's office in Washington that there was a potent weapon against racketeering available in the form of a 1934 statute which defined a racketeer as one who obtains or attempts to obtain money or other valuable considerations by violence or the threat to use force, or under color of official acts or who conspires to do any of these things. This was a sweeping warrant and Amen found that under it he could pyramid sentences as high as 100 years and levy fines up to $100,000.

He set as his first goal Louis (Lepke) Buchalter and Jacob (Gurrah) Shapiro who in the course of a generation of unremitting adherence to the theory that violence is the shortest distance between two points had become known as the "Gorilla Boys." They were a strange pair, immigrants from Russia with the thickness of that Slavic tongue in their speech, an inhuman disregard for what might lay in their path and a combined genius for organization as intuitive as that of the late Dutch Schultz. From petty robbers of peddlers they advanced along a trail of broken heads and a few killings to a point where they each had an annual income of about $2,000,000. When police raided Lepke's penthouse they found 59 expensive suits including a complete fancy yachting costume.

In the course of winding all possible rackets under their own tent Lepke (his Russian nickname) and Gurrah (so called because that was the only way he could pronounce "go away") looked over the fur district. They came, they saw, they formed an association in the rabbit dressing branch of the industry, and strong-arm men following in the wake of their masters began to recruit members. It took very little persuasion to convince furriers that the alternative to membership was harrowing and the association waxed prosperous. Some furriers like Julius Bernfeld refused to join. Bernfeld only lost an eye when some acid was spilled on it. In other cases there were even worse results.

Amen, directing local detectives and agents of the Department of Justice who do what investigation he needs, soon uncovered the whole story. When he presented his facts to the grand jury he obtained an indictment naming 80 individuals and 68 corporations. Lepke and Gurrah both were convicted and each sentenced to two years in prison and fined $10,000. Subsequently the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Buchalter's conviction but Amen had still more charges ready against him.

And just before they were to be brought to trial on another phase of the fur racket they jumped bond totaling $16,000—chicken feed for them—and disappeared. They haven't been found yet and some reports say they are in a foreign country trying to apply the methods that won them fortune here. Amen doesn't like to say "I told you so" but he warned Federal Court that it was ridiculous to set bail under $25,000 each for men accustomed to millions.

WHILE Lepke and Gurrah were extending their sway in the fur field, Joseph (Socks) Lanza was going his undisturbed way in the fish markets of the metropolis . . . if one excepts the affair of Patrolman Howe.

Patrolman Howe was a young fellow who had been sent to the markets as a breaking-in beat. He noticed a rough-looking character threaten a dealer and Patrolman Howe rapped the ruffian's teeth down his throat. The thug told a higher up who hurried down to put the upstart patrolman in his place. He, too, found a fistful of knuckles in his mouth and every racketeer who showed up for a couple of days got the same robust treatment.

That was the only incident that marred about as sweet and lucrative a monopoly as any man ever fostered. Fish dealers had to pay the tribute. And for those who protested? Well, Samuel Moscowitz, a witness, said he was kicked in the face until he became unconscious.

Again Amen set his smooth machine into high and the Federal grand jury returned an indictment naming 82 individuals, corporations and trade associations. Many of those indicted pleaded guilty without the formality of trials and thus escaped with comparatively light sentences. Lanza, a burly, swaggering fellow was sentenced to two years. Recently he came into court on another Amen charge, his assurance gone, fairly whimpering for mercy. He got another six months tagged on to the sentence he is now serving in the Federal penitentiary at Milan, Michigan.

Now Amen is engaged in an even more ambitious effort for this involves a sum estimated at $100,000,000. According to the facts thus far developed the Federal grand jury is inquiring into the levy of $9.52 made on truckers for the services of a man who boards the truck at the city limit and escorts it into town. Some truckers allegedly complained they were forced to hire these "helpers" through threats, violence and intimidation.

And when this is done there probably will be another prosecution and still another for it is the breath of adventure to Amen. So far he has been active in the fresh-water fish and salt-water fish rackets, artichoke, rabbit fur skins, fancy fur skins, fish trucking, vegetable racket, fruit racket and poultry racket. Those 216 convictions will be swelled before all the cases are settled.

Amen and his wife have one child, a son, six years old.

Four week ago, Bill Bunny let it be known that Presto, the King of Magic, told him that he could have anything that he could wish for in one wish, but allowed him only one month in which to make the wish. Now Bill wanted to make a wish that would do everyone in the Hollow the most good, while each of the selfish natives wanted the wish to be made in his or her favor. Grumpy demanded all the honey in the world. He said anyone could learn to like honey. Old Buzz and his host of followers flew down Bill's chimney and out of the open stove door, and stung him terribly when he refused to wish that bears be shrunk to the size of bees so that they could gather their own honey. The pigs and an army of bugs caught him down in the cellar, where he went to hide, and demanded wishes in their favor. Poor Bill. And How the Leaders of the Two Factions—Despite Artistic and Box-Office Grievances—Came Together Around a Sack of Hamburgers.

By ROBERT SELL
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

THE ballet world is at peace again after a series of upheavals that threatened to shatter the most successful troupe in American history into irreconcilable segments. Now that both sides have buried artistic and boxoffice hatchets the mystery of the dignified men with the hamburgers and pickles may be revealed as an intriguing milestone on the path to a great big merger.

A reporter with a nose more for lunch wagon food than news might have had a pleasant scoop had he been in the lobby of the very fashionable St. Regis Hotel early one morning a few weeks ago, for that was when the hamburgers and pickles made their powerful entrance on the ballet scene. Perhaps if it had not been for the skill of a short order cook . . . but this is mere speculation.

At any rate, the crumbled foundations of Imperial Russia must have stirred that day as Prince Serge Obolensky, heading a single file of weary men, marched into the lobby of the St. Regis lugging a bag filled with sandwiches and coffee containers . . . a Prince of the Russia of the Romanoffs, mind you, with hamburgers and pickles and coffee. And behind him, as though the victuals were the irresistible melody of the Pied Piper, came Sol Hurok, the impresario; Colonel Wassili de Basil, a Cossack commander of the days before the Revolution, and a rear guard of attorneys.

Up to a public room in the hotel trudged the strange procession and there they fell upon the food and drink. Frayed tempers were aided by the warmth of the coffee, the pleasant sensation of food in empty stomachs. Minds, closed to argument, opened receptively. At 6 a. m. that morning a sleepy photographer was routed out to photograph the signing of the treaty of ballet peace.

Maybe it all would have happened without the hamburgers, for in the ballet world there also are gentlemen to whom the sound of cash registers is dearer than the music of the spheres and one ballet company costs less to run than two—but the edibles helped. And now there is a single organization, artistically and financially a Colossus astride the dance universe, where there were two smaller groups. It is a story that began 22 years ago.

The late Otto Kahn was a patron of the arts—as well as a powerful banker—and he was one who backed his ideas with ready cash. In 1916 he decided that what the Metropolitan Opera House lacked to give it a Continental flair was a great visiting ballet corps, such as the celebrated troupe of Serge Diaghilev which had as its star the incomparable Vaslav Nijinsky. Giulio Gatti-Casazza, then manager of the Met, was doubtful that the artistic temper of the times would support so grandiose a venture, for the Diaghilev troupe carried scenery enough for several musical comedies and an immense company and a symphony orchestra.

Kahn said he would make up any deficit from his own capacious wallet, and when the Diaghilev tour was over he dug manfully down and produced the $350,000 written on the books of the ballet in red ink. For years thereafter no one had the courage to try another major ballet tour for how, they reasoned, could they hope to succeed when Diaghilev failed with the greatest dancer the world has ever seen in his sphere?

SO IT STOOD until 1933. Now then and today a synonym for successful management and artistic integrity is Sol Hurok. A thickly set man with a strong face and a bald head he once booked a little entertainment for his club, liked the idea and became a booking agent and manager. Eventually such scintillating names as Feodor Chaliapin, Isadora Duncan and Anna Pavlowa came under his management and his unerring judgment of boxoffice and talent came to be a byword in his field.

There was Hurok in New York in 1933 and in Monte Carlo there was De Basil, who had turned to ballet when the Romanoff dynasty was liquidated in a cellar in Ekaterinburg, and who had inherited much of the Diaghilev repertoire as well as the services of the talented choreographer, Leonide Massine. De Basil had in his Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo an organization which was winning artistic plaudits and, strangely enough, making a little money too.

Hurok put a figurative finger into the window, scanned his bank balance and talked business with the tall, unbending Colonel. As an upshot of their conversation the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo made its first American appearance in 1933 and was literally deluged by the adjectives of the critics. Ballet as finished, as beautifully staged, as pictorially perfect as this had not been seen here since Diaghilev's time and the technique had advanced far.

City after city returned the same verdict and when time came for Colonel de Basil to take his artists back over the Atlantic to Covent Garden, London, there was a tidy gross of close to $1,000,000 in the till. The same thing happened the next year—only the gross increased—and the year after that. In 1936 the ballet reached new financial highs and it was not until 1937 that the undertones of discord began to be heard.

Massine was 17 years old when Diaghilev made him his choreographer and he looked up to the impresario as a great artist. He did not rebel at taking artistic dictation from Diaghilev but he did not like the idea of accepting the suggestions of De Basil whom he regarded as primarily a business man. Their dispute developed into a London court action in which Massine sought to remove his ballets—those for which he had plotted the choreography—from the repertoire of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo.

It is indicative of the intense interest in the ballet that no sooner had Massine declared his intention of breaking away than he found backers with enough money to finance anything he wanted. They included Jules Fleischmann, Edsel Ford, William Hale Harkness. He recruited some new artists and took some from the De Basil group and announced his own ballet company.

This left Hurok in a fine quandary. He had to choose one or the other, he could not work for or with both. Finally he threw in his lot with Massine and De Basil began to book his own ballet. He started, also, to look for financial backers and these flocked to him in a steady stream. Prince Obolensky was one of the first to come to his aid and Mrs. Harrison Williams, Mrs. Angier Duke (both wives of millionaires) and a host of others followed him.

Thus the world of art and finance was arrayed on opposite sides in the ballet war and it looked as though both companies might squeeze through with a profit. But Hurok's intuitive sense of values disturbed him. He felt there was room for only one really profitable organization and that if the expenses of one could be used to return the grosses that had been compiled by both competing groups he would have achieved an ideal mating of art and money.

Carefully he implanted the idea of a merger letting the seeds sprout where they might. And although the first soil was barren his suggestions began to bear fruit. Finally he arranged a tentative conference which broke up on an unyielding note. He tried another and still another while De Basil hired the great Michel Fokine as his choreographer and Prince Obolensky revived one of the customs of Imperial Russia by giving a ball for the ballet.

The steady beat of the waves will wear down cliffs and Hurok at last got the conferences down to a matter of clauses. The last of the meetings, the hamburger and pickle conference, started at 3 p. m. and continued well into the next morning. The rest is ballet—and gastronomic—history.

THE contract signed after seven weeks of negotiation provides that Massine's World-Art Ballet and De Basil's Ballet Russe will join under the old name of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo with annual seasons in the United States, London and Monte Carlo. A unique design for ballet operation was set up.

A board of governors will concern itself with matters of general policy, the executive committee will supervise administration affairs and an artistic council will pass upon artistic problems. A body of stockholders of means will provide financing. Fleischmann was made head of the executive committee, Massine chief of the artistic council. Ford and Harkness are among the stockholders. Hurok will book the ballet.

As a result of the merger the artistic and property assets of the ballet company have been increased. There will be a total of 110 productions in its repertoire, a company of 80 dancers and a staff of three orchestra conductors with Efrem Kurtz as musical director. Principal dancers will be Massine, Irina Baronova, Serge Lifar, Tamara Toumanova, Alexandra Danilova, David Lichine, Tatiana Riabouchinska and Yurek Shabelevsky.

Massine and Fokine will be the chief choreographers. The 25 weeks' season in the United States, beginning next October will see the performance of 35 ballets, including a surrealist ballet by Salvador Dali in which the leading character will resemble Harpo Marx, with music by Cole Porter and Tschaikowsky. Another ballet in project will have as music the published and unpublished writings of George Gershwin.

On its tour the ballet will play engagements with the symphony orchestras of Philadelphia, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle and St. Louis. And in each some thousands of disturbed "regulars" have been set at ease by the hamburger truce.

THAT $185,000 ARM

Dizzy Dean, for whom the Chicago Cubs traded the Cardinals three players and $185,000, will be out of the lineup for at least a month. He pitched in four games this season, winning three. THEY'RE STILL TALKING

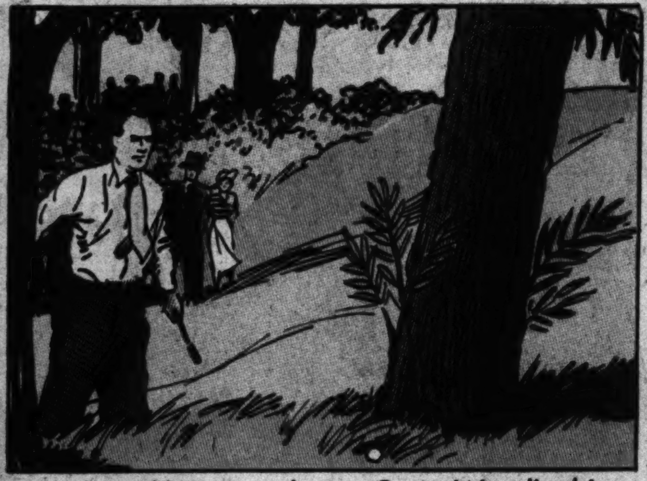
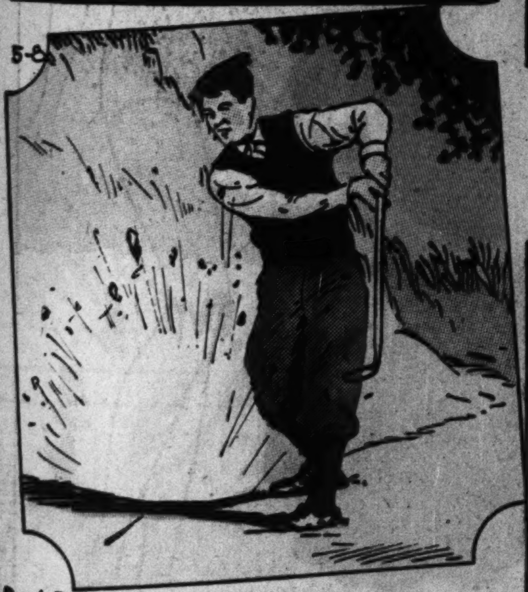
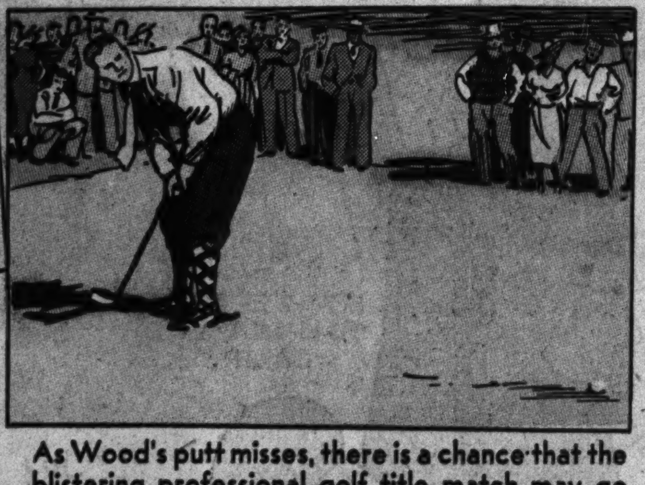
About that thrill-packed 38-hole championship golf match.



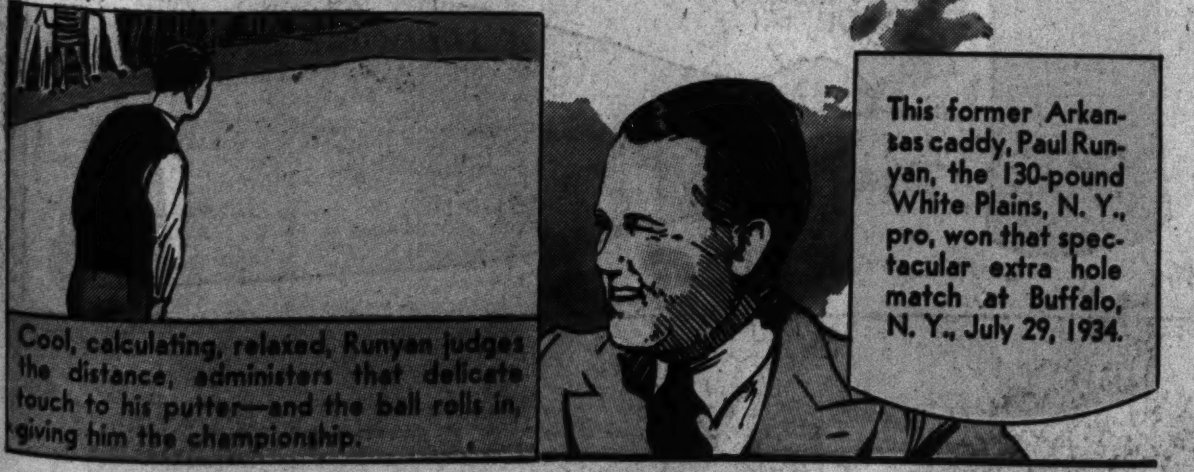
The breathless crowd sees Craig Wood's drive hook and come to rest under a willow tree. His No. 2 is slammed across the fairway to the right, 60 feet from its objective. His chip shot stops 12 feet from the cup.



Paul Runyan's beautiful drive is 240 yards straight down the alley. He lashes out with brassie and the ball hits the top of the trap and rolls back in. Now his explosion shot sends the ball within eight feet of the cup.



As Wood's putt misses, there is a chance that the blistering professional golf title match may go even to the thirty-ninth hole.



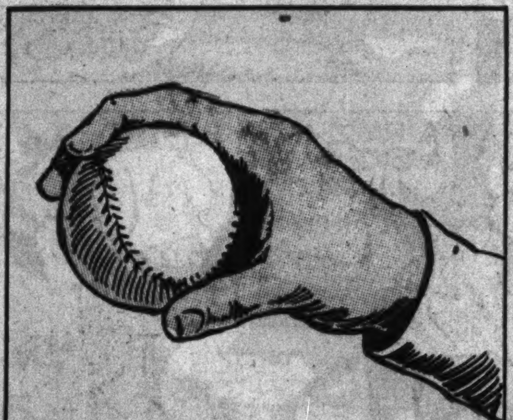
Cool, calculating, relaxed, Runyan judges the distance, administers that delicate touch to his putter—and the ball rolls in, giving him the championship.

This former Arkansas caddy, Paul Runyan, the 130-pound White Plains, N. Y., pro, won that spectacular extra hole match at Buffalo, N. Y., July 29, 1934.

Baseball . . . . by NED BRANT

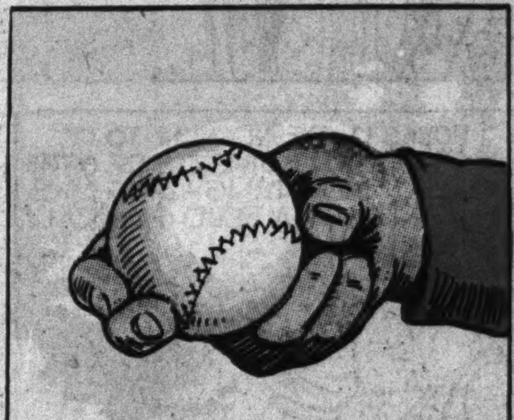
Pitching

The Fast Ball



Hold the first two fingers across one or both of the seams at the point where the seams are closest together. The thumb is held under, though not too far under, the ball, which must leave the ends of the fingers when pitched. The fast ball is generally thrown overhand.

The Curve Ball



The second finger is held along one of the seams, with the thumb underneath as before, though not too far underneath. At the end of a sidearm throw, the wrist and fingers turn with the arm and cross the front of the body with a snap.

Out Drop: Held like the curve ball, but thrown with the arm traveling in a plane at an angle of about 45 degrees.

Straight Drop: Held the same as the curve, too, but thrown overhand, with the snap of the wrist directly downward.

Learn control. It does not mean ability to throw the ball over the plate, but to put it where you want to put it. Don't throw at full speed when learning control. Practice. Practice. Practice.
